Chapter 391 This Time It Was on Purpose

Lucia was wearing a cheongsam open in the sides.

With each step, the hem slightly raised.

The woman stomped it down with her high heels and pressed it to the floor.

Lucia felt something pulling her from behind. She turned around with a frown and then heard a loud ripping noise. Her face darkened when she saw the torn hem.

The owner of the red heels pompously lifted her foot, took two steps back, and quickly apologized, "I'm so sorry. I didn't mean to."

Overwhelmed by anger, Lucia frowned, clenched her teeth, and tried to restrain herself.

The two women gave smug and excited smiles.

Lucia knew very well that they were bullying her on purpose.

Maybe they had been sent by Jeanne or maybe they had been bullying others, but either way, Jeanne was definitely involved.

Lucia asked seriously, "You did it on purpose, didn't you?"

She was furious that the cheongsam Jennifer had spent so much effort to make was ruined by them.

The woman in the black dress said sarcastically, "Ms. Mitchell, how can you say that? It was just an accident!"

"Yes," the woman in the pink dress agreed, "do you want our money? Are you short of money?"

Lucia was furious to the core.

It wasn't until Lucia put on the suit jacket that August looked away and stared coldly at the two women.

He stepped forward and asked seriously as if he was interrogating a prisoner, "What do you want?"

The two women trembled with fear.

One of them lowered her head and said in a trembling voice, "We...We didn't do it on purpose..."

"Is that so?" August snorted.

Apparently, he didn't believe them at all. He had just seen them push Lucia to the floor as he walked past the restroom.

At that moment, he couldn't restrain his anger.

The two women cowered.

"We really didn't mean to..."

"Really?" August asked rhetorically.

Before they could answer, he turned to look at Burton and ordered in a cold voice, "Burton, go to the surveillance room and pull the security tapes!"

When it came to the security tapes, the two women were afraid and couldn't say anything.

The woman in the black dress suddenly thought of something and quickly looked up at August.

"Mr. Adams, it's our fault. We'll apologize to Ms. Mitchell! Please forgive us for Jean's sake. We're Jean's good friends!"

At the mention of Jeanne, August's face darkened.

Chapter 393 Don't Bother Lucia

Immediately, these words hit Lucia like a thunderbolt.

Was August saying this to confess his love to her? Confused, nervous, and unable to figure it out, she took a deep breath and hurriedly reached out her hand to push August, "Stop joking, it's not funny at all!"

However, she could not move the man's body at all which blocked her in front like a wall.

In a panic, she froze as soon as she lost control of her fist and suddenly touched his private part.

A few seconds later, she took fright at August's bulge at that part and her face instantly turned pale.She tried to move back, but behind her, there was no way but a wall.She took a deep breath, looked up at August, and explained in panic, "I ...didn't mean to do it..."

She had been so nervous that she had accidentally touched his private part, having not expected to arouse him! Apparently, August was also aware of the change in his body.

As his desire became stronger, with a frown, he suddenly reached out his hand and grabbed her wrist, saying in a low voice, "You didn't mean to do it? But I think you did."

"No, I didn't!" Hearing this, Lucia whispered with a blush, "I'm not interested in you at all!"

August snorted coldly, enjoying the little woman's panic.

With a hint of a smile, he suddenly took her and went inside.

Startled, Lucia was taken inside before she could react.

Her heart racing, as something suddenly occurred to her, she wrenched herself free from the man's hand.

She then took two steps back and covered her chest with her arms, staring at August in panic, saying warily, "August, you're not going to do something weird to me, are you?"

Hearing this, August chuckled but didn't answer her question.

The birthday banquet in the hall was still lively, and the guests were toasting each other and drinking, making it a peaceful scene.

In the crowd with laughter, Paul, who was always calm and gentle, actually looked back and forth with a slight frown and a somewhat anxious look.

When he saw a familiar figure, as his eyes darkened, he immediately strode over, "Paula."

Paula turned around at the sound of his voice with an affected look, saying in a rare quiet manner, "Paul."

"Have you found Lucia?"

Lucia had gone to Jeanne, but he hadn't wanted to intervene in affairs between women. He had given her two calls in a row just now, but neither had been answered, which had made him even more worried.

"I had found her, but she disappeared again."

With a gloomy face, Paula casually replied, picked up a glass of juice beside her, and found a seat to sit.

Seeing this, Paul frowned even harder, and hurriedly continued to ask, "Paula, what's the matter?"

'Is there really something wrong?' "Nothing, I just met someone I don't want to meet."

Paula finished half a glass of juice in one gulp and continued before Paul could ask again, "Paul, stop asking. I don't want to talk about it."

Hearing this, Paul paused for a moment and said nothing more. He had to focus on looking for Lucia, so he had no time for other things.

Suddenly, a beautiful figure came into sight. He fixed his eyes on it, and to his great joy, it was Lucia!

"Lucia, over here."

Hearing the voice, Lucia raised her eyes, saw Paul and Paula not far away, and stepped toward them with a smile.

"Paula, you're here too?"

Lucia reached out her hand to tap Paula on the shoulder, and suddenly froze the moment she saw her expression. She hurriedly leaned over and asked, "What's the matter?"

Paula's heart had long been messed up by Burton, and now she couldn't cheer up even in front of her best friend.

Janet sitting on the bed was the first one to see the person at the door.

As a big smile instantly lit up her chubby little face, she directly dropped the Rubik's Cube in her hand and waved at the man at the door, "Uncle Handsome!"

Paula aside from playing on her phone heard the sound and hurriedly looked over, and her face instantly darkened when she saw that the person standing at the door was August.

She dropped her phone and directly stepped in front of Janet and Timothy, shielding them behind her as she stared at the man at the door.

Seeing this, as the smile slightly froze on his lips, August stepped forward, saying in a soft tone, "I heard that Janet would be discharged from the hospital, so I'm here to check on her."

Paula said in a stony tone, "Janet is fine, she eats and drinks a lot, and she's lively as usual. Since you've seen her, you should leave."

Janet poked her little head out of her back, looking at August pitifully, but dared to say nothing.

"Don't worry, I won't do anything to her. I just want to check on her."

As August said word for word, he didn't stop his steps, directly detouring to the other side of the bed.

Janet timidly greeted him, "Uncle Handsome ..."

Touched, he suddenly felt sad in his heart somehow.

He would have held the little girl into his arms but for Paula's protection, unable to even touch her. He paused, and with a slight frown, he turned around to give Burton a look as a signal, who stood at the door carrying a doll bear and a gift basket.

At the signal, Burton immediately stepped forward and walked directly toward Paula.

Paula, who had not expected Burton here, froze as nervousness immediately surged through her, making her body inexplicably stiff.

Paula gritted her teeth, forcing herself to stay calm, "What ...are you doing here?"

"No way! It's absolutely out of the question!"

Paula subconsciously shook her head, right after which, she was about to pass him and step away when the man reached out his arm and grabbed her wrist.

With some anxiety on his face, which was always expressionless, Burton frowned and said, "Paula, I have no idea why you left me so suddenly before. We still had feelings for each other at that time, didn't we?"

Even more shocked at his words, Paula looked at the man in front of her with her eyes wide open, "Do you really have no idea why I left you?"

Did he think she was not aware of what he had done behind her back at all? Burton's eyes flashed with unaffected anxiety, "Paula, if I did something wrong, just tell me. I'll never do that again."

As soon as Paula heard his words, a flood of rage surged through her mind. She gritted her teeth with a mixed feeling of irritation and resentment in her heart. She had never expected Burton to say this.

Cheating was absolutely inexcusable! He even put on an innocent and infatuated look, which was even more unacceptable.

Gritting her teeth, she looked at Burton with watery eyes and said, "Let go!"

Burton frowned, feeling more and more heartbroken, "Paula ..."

"I said let go!"

As a flood of rage surged through her, Paula wrenched herself free from Burton's hand, subconsciously raised her hand, and slapped him.

"Pop!"

The sound hit both of them like a thunderbolt.

The atmosphere at the moment suddenly went quiet, and both of them froze at the same time.

Chapter 397 The Result Is Negative

Great fear clutched at her heart, causing Lucia to tremble uncontrollably.

She knew that at this time, the result of the paternity test hadn't come out yet, but it would not take long for the truth to come out.

Before then, she had to find a way to stop him.

At that moment, the man standing there happened to turn around and look over there.

Their eyes met in that instant before they were both stunned.

Feeling nervous, at this moment Lucia could do nothing but freeze, standing in situ.

August frowned slightly, and after a moment of pause, he suddenly stepped straight toward her with his long legs.

Lucia took a deep breath as nervousness surged through her body.

The man's voice was deep and cold, "What are you doing here?"

Lucia gritted her teeth, knowing that she would expose her intention if she weakened at this point.

So, she screwed up her courage and said, "That should be my question."

With a frown and cold eyes on his face, August didn't say anything.

Lucia took a deep breath, holding back the nervousness in her heart, "I heard you went to check on Janet and August. You had an intention, didn't you?"

Not waiting for his answer, Lucia turned around to glance at the sign of the identification department over there, sneered, and continued, "I was about to leave when I learned from the nurse that you came to the identification department. I felt suspicious, so I followed you here, not expecting that the president of Lion Group would do such a despicable thing."

Hearing her excuse, August sneered in an unperturbed manner, spoke word for word, "I just want to know the truth. Since you don't tell me, I can only find it out myself."

Seeing the man's calm and unruffled appearance, as annoyance instantly came crowding into her mind, Lucia gritted her teeth while glaring at the man in front of her, "August, you are shameless!"

Mandy took a deep breath as her eyes flashed with hesitation, but she still nodded and answered, "Yes."

"Well, good job."

Bishop reached out his hand, naturally held the woman's slender waist, and lowered his head, sniffing the faint jasmine scent of her hair as the look in his eyes became gentler.

Mandy took a deep breath but still couldn't help asking, "Mr. Adams, why did you ask me to do this?"

She didn't understand, just like five years ago.

Every time Bishop had asked her to do something related to August and Lucia, she just couldn't have figured it out.

Sometimes it had seemed like a favor, while sometimes it had seemed like a trick, so she still had no idea what role on earth Bishop was playing in the game.

The man suddenly tightened his grip on the woman's waist, and said expressionlessly after a moment, "Miss Lu, you will understand someday in the future."

Again, the same words.

Mandy paused and didn't continue to ask more questions.

In the past five years, she had been staying with Bishop for the company in an ambiguous relationship.

The two seemed to become much closer in relationships of mentoring, friends, as well as lovers.

However, there was always an insuperable thin wall between them as if their perfect relationships would be ruined once any one of them got across the wall, which was the reason why she still called him "Mr.Adams" and he still called her "Miss Lu" as they had done five years ago.

But she had true feelings for him, so whenever he had asked her to do something, she would always have accepted, not able to refuse.

And now, she was willing to do everything he asked her to do as long as it wouldn't hurt her childhood friend Lucia.

Lucia had been frantic with worry these days.

As she said this, she looked up at the woman standing aside glaring at them, and took a deep breath,
"Miss, I just consulted the staff, and they allowed me to bring him here to change his clothes. Please give me five minutes, and we'll leave right after."

Hearing this, the woman stepped forward with her hands on her hips, glaring at Lucia and saying, "Didn't you hear me? Do you think it's appropriate to bring a boy here where only women are allowed?"

The woman obviously intended to kick up a fuss, shouting out loud, causing the people beside them to come over.

At the time, everyone's eyes were fixed on Lucia, Timothy, and Janet.

Gritting her teeth, as distress clutched at her heart, Lucia squatted down, continued to button Timothy's shirt one by one, and then unhurriedly dressed him in his pants.

"How shameless! People here are watching ..."

The woman, seeing this, did not relent and continued cursing.

Rage came crowding into Lucia's mind. She had been in a good mood bringing two little ones out to have fun, having not expected to bump into such a buzz killer when they had just arrived.

Looking at the two pitiful little ones, Lucia took a deep breath holding back her anger, packed the rest of their clothes, and took them out without a word, avoiding giving Timothy and Janet the bad impression of her quarreling with others.

After all, leading by example was always the teaching method she valued the most.

As they walked out of the dressing area, Timothy couldn't help asking, "Mom, why are you not angry about what happened just now?"

Lucia smiled at them and said softly, "There's no need to get angry over people who don't like you, they don't deserve it. Both of you should keep it in mind."

Timothy and Janet nodded their heads though they didn't quite understand, and said nothing else.

On the other side, the crowd in the dressing area had dispersed, and the woman went around to the door of the VIP room, knocked on the door, and pushed it open.

Jeanne was sitting on the sofa in the VIP room, casually eating fruits. She raised her eyes, glanced at the woman who had walked in, and said nothing.

Gritting her teeth, as her face slightly contorted with anger, Jeanne forced herself to stay calm, but she clenched her fists harder and harder while walking away, feeling no pain even if her fingernails stuck into her hands.

'No, I have to do something!' A client's female companion on the other side waved at her, "Ms. Kelly, would you like something to eat? we are going to the horse ranch later."

Jeanne turned around and smiled at her as she put on a gentle and decent face, "No, thanks. The horse ranch is for men, I'll just watch August on the ranch from below."

After some casual polite words, Jeanne excused herself to go to the bathroom, turned to a corner where no one was around, and made a call, "Where are you now? I need your help ..."

Twenty minutes or so later, the clients on the other side are talking happily, asking to go to the horse ranch, and August naturally did not refuse.

He Looked down from the observation deck, and after his eyes lingered for a moment on the woman in the red riding outfit, he stepped out of the lounge area with them.

Meanwhile on the horse ranch.

Lucia focused on watching Timothy and Janet practicing their riding skills, paying no attention to anything else at all.

A uniformed staff member slowly approached the mare picked for Lucia beside her, and after looking around, he suddenly bent down with a quick movement, quickly lifted the mare's hoof, and stuck the nail in his hand into the hoof slit, After which, the man moved back to the other side as if nothing had happened.

Lucia stood watching next to Timothy and Janet, not aware of what was going on over there at all.

At the center of the horse ranch.

Paul had already ridden his horse for two laps, slowly getting into his stride as his body warmed up.

Suddenly, he spurred his horse and sped up, galloping on the outer circle of the horse ranch.

Timothy was attracted by the scene over there and couldn't help but exclaim, "Wow! Dad is so handsome!"
