Chapter 456 Will I let you go easily?

Hearing someone call him, Paul took a puff of a cigarette, put out the cigarette, and turned his head. "Gin, from today onwards, you will stay with Lucia, Timothy, and Janet. No matter what happens, make sure they're safe."

After hearing his instructions, Gin nodded calmly and replied, "Yes, Sir."

The next second, Paul's extremely cold voice echoed again, "Furthermore, I want you to investigate what happened today""

"Yes, sir."

After Gin left, Paul stood in front of the wall window, changing his usual warm demeanor into a deep and unfathomable one as his eyes showed nothing but coldness.

Someone dared to harm the one he cared for the most it was as if they poke a knife in his softest spot. He had endured it over and over again, he won't let it happen again.

Last time, Lucia was kidnapped on his birthday, August said that he would investigate. Paul waited for many days but got no reply.

This time, he could not bear it any longer.

Once he finds out the truth, no matter who the culprit was, he would show no mercy!

On a rocky beach near the sea in the suburbs of Austos, a car parked with its door wide open. Not far from it, Jeanne was bending over and vomiting.

Jeanne couldn't help but vomit as soon as she got out of the car. Her stomach turned upside down while she was running away from the museum earlier.

At this moment, the driver's door was pushed open, and Mark stepped down.

He took out his handkerchief and handed it to Jeanne before he sincerely uttered, "Miss, I've wronged you."

Jeanne heard him. She raised her hand and waved his hand away as she said angrily, "Go away!"

When Paula entered the entrance of the museum, she drove wildly to escape. She wanted
