Chapter 463

Lucia sat in the waiting area at the elevator door. This was the only way to get to Paula's ward, so if Burton came he would definitely pass by here.

Finally, another elevator stopped on this floor and the doors slowly opened. Lucia took a deep breath and looked up and Burton came out from inside.

What surprised her was that he had not come alone. August had followed him down the elevator.

Lucia's heart tightened as she thought of what Paul had told her earlier, and a sense of disgust and resistance struck her, making her frown subconsciously.

Burton came up and asked hesitantly, "Lucia, is Paula

Now, everyone wanted to hear the good news but had to prepare for the worst.

Lucia took a deep breath, took him to the window, and said seriously, "The doctor told me today that Paula's situation is not very optimistic. There's a possibility that she may never wake up. She may become a vegetable. As she spoke, she couldn't help but choke with sobs.

Burton froze in place for a long time, and finally, his eyes twitched back to attention, "A vegetable"

Lucia nodded.

For a moment, the surroundings felt quieter. The three of them did not speak.

Finally, Burton slowly returned to his senses and asked with tearful eyes, "Can that be treated?"

Lucia replied softly, "Paul said that he had found a foreign doctor. There is still a chance for her, but we have to wait for the doctor to arrive."

A glint flashed across Burton's eyes when he heard this. He nodded and said, "No matter what happens, I will always accompany her." His voice was soft but unusually firm.

As he spoke, Burton looked up at her and said, "I want to see her."

After that, he turned around and walked straight toward Paula's ward.
