

Submit 512

Chapter 512 Best Friends For Life

August lowered his eyes. His gaze fell on those dishes. He could not help but frown slightly, then raised his eyes to look at Joshua, and said with some reproach, "You clearly know that Master Monk in the temple has emphasized that no wine and meat is allowed."

Joshua smiled, saying, "How can you recover without eating meat? You usually say that you do not eat meat. So I always try to get Burton to put meat into your porridge or soup invisibly."

When August heard Joshua's words, his pupils widened slightly. He turned to look at Burton, as if to verify the truth of what Joshua said.

Burton hesitated, and then said, "It's true."

When August was seriously injured, he was taken in by the Master Monk of the temple in the mountain. Master Monk emphasized that if they stayed, they had to abide by the rules of the temple. One of the important rules was to not touch alcohol or meat. Therefore, from that day on, August never touched alcohol or meat again.

But later for his health, Joshua and Burton secretly provide him with all kinds of nutrition in his daily meals, trying to make him recover as soon as possible. However, August was not aware of this.

"You guys..." August's face turned pale with anger. "How dare you!"

After living here for more than a month, he knew that he had caused trouble for Master Monk in the temple. Every time he thought about it, he felt thankful while he had nothing to give back. Now he felt even more guilty for breaking the rules.

Joshua saw him get angry, and quickly said, "Calm down, tell me the truth. In fact, Master Monk also knows that I once mentioned to him that you need to recover. In the end, he acquiesced and only told us to keep it a secret in front of the little monks."

August still did not relax. But through Joshua's appearance, it did not he hurriedly called Burton to sit down together in front of the stone bench, and poured a glass of long time since we've gestured to raise the glass. August didn't follow him at first. But then, he seemed to think of something. He also picked up the been living in the darkness. He felt incredibly frustrated and could not find a way to vent his feelings. He lifted his glass, gazed at the clear liquid in the glass, then raised his glass and drank it all. The cold liquid went down his throat to his stomach. Soon, he felt slowly livened up. Seemingly under the influence of liquor, August gradually became more talkative. The three talked a lot, but not about real issues, such as the situation of the Auslos City Lion the unpleasant things. They talked and laughed as if they

was invariably much the wine was about to be finished, August suddenly reached out, picked up the bottle, and filled it up for himself. Then he looked at Joshua, and his face gradually became serious. 'Joshua, not expecting him to suddenly be so serious insistently, 'Even if we are good friends, I still want died miserably. They broke up some time ago, and several years of friendship broke up in an instant. But later, it turned out that a Bishop and Ethan's men in turn. By then, he had broken ribs, fractured legs, and was covered in blood and injured all over. He was almost disabled when he was thrown into the

he was dying, holding on to his breath until the latter part of the night, when a few beams of light shone. When

'August, hold on! Have you forgotten what we once said? We've experienced great difficulties and risked our lives together. Were friends for life?'

he learned that he had been sent to the Evergreen Meditation Yard in the Evergreen Mountain. The Evergreen Meditation Yard was built by the people and several little monks who were adopted into the temple from childhood. So, they moved from the temple into the Evergreen Meditation Yard, isolated from the world. As time passed, they lived in the Evergreen Meditation Yard for nearly three years, living in poverty