Chapter 573 Paula Get Better

A dark expression flashed through Paul's eyes, but when Lucia turned around, Paul covered his emotions. He gently pinched her shoulders and said softly, "You've been working hard these days. Go back to your room and have a rest. I'll ask the maid to prepare something for you and the kids to eat."

Lucia felt warm in her heart. She smiled at him, moved by his tolerance and acceptance. Stepping forward, she gently hugged him and said, "Paul, thank you for your tolerance."

Paul was somewhat startled. He gently stroked her hair and said in a gentle voice, "It's fine as long as you know how good I am."

"I've always known about it," Lucia said, smiling at Paul.

As she spoke, she let go of him. The two of them looked at each other and smiled. Lucia carried her stuff upstairs.

Paul turned back and watched the woman's back, his expression gradually turning cold. He always thought that Lucia had given up on finding the traitor, but he never expected that she would clutch at the idea. In fact, it was he who had revealed her whereabouts to Bishop, and caused the incident after that, including the death of Mr. Makoto in the Evergreen Meditation Yard.

He was the person that Lucia had wanted to capture from the very beginning. But how could he let her know that? If she learned the truth, then all of his efforts and wait would have been in vain. Therefore, he could only choose a scapegoat to end it.

Paul took out his phone and sent a message to Archie, "It's time to use the person I asked you to bribe before."

After sending the message, Paul deleted all relevant information without hesitation. He put away his phone, and suddenly, the three children ran through the hall. They were playing cat-and-mouse games, and the room was full of their screaming and laughing.

"Dad! Save me!" Timothy ran to Paul screaming. Garnett and Janet ran after him, laughing loudly. Paul smiled, bent down and picked Timothy up in one hand, and held him up high, "so you won't get caught." Janet and Timothy began to laugh as well. This scene seemed to be very harmonious. However, Paul was clearly aware that he hates doing that. Janet, Timothy, and Garnett, these people had nothing to do with him. The only reason for him to accept them was to keep Lucia around. As he planned, in order to provide a better situation for the kids, Lucia registered marriage with him. But no matter what a happy family it looked like, Lucia and he were not a real couple. However, after five or six years of tolerance, nowadays, he no longer wanted to simply give, he wanted to be with Lucia like a real couple, wanted to have their own children with her, not like this....
