Chapter 881 You Really Impress Me

Mrs. Robert gracefully picked up the cup and took a sip of the black tea.

"I know Marlana very well. The more she can't get it, the more she wants it. So, in this plan, you don't need to cater to her."

Now Mrs. Robert's attitude towards them changed. She were not as cold as she were at the beginning. She winked at Lucia mischievously and said,

'I'm not a villain, I never mean to break up your family and force your husband to have sex with Marlana.1'

Lucia blushed.

In fact, she didn't think of that. She just felt uncomfortable to let her husband seduce another woman in front of her.

A surprise look burst out on Lucia's face, That's great, Mr. Smith. It's my honor."

A hint of slyness flashed through Terry's eyes. He nodded with a smile, and then looked at August. 'This one must be Mr. Joe, right? Something unpleasant happened before, but I believe that we will get along very well in the future."

He walked up to August and reached out a hand as a gesture of goodwill.

August looked at the hand for a while, and then reached out his right hand to shake hands with him. He said indifferently, 'You are right, Mr. Smith.'

After taking back his hand, a light flashed in Terry's eyes. He smiled friendly and said, "So, to celebrate our cooperation, I want to invite you to visit the Smith family. Are you free tomorrow?1'

Lucia lowered her eyes and didn't say yes immediately.

They had known that the Smith family was accessible only when they held banquets, and the guests were all big-name people.

Lucia raised her head and looked at him in confusion.

August turned on the computer, put on the headphones for Lucia, and then entered a few lines of code in the computer.

Lucia didn't know much about coding, but she could see that it was a code used to contact Timothy.

She quickly took off the headphones and stopped August, "I'm just saying it."

Now they were still on the mission, so they'd better keep in touch with the kids as little as possible.

August knew what she was worried about. He held Lucia's hand and comforted her, "Don't worry. It's safe here. Everything will be fine."

Lucia hesitated for a moment, but she missed the two kids so much that her heart had overcome her reason.

After a while, a window opened and the face of Timothy appeared.

After eliminating the traces left on the computer, August held Lucia in his arms and kissed her on the forehead. He said in a low voice, "Don't think too much.

Lucia tried her best to cheer herself up.

As soon as she raised her head, she saw from the corner of her eyes that Daryl was standing at the door.

Lucia was a little surprised.

Chapter 885 What Were They Hiding

What was more exaggerated was that Terry led them to a car after they went in. He said with a smile, "Well, this place is big. It will take us a while if we walk."

Lucia returned a smile, believing that she would go nuts if she lived here. She sat in the car and looked out of the window. Like the outside, the manor was heavily guarded inside. There was a guard in the interval of dozens of meters. Every one of them looked strong. The monitors were everywhere.

Probably, no introducers would get away from such a place. She watched quietly. About ten minutes later, they arrived at the castle which was in the center of the manor. After getting out of the car, they walked for a few minutes before reaching the parlor.

manor and occasionally asked them business questions. Lucia responded calmly with a smile. August made supplementary comments from time to time.

Chapter 886 Bring in Outsiders

Soon, Terry led them out of the rose garden to an open area. From a distance, Lucia spotted a figure ahead. With a sprinkler in her hand, the person was quietly standing there watering flowers. She raised her head and looked at them. Her face was expressionless. She seemed to have been through a lot and looked like an empty shell. The sunlight landed on her, but the cold air about her could not be dispelled.

"Terry," she called out. "You shouldn't have brought these outsiders in."

Terry went up and smiled, "Tina, they're not outsiders."

Chapter 887 Strange Child

The child had Cardiffian features and dark hair. From a distance, he looked like a Cheaian. The boy was dirty and looked like a beggar in his ragged clothes. Daryl was surprised. How come a beggar was here? How did he slip into such a heavily guarded place?

While she was lost in thoughts, the boy hunched and growled like an animal. His face was young, but his eyes were so fierce as if he was going to tear her into pieces.

"Don't be afraid, I mean you no harm. What's your name? What are you doing here?" she said in a hurry.

August also looked at her. Daryl caught a breath, confirmed that no one was watching, and unfolded the story.

Lucia was stunned. "How come a beggar showed up here? Are you sure you didn't make a mistake?"

Chapter 889 Unpredictable

Terry seemed to be unsuspecting. With an apologetic look, he said, "It was my fault. I should have let the servants guide you. There are clean clothes in the castle. Guys, come with me."

They went back to the parlor. Terry clapped his hands before a bunch of maids pushed over a hanger. A variety of luxury goods were seen. Some clothes were limited editions, each piece costing a million dollars. The Smith family was indeed rich.

"These clothes are all new. Judy, you can select whichever you like. Take it for a gift from me; Terry said generously, smiling at Daryl.

He waved his hand before two maids came up with two boxes. Terry took the boxes and presented them to Lucia and August.

Terry, who saw everything, curled his lips. A flicker of viciousness flashed across his eyes. It seemed that Marlana was really fond of Joe. Such being the case, he could entrust Joe with certain tasks. Marlana was foolish, but her mother was not. From time to time, Tina was trying to trip him. He just needed to leave everything in Joe's care. For the sake of her daughter, Tina would not interfere.

"Marlana, I invited Mr. Joe here to see you. Seize the opportunity. Joe is a good man hard to come by."

He winked at her. Marlana, who never liked Terry, smiled at him, "I will."
