Chapter 951 Let's Go Home

According to Ryan, many people who had ever came to the Smith Manor never went out again.

It was unknown that how many corpses were buried under this land.

After letting out a slight sigh, Lucia stood up to put away the three pages of paper. After that, she cast a glance at the crowd who kept silent, "What I just said is just a little bit of the Smith family's crimes. The real situation is much more scarier than what you've imagined."

Lucia had failed to describe her feelings in words when she read that document.

Even the crimes committed by the villains in the current TV series were much less serious than what the Smith family had done.

Tina said with extreme anger, "Bitch! How can you expect to use a few pieces of paper to convict our Smith family? After this matter is over, I will definitely sue you for slander and send you to prison!"

Lucia glanced back at the silent Smith Manor, feeling more relaxed than ever.

It was finally over, and August and I were able to start our lives again.

She glanced back at August with a slight smile on her face: Let's go, let's go home."

Lucia glanced forward, David's car was parked there, and the two children were waiting for them in the car.

August pursed his lips and stood still, Lucia looked back at him: 'What's wrong?'

August didn't answer, just stared at her with a deep gaze.

Marlena was detained by the police, her messy hair fell on her distorted face, looking at Lucia's face, her red eyes flashed a hint of sternness, but the corners of her mouth were slightly bent upwards, with an extremely weird expression.

Hearing what she said, Lucia clenched her fingers, her eyes full of anxiety: "What do you mean?"

Marlena raised her head and smiled maliciously: "I have destroyed the key, no one can unlock the thing on August's ankle.'

That anklet was something she had spent a lot of effort to buy. She did have the key to unlock the anklet, and she had promised August that as long as he married her with peace of mind, she would unlock the thing on his ankle..

Looking at the innocent faces of the two children, Lucia felt a throbbing pain in her heart, but finally told the two children about the bomb planted on August.

Hearing this, Timothy looked at August silently . The father and son were relatively speechless. Timothy clenched his fists and looked a little ugly.

He didn't expect that his mother would be able to reunite with his father after going through all kinds of hardships and endured many criticisms from Austos City, and their family would finally be able to go back safely.

It turned out to be like this now, and my father might be trapped in the Smith Manor for a lifetime.

Janet couldn't hold back her emotions, she threw herself into August's arms, and raised her head with tears in her eyes: "Dad, is there really no other way?"

August pursed his lips, looking at his daughter's sad expression, he felt very uncomfortable.

Timothy was sullen and serious, and Lucia was holding her breath so as not to disturb him.

Janet squeezed to Timothy's side, her eyes fixed on the screen.

Although she couldn't understand the meaning of the code entered by her brother, and she couldn't help him at all, but at this moment, Janet could only pin all her hopes on him.

Only August stood behind Timothy, his eyes fell on the computer screen, but there was not much emotion on his face.

He is already mentally prepared that if Timothy cannot modify the location range of the bomb, even if he loses this leg, he will choose to return home with Lucia.

August's eyes were deep, and his eyes fell on the face of Lucia who looked a little nervous.

Lucia stared at the dense codes on the computer, feeling a little uneasy.

Lucia didn't feel happy for too long. Lucia felt nervous again when she thought of the time bomb on August's ankle.

By the way, David, do you know what happened to August?"

Lucia told David about the bomb. Upon hearing that, David changed his expression on his face. After squatting down for a while in front of August to check the bomb, he stood up and said to Lucia while frowning his eyebrows and shaking his head, "I haven't seen this type of bomb. It should have been newly developed."

Looking at him, Lucia said with an anxious tone, "So...you don't know what to do with it?"

No, but it needs some time for me to find out how to safely disarm the bomb ' David comforted her.

According to the general procedure, the bomb could be prevented from blowing as long as its inner wires were cut. But that's why it was difficult to disarm the bomb. With a hard shell, the bomb was hard to be broken from outside.

And they couldn't know what was inside. If they dismantled it with the force of a machine, it would add the possibility of blowing it out.

Chapter 957 The person I like is also from Austos City

Lucia hesitated for a moment before she thought what August said was right. That was why she went to a hotel in the city center with August while leaving her worries behind.

After they two entered the hotel lobby. August went to check in and Lucia sat on the sofa in the hall to have a rest.

While observing the surroundings in the hall, she suddenly heard a man complaining, George, it's all your fault that you insisted on arranging me to go to that exhibition...Now you see, I can't go to Austos City."

As the man mentioned Austos City, Lucia couldn't help but cast a glance at him.

Obviously, the man came from Cardiff, which could be recognized from his striking blond hair. Wearing a cool sweater, he seemed to be good look even though he had sunglasses covering his eyes.

Beside him, the man named George didn't know what to do, "Mr. Eli, the inviter this time is the well-known brand Sara Jewelry. And they have sent the invitation letter five times...You have offended many people, so you should at least agree to attend the event to make them less awkward."

The bathroom was silent and there was no response.

August frowned slightly, pushed open the door and walked in.

I saw Lucia soaking in the bathtub, breathing evenly, August stepped forward, touched the already cold water temperature, a look of helplessness appeared in his eyes, he wanted to wake Lucia up, but saw her tired face, and in the end he couldn't bear it.

Lucia must be tired after thinking about him for so long.

August stretched out his arms, carefully carried Lucia out of the bathtub, and put her on the bed.

Lucia woke up, it was completely dark.

She remembered that she seemed to be taking a bath, but fell asleep unconsciously...

"Then you wait for me, soon."

Lucia went into the bathroom, changed her clothes quickly after washing up, and smiled at August:

The exhibition hall was not very far from their hotel. After driving for more than ten minutes, Lucia got out of the car led by August.

soon as she got out of the car, Lucia was shocked by the scene in front of her.

There were countless media, and even the entrance of the exhibition hall was covered with long carpets,

Chapter 960 So Rude

Lucia and August were stopped at the entrance of the exhibition hall which drew some people's attention.

This was not in Austos City, no one could recognize their true identities.

Many people began to whisper looking forward to something.

Even though Lucia was being looked at maliciously, she was poised and calm, "Sir, I think you should figure it out. This is indeed the invitation with which Mr. Ely presented us."

Although Lucia had guessed his uncommon identity by the conversation between Ely and his assistant, she hadn't expected that something like this could happen.

The usher did not see her anymore, nor did he listen to Lucia's explanation. He just wanted them to leave immediately.

August frowned and was about to call someone to sort it out.
