Chapter 10

After that day, Chris did not ask about it for a month! Katty thought that the matter was over.

Now, she felt that the matter was increasingly difficult to deal with.

Katty was put on the spot and did not know how to answer Chris.

Seeing that she was silent, Chris stared at her coldly. "Why? You don't want to go?"

"I really don't want to go!" Katty thought.

However, Katty did not dare to say no under Chris' imposing aura.

Without waiting for her to speak, Chris continued, "With your current ability, you can't become an Executive Assistant yet. There is still room for improvement."

Katty looked up and stared at Chris in shock.

"So Mr. Albert wants to promote me. That's why he told me to learn from Markus?" she thought.

If she became an Executive Assistant, that salary would be four times her current salary! At the thought of her housing loan, Katty felt that this was a great temptation.

However, she quickly lowered her head. "But what about Mr. Hunt?"

"Markus will quit at the end of the year. He will return to the Hunts to inherit his family's business!" Chris remarked.

Katty felt her breath catch in her throat.

Was Markus really from a wealthy family? Previously, she thought that he looked like a rich second-generation, but she did not expect her guess to be correct.

"Why does everyone have family assets to inherit, except me?" she thought unhappily.

At that thought, she was even more determined to work hard.

"All right! I will make sure to learn from him!" Katty blurted out.

When she thought of the first thing that she and Markus had to work on, Katty's expression froze.

She had to learn from Markus to investigate how she had spent the night in Chris' room!

However, the words spoken could not be taken back.

Chris did not know why Katty suddenly had such a greedy expression. When he saw how she readily agreed, he relaxed his brows subconsciously.

"You may leave," he said.

"All right, Mr. Albert." Katty's excitement was gone.

Instead, she was a little listless.

Noticing Katty's mood changes, Chris furrowed his brows again. He stared at her back as she left.

It reached lunchtime.

Katty arranged lunch for Chris before she went for lunch with Tally.

Both of them usually ate in the company's cafeteria, but because of Katty's texts earlier that day, they decided to go to a restaurant they often frequented.

They found a secluded spot before Tally said, "What's going on? What does that text you sent me mean?"

Katty replied, "Mr. Albert is still investigating the woman from that night."

"I already know about that!" said Tally.

"He still wants me to investigate this matter with Markus," added Katty.

Tally was stunned.

"Then you didn't give the game away, right?" Tally asked anxiously.

In Tally's eyes, Katty was like a cowardly child. "Back then, what did Mr. Albert see in her?"

What kind of situation was this? The other day Chris wanted Katty to find that woman. Now he wanted her to look for that woman together with Markus. This was so terrifying!

she wondered.

Chris even transferred Katty from the Trade Department to become his assistant.

Katty sniffed a little. "No, I managed to withstand the stress," she answered.

stress.

When Tally heard that, she became worried that Katty would one day give in due to the

"Markus told me to pass him the angel pendant," said Katty.

Tally held a hand to her forehead. "It can't go on like this."

"Angel pendant? That's the one that you always wear, right?" Tally looked at Katty's bare neck.

Katty replied, "I left it in the room that night."

Only now did Tally realize that Katty had removed her necklace.

When Tally heard that, she was in despair. Previously, Katty did not tell her about this. Now that Tally had heard about it, she felt her scalp tingle with fear.

No wonder Katty said they were goners! They were indeed goners!

Tally took a deep breath before asking, "Mr. Albert didn't see you wearing that pendant

"I don't know!" Katty's mind had gone blank.

As the chairman, it was impossible for Chris to inspect each of his employees closely.

Tally was also at a loss for what to do.

before, right?"

However, their current situation was terrifying.

Everyone wore lesser clothing in summer, so many knew that Katty had an angel pendant.

handle this?" Tally asked.

Tally felt anger begin to boil inside her when she looked at Katty. "Then you just let Markus
