Chapter 9

"Hopefully, that security guard did not betray us... But the fact that Mr. Hunt would ask these means that he doesn't know about it yet," thought Katty.

Katty stared at Markus uncertainly. However, Markus' eyes were deep and unfathomable, like Chris'.

Katty was unsure why he would ask her these questions.

Markus tapped his cigarette ash on the floor. "Mr. Albert gave you the pendant that was found in this room? Where is it?" he asked.

The pendant?

Granny had left that to her. Previously, Katty always wore it around her neck.

After that night, she did not wear it anymore but kept it in a box where she kept all her important items.

Katty was so nervous that her palms were sweating. "I thought the previous guests left it behind, and it wasn't anything important. I have no idea where I put it," she answered.

Katty did not dare lie and say she had handed it to the hotel's front desk receptionist.

Since Chris was trying to investigate the woman from that night, if Katty said it was at the front desk receptionist, Markus would definitely call them to ask.

When Markus heard that, he unexpectedly said, "Then please look for it, Miss Minj. That item is very important now."

Katty was breathing heavily, and she did not dare say she was unsure where the pendant was.

Maybe it was her mind playing tricks on her, but Katty felt that Markus was so stern today that he could be compared with Chris.

Markus exuded such an oppressive aura that Katty could only force herself to nod.

In the end, Katty walked out of Markus' office in a daze.

After she returned to her work desk, she forced herself to calm down. When Katty thought of how solemn Markus was, she just could not get herself to calm down.

From Markus' attitude, Katty could tell that Chris was determined to find out who the woman that night was!

"What should I do?" thought Katty. The thought kept repeating itself several times.

She quickly sent a text to Tally. [Tally, I think we're goners!]

Tally replied quickly, [You're the one who's a goner. Don't try to drag me into this.]

From that text, Katty could almost see the expression Tally must be making.

Not waiting for Katty to reply to her text, Tally sent another text. [You only need to remember one thing. What happened that night has got nothing to do with you.]

Following that, Tally sent another text. [Remember to delete all our text conversations.]

Tally kept giving her reminders and even wanted Katty to destroy all evidence!

Katty was rendered speechless.

After seeing Tally's texts, she felt even more worried.

Katty's heart throbbed with fear. No matter how hard she tried to get into work mode, she could not.

Chris came out of his office. Seeing his dark expression, Katty immediately put on a serious expression.

She stood up respectfully. "Mr. Albert, I've already placed the report on your desk."

Chris coldly stared at her without saying anything.

Katty only dared to make eye contact for a second or two before quickly lowering her head.

When Chris saw that Katty was still so frightened of him, his face darkened even more. In the end, he did not say anything and entered his office again.

Very soon, the finance manager entered Chris' office too. Following that, Katty heard the sound of scolding coming from the room.

Katty looked at the closed door with fear. She felt slightly sorry for the finance manager but pitied herself even more.

When the finance manager came out dejectedly, Katty quickly withdrew her gaze and pretended to be busy.

The finance manager approached her and said, "Miss Minj, Mr. Albert wants you to go in."

"Oh, okay!" said Katty.

Hearing that Chris was looking for her, fear coursed through Katty. However, she still quickly got up and entered the office.

There was an oppressive atmosphere inside the office.

Katty clenched her fists and walked toward Chris. "Mr. Albert, you were looking for me?"

"Did Markus find you?" asked Chris.

Instantly, Katty felt a little short of breath.

She clenched her fists even harder.

Thinking of how she had tricked him the other day, Katty felt that she was doomed.

That was because she knew that Chris would not let the matter go so easily.

She felt chills up and down her spine and replied, "Yes. Mr. Hunt already looked for me earlier."

"So following this, you will investigate what happened that night together with him. Learn well from him," instructed Chris.

When Katty heard that, she froze. Was he asking her to learn from Markus or trying to get her to confess everything?

She gingerly looked up at Chris and met his deep eyes.

"Most likely, he's not trying to get a confession out of me. After all, Mr. Albert doesn't have the time to joke around with me," Katty thought.
