

Chapter 1442 Finally Have A Clue

Because of the familiar look in Janet's eyes, Jeremy refrained from subjecting her to any further experiments

He had suffered through his sister's suicide, and that guilt and self-blame had engulfed him over the years like a net that choked him, forcing him to live in pain almost every second of his existence

Janet's existence was like a dawn, allowing him to finally feel a ray of light

Although Jeremy was well aware that Janet wasn't his sister and he was only deceiving himself by thinking so, he still involuntarily began treating her well. Just glancing at her from afar every day was enough to bring him immense joy

Janet, who had completely lost her memory, gradually began to consider Jeremy as her own brother after the drug tests were stopped, and she became considerably dependent on him. Every day, she would timidly pull on his sleeve and ask him all sorts of questions

"Jeremy, what is this medicine for?"

"Is it true that this medicine can stimulate a person's potential in a short time?"

"What kind of medicine are you going to develop today?"

Jeremy was indeed bothered by her questions, but whenever he was about to lose his cool, he would look into her eyes, and his anger would fade away. He would dotingly rub her head and say helplessly, "Why do you have so many questions?" #

Janet would playfully stick out her tongue, her reaction making him momentarily stunned

At that moment, he felt like he was catching a glimpse of his sister Madeline once again

Janet was soon moved from the laboratory to a spacious and well-lit room

The room had been meticulously decorated according to Madeline's preferences as if Janet were her

Once, a malicious individual attempted to harm Janet after being cto the laboratory, subjecting the assailant to a torturous ordeal. 2

The news that Janet was Jeremy's sister quickly spread. No one dared to provoke her anymore, afraid of becoming Jeremy's test subject

Within a few days, Jeremy announced that Janet was indeed his sister, who had lived in their hometown until now. He also warned that no one was allowed to hurt her, for they would be seen as working against him

eee

In the courtyard of Darkmoon, Harrell informed Brandon about Jeremy's newfound little sister

"Jeremy's sister?" Brandon's expression turned grim, and a strange sensation clutched his heart

Harrell nodded, thinking that it was strange. "I didn't know he had a sister."

Brandon's eyes turned dark a moment before a hint of coldness flashed in them. "He does have a sister."

Stunned and puzzled, Harrell questioned, "Even if he does, it is too odd that he brought her here at this time. Isn't he afraid that all this will affect her?"

Brandon's slender fingers rested on the ceramic cup lid as he gently tapped it with his fingertips. "But his sister committed suicide when he was in high school. That's also the reason why he and I have been at odds. He thinks I was the reason his sister killed herself," Brandon said slowly

Although Harrell knew Jeremy hated Brandon, he didn't know the you killed his sister, so why is he harboring hatred toward you?

Brandon lowered his head, staring at the swirling darkness within his coffee cup. "The past is not important now. What's important is where this sister of his came from. I suspect that she shares a connection with Janet."

Harrell also felt that the sudden appearance of Jeremy's "sister" was bizarre and asked, "So what's your plan?"

Brandon met Harrell's eyes and said, "I want to go to Jeremy's lair to find out the truth."

Garrett immediately objected, "No, that's suicide!"

Harrell agreed with him, so he said, "Garrett is right. What if Jeremy is doing all this just to lure you into his trap?"

However, Laney glared at Garrett and Harrell before nodding to Brandon and saying, "I'm on your side.

Janet has been missing for so long, and we don't know if Jeremy is torturing her in all kinds of crazy ways.

We must find her at once! We've finally got a clue, so we need to follow the lead, even if it is dangerous! What if that sister is really Janet?"

Seeing how determined Brandon was, Harrell was left with no choice but to give him Jeremy's current address

Once Brandon got the address, he instantly led his team straight toward Jeremy's lair