

Chapter 2008 Feel A Fetal Movement

Since Janet was pregnant and couldn't indulge in alcohol, the girls seated themselves beside her and considerately ordered a non-alcoholic beverage for her.

As Janet had been feeling a bit down on the way there, the vibrant music and lively ambiance of the party lifted her spirits. Now, a subtle smile graced the corners of her eyes and eyebrows, reflecting the infectious joy of the moment.

Janet gazed at Elizabeth with a soft, caring expression. "Don't push yourself too hard like before. Remember to find a balance between work and rest. I'll gladly help take care of Sophia so you can focus without worries."

Tears welled up in Elizabeth's eyes, overcome with gratitude and emotion. She wrapped her arms around Janet in a heartfelt embrace.

"When I'm there, I'll send you special products. The study abroad location has a natural pasture with the best milk powder. I'll cover all the expenses for the milk powder for your little one," Elizabeth promised, her voice filled with sincerity and affection.

Laney's eyes sparkled with excitement upon hearing Elizabeth's promise. She joked, "Is that so? Then I might just have to start planning for a second baby!"

Elizabeth released Janet from their embrace and turned to face Laney, giving her a playful glare. "Well, you should get pregnant first."

Laney was momentarily speechless at Elizabeth's playful jab. She glanced at Garrett before deciding to remain silent.

Elizabeth had already enjoyed two glasses of wine by this point. Her cheeks were slightly flushed, and she was starting to feel the effects of the alcohol, feeling a bit tipsy.

With her cheeks flushed from the wine, Elizabeth poured a glass for Laney, suggesting, "Why not take advantage of this perfect opportunity tonight and plan for a second child?"

Laney blushed deeply and scolded, "What are you talking about? You're just talking nonsense!"

Seeing Elizabeth pour wine for Laney, Garrett quickly approached and took the glass from her, raising it generously in a toast.

"My wife can't handle her drinks. Let me take care of this."

With a smile, he raised the glass and drank it down in one smooth gulp.

Observing Garrett's ease in finishing his drink, Elizabeth stood up somewhat unsteadily and refilled her glass with wine.

"Come on, you two should plan for a second child."

Frank quickly noticed Elizabeth's tipsy state and hurried to hold her, taking the wine glass from her hand.

But Elizabeth refused to let go of the wine. Pointing at Garrett, she commanded, "You! Drink up!"

Garrett, known for his ability to handle alcohol well, couldn't resist the infectious excitement from Elizabeth. With a smile, he indulged in several glasses of wine in a row, joining in the lively atmosphere of the evening.

With the looming farewell adding a sense of urgency, they cherished this rare gathering and drank together until midnight before bidding their farewells.

As the night drew to a close, Elizabeth succumbed to the effects of the alcohol, becoming unconscious. Frank carried her to the car.

Garrett walked with steady steps, showing no signs of being drunk despite the lively evening.

Brandon opted to limit his alcohol intake for the evening, only having two glasses of the farewell wine to ensure Janet's comfort during their journey back.

On their journey back, Janet rolled down the car window. The evening breeze caressed her cheeks and played with her long hair, carrying with it the sweet fragrance of gardenia that filled the air.

As the dim street lamps flickered by, Janet couldn't help but feel a tinge of sadness creeping in.

"How time flies! We were once full of youthful energy futures."

Brandon reached out, tenderly stroking Janet's slightly bulging belly. "Each of us has our own journey, and sometimes separation paves the way for a more meaningful reunion."

With a deep sigh, Janet nodded in understanding, internalizing Brandon's words. She couldn't help but think of the saying that all good things must come to an end.

With a sudden realization, Janet was taken aback, sitting up straight in surprise.

Brandon's heart raced with concern as he asked nervously, "What's the matter?"

Janet's eyes widened in shock as she looked down at her belly, then back up at Brandon, her expression a mix of astonishment and surprise.

"I...I felt the baby move!"
