

Chapter 2036 Be My Bodyguard

Sonia's response was delayed not due to unwillingness, but rather because she was somewhat taken aback.

The ease with which she accomplished the task assigned by Alexandra took her by surprise.

"Do you trust me that much?" Sonia gazed at Janet intently, her eyes betraying hesitation and disbelief. "Even though I saved you, aren't you worried that I might have ulterior motives?"

Janet looked at Sonia with puzzlement. Though she couldn't grasp why Sonia asked, she explained, "Why would you think that? You've saved me twice. Trusting you feels natural. Besides, our encounters have felt destined to me."

Sonia lapsed into silence.

At this moment, she experienced a blend of intricate emotions.

She struggled to express her emotions, and deep down, she felt an urge to decline.

Yet, this was her task, Alexandra's directive.

"What's troubling you? Do you have any concerns?" Janet inquired cautiously.

Sonia shook her head and looked away. "Let me think about it."

"Alright, there's no rush. Focus on recovering from your injury first," Janet said, feeling hopeful and joyful about the situation.

She retrieved her phone and saved Sonia's number.

"Alright, please contact me when the time is right. It's getting late now, so I should head back. Take care and get well soon."

After exchanging numbers with Sonia, Janet bid her farewell.

Returning to the banquet, she spotted Mrs. Lawrence mingling with others in the crowd.

As Janet approached, Mrs. Lawrence turned to the wealthy lady beside her and said, "Please go ahead. I'll join you shortly."

Turning to Janet, she inquired, "How was everything? Did you enjoy the food in the kitchen?"

Janet smiled softly and responded, "The cakes were delightful, but I must leave now, Mrs. Lawrence. I apologize."

"So soon? Would you like me to arrange a car to take you home?" Mrs. Lawrence asked, showing concern.

"No need. There's still much to tend to at the banquet. You carry on; I'll head home alone."

"Alright. Take care on your way back. Until next time."

As Janet departed and passed the lounge, Sonia glimpsed her figure through the window, feeling conflicted for a moment.

She lowered her head, gazing at Janet's contact details on her phone, recalling Alexandra's instructions before she departed. Suddenly, inner turmoil and hesitation gripped her.

Alexandra had shown kindness to her.

Without Alexandra, there would be no Sonia today.

She didn't want Janet to suffer, but even more so, she couldn't bear to disappoint Alexandra.

She then resolved to report today's events truthfully to Alexandra.

Alexandra responded promptly, "Good job. Agree to be her bodyguard. Wait for the opportune moment to take action!"

Sonia held her phone tightly, staring at Alexandra's determined instruction, torn with conflicting emotions and a sense of powerlessness.

In the end, she simply replied, "Okay."
