

Chapter 2064 Finding Her Biological Parents

The sun shone brightly the following day.

Seizing the initiative, Sonia decided to visit Janet.

The maid had grown familiar with Sonia due to her frequent visits lately.

"Mrs. Larson is working on designs upstairs. Would you like me to show you up?" the maid asked with a smile.

"It's okay. I'll go upstairs myself," Sonia responded.

With a nod, the maid turned back to her tasks.

Reaching the upper floor, Sonia confidently navigated through several rooms, making her way to the door at the end of the hallway.

She knocked and soon heard Janet's voice inviting her in. "Please, come in."

When Sonia heard this, she pushed open the door.

Upon entering, she found Janet deeply focused on a design draft.

For a moment, Sonia hesitated, the images from her dream the previous night flashing through her mind.

"You are here, Sonia," Janet said, looking up with a welcoming smile.

Snapped back to reality, Sonia blurted out, "Mrs. Larson, do you have plans to go out today?"

Janet had been homebound lately.

"No. Brandon and I decided it's best I stay indoors until the baby is born," Janet explained. "There's nothing urgent at the studio that requires my presence. If you need to handle something, feel free to go ahead."

Staying at home was much safer and more relaxing, eliminating the need for Sonia to be overly protective.

Sonia misinterpreted Janet's words as an indication of needing protection.

She pursed her lips and declared her commitment.

"Since I'm your bodyguard, it's my duty to ensure your safety. Besides, I wouldn't feel right slacking off while I'm still on the payroll. Mrs. Larson, please allow me to stay and keep you company."

Janet noticed Sonia's unease, possibly fearing for her job. She set aside her design draft with a smile and gestured for Sonia to sit beside her.

"Of course, I want you to stay. I feel very close to you and have always seen you as a good friend," Janet expressed earnestly.

Upon hearing this, Sonia nervously clutched the hem of her dress, avoiding Janet's eyes.

If Janet had merely seen her as a subordinate, Sonia wouldn't have been affected.

However, Janet's use of the word "friend" held significant weight for Sonia.

Despite Janet's kindness, Sonia had been plotting to sow discord between Janet and her husband and had even contemplated harming Janet's unborn child.

This realization made Sonia shudder at her own cruelty.

Unable to reveal her true thoughts, she murmured, "Thank you."

"By the way, didn't you mention you were raised in an orphanage?" Janet inquired suddenly.

Taken aback by the sudden shift in the conversation, Sonia confirmed, "Yes."

"Have you ever considered looking for your biological parents? I might be confined here, but I could still leverage my family's influence to assist you," Janet offered.

These words made Sonia's heart skip, especially as memories of her dream resurfaced.

After a moment's hesitation, Sonia replied politely, "It's been so long. Maybe they aren't looking for me anymore. I don't want to impose."

"It's no trouble at all. I..."

Janet began to reassure Sonia but was cut off by a disturbance at the door.

Sonia turned towards the sound, startled to see Johanna entering.
