

Chapter 2078 Sonia And Mona

When Brandon finished asking his question, Mona, exhausted, leaned back against the bed and slowly closed her eyes.

He wanted to ask for more details, but upon seeing Mona's worn-out expression, he decided to let it go.

"Thank you, Mona. Have a good rest. I'll be on my way now," Brandon said to her.

Mona didn't respond, merely waving her hand with her back facing him.

Just as Brandon was about to close the door, a thought suddenly occurred to him, and he quietly made his way to Mona's vanity table.

There, he found a wooden comb with several strands of hair tangled in it.

He took one strand and clasped it firmly in his palm before leaving.

Outside the sanatorium, Brandon's men arrived.

Brandon handed the strand of Mona's hair to one of them and instructed, "Compare this with Sonia's hair right away and let me have the results as soon as possible."

"Understood, Mr. Larson."

Without delay, the man took it and rushed to the hospital for the test.

After his departure, Brandon turned around and got into another car, heading off in a different direction.

During his conversation with Mona, he had a strong gut feeling.

He was convinced there were still many hidden truths behind the case. If thoroughly investigated, perhaps they could uncover whoever was still secretly plotting against them.

As a result, he decided to personally investigate the kidnapping case from years ago.

Through his diligent effort and that of his men, Brandon soon uncovered the truth.

It turned out that Mona's husband had planned on bribing kidnapers to stage an abduction to generate publicity, and had never intended any real harm towards their daughter.

The reason their daughter ended up actually being killed was because the original kidnapers had been replaced halfway through the operation.

Mona's husband had come up with this deceitful scheme because someone had manipulated and influenced him to do so. Since he had been solely focused on advancing his career, he fell victim to this manipulation.

Brandon's expression turned grim.

He had initially believed it to be a mere publicity stunt, and hadn't anticipated the depth of complexity behind it.

It appeared he hadn't been too far from the truth.

With this in mind, Brandon continued to use his influence to conduct a thorough investigation. After extensive effort and scrutiny, they finally identified the manipulator—someone from the Barton family.

After Mona lost her daughter and withdrew from the entertainment industry, many of her assets were taken over by people connected to the Barton family.

Upon hearing his subordinate's report, Brandon fell silent for a moment.

"The Barton family," he muttered quietly, a sudden realization dawning on him.

The last time he had suspicions about Sonia's identity and tasked his men to investigate her, they had also discovered connections to the Barton family.

Brandon pondered even deeper.

Did Sonia have ties to the Barton family?

Just then, his thoughts were interrupted by the ringing of his phone.

Quickly composing himself, Brandon checked the caller ID and answered.

On the other end of the line, Brandon's subordinate spoke excitedly. "Mr. Larson, the results of the DNA test you requested are ready!"

"What was the outcome?" Brandon inquired eagerly.

"Just as you suspected," the subordinate replied respectfully before forwarding the report to Brandon.

Brandon ended the call and reviewed the report. As soon as he saw the findings, he was certain that the Barton family was to blame.
