

Chapter 2097 Janet Was Found To Be Poisoned

Frank typically presented himself as a bit of a scoundrel, but when it came to crucial issues, his clarity never wavered.

"Poisoned?" His face grew solemn. "Do you know who's trying to harm Janet?"

"It's Alexandra's doing. He wants Janet to lose the baby."

Brandon revealed the culprit with clenched teeth. His fists were tight, veins bulging as if ready to burst, and his knuckles cracked intermittently, betraying his intense anger.

Frank's eyes widened in disbelief at the revelation.

Regaining his composure, he responded, "Alright, I'll take a closer look at Janet's medical report later."

Brandon gave a nod of acknowledgment.

"However, Brandon, you can't just keep guarding against someone like Alexandra, who's skilled in medicine. It's too much for Janet and the baby." Frank expressed his concern.

Brandon agreed. "I understand."

Even without Frank's warning, he had already considered this.

Alexandra had crossed a line this time, and Brandon was not about to let it slide.

Relieved by Brandon's determination, Frank added, "Alright, if there's anything I can do to help, just say the word."

Their gazes met in silent understanding.

The corridor was thick with a dangerous and tense atmosphere, as if the air itself had frozen.

Moments after Brandon and Frank's conversation, the door to the examination room swung open.

A nurse came out, wheeling Janet out towards the VIP ward reserved just for her.

Upon seeing Janet, Brandon quickly approached and took her hand in his, his grip firm yet gentle.

"How are you feeling?" he asked, his eyes brimming with tenderness and concern, scanning her face for any sign of discomfort.

Janet, sensing the depth of Brandon's feelings, felt a mix of happiness and a twinge of sorrow for him.

Her pregnancy had been fraught with challenges, and Brandon had borne much of her stress.

With a thoughtful frown, Janet pursed her lips and patted Brandon's hand in a comforting gesture.

"I'm actually fine," she reassured him with a smile. "The dizziness passed as soon as I arrived at the hospital. I only came to get checked to ease your mind."

Despite her words, Brandon's worry did not lessen.

He understood all too well that Janet was trying to soothe his fears.

The more she downplayed her discomfort, the heavier the guilt weighed on him.

After a pause, Brandon broke the silence. "I'm sorry, Janet."

"What? Why would you say that?" Janet was clearly taken aback.

Brandon had always excelled in every way, and Janet could never pinpoint a fault in him. So, his sudden apology seemed out of place.

Brandon explained, "Your pregnancy is tough and comes with risks, and I can't ensure your safety completely. I feel like I'm failing you."

Janet now understood his concerns. With a reassuring, slightly playful smile, she responded, "Don't think that way, please. To me, you're already the perfect husband, and honestly, I feel fine."

They chatted for a bit longer until a knock interrupted them.

"Come in please," Brandon called out.

Frank entered, his expression grave as he held the medical report.

"What does Janet's report say?" Brandon asked anxiously.

Frank answered, "The tests indicate mild poisoning. We need to find the source quickly, or it could lead to severe problems."
