

Chapter 2106 Tricking Myrna

The next day, when Lexi rushed to Janet's villa, she found the butler commanding the servants to work.

He greeted her with surprising civility and was much ruder the last time around.

"Here to see Mrs. Larson?" he asked.

"Yes," Lexi confirmed, casting a glance towards Janet's room. "Is she up yet? I wanted to greet her before work."

"No, Mrs. Larson is still sleeping. I'll let her know you stopped by." The butler's response was a relief.

Lexi hid her satisfaction. An encounter with Janet after yesterday's embarrassing display would've been uncomfortable. Truthfully, she wasn't sure what to say if they came face-to-face.

"Thank you," Lexi said to the butler. "I'll visit again when she's up to it."

"Of course. Allow me to show you out." The butler gestured politely.

Lexi didn't object, following him to the elevator.

The doors chimed open, and they came out.

Seeing Brandon in the living room, Lexi was startled. She straightened her back and greeted him. "Mr. Larson!"

Brandon lowered the paper, acknowledging her with a curt nod. "Here to see Janet?"

"Yes, but the butler said she's still sleeping. I wouldn't want to wake her. I'll be on my way," Lexi explained nervously.

The memory of Brandon's fury was fresh in her mind.

He noticed her apprehension but remained silent, simply waving a dismissive hand.

Lexi scurried towards the exit, only to be stopped by Brandon's voice. "Wait."

A tremor ran through her. Turning back, she addressed him, voice tight. "Mr. Larson, is there something else?"

Was she framed by someone again? Was he going to blame her?

Lexi was extremely scared.

Brandon, however, had a different motive.

"Keep yesterday's events a secret. If the woman who gave you the amulet returns, tell her Janet nearly had a miscarriage and is now in the hospital. Understood?"

Lexi nodded. "Yes sir."

Though unsure of Brandon's motives, she knew it was best to comply.

His gaze returned to the newspaper. "If that woman is up to no good, or someone else approached you with suspicious questions, inform me immediately."

"Yes sir." Lexi vigorously nodded her head, her hand raised in loyalty. "You have my word, Mr. Larson! I won't put Janet at risk again. I've learned my lesson."

"I hope so," Brandon's responded shortly.

Checking her watch discreetly, Lexi asked cautiously, "Is there anything else I can help you with, Mr. Larson? If not, I'll leave now."

She was getting late.

"No." Brandon dismissed her with a wave of his hand.

That evening, upon returning home from work, Lexi found Myrna pacing outside her door.

"Finished for the day, Lexi?" Myrna greeted her in a friendly tone. However, Lexi's gloomy demeanor wasn't lost on Myrna. "Is everything alright? You seem troubled."

Lexi feigned a sigh and bit her lip. "It's my boss. She's been hospitalized due to a threatened miscarriage."

Myrna hid her mouth in apparent shock. "Oh dear! That's terrible news. You must be worried sick. How is she doing?"

Lexi provided a few vague details as she gauged Myrna's reaction. Disappointed to see no further action, Lexi offered an excuse and retreated inside.
