

Chapter 2156 Surprise

A month later, following a heated debate, Johanna and Beal managed to secure the White family villa as the location for the baby's celebration.

When the day of the party arrived, Brandon and Janet headed straight to the villa with their newborn.

The moment Janet stepped inside the gates, she couldn't hide her amazement.

The garden was a riot of color with blooming flowers, the villa's exterior looked freshly renovated, and a koi pond, teeming with hundreds of vibrant koi fish, had appeared seemingly out of nowhere.

What had happened here?

For a brief moment, Janet questioned whether she had walked into the right place. But when Johanna and Beal hurried over, brimming with excitement as they eagerly took the baby from her arms, it became clear that they came to the right place.

Brandon, who had been steadying Janet, couldn't help but chuckle. "I didn't expect them to go all out like this. It looks like they really adore the baby."

Janet, too, was taken aback by her parents' willingness to invest so much. The near-total renovation of the villa was undeniably impressive.

The guests were equally astonished. They couldn't help but marvel at the White family's growing prosperity and the deep affection Johanna and Beal had for Janet and her son.

Mona, who had nearly fully recovered, attended the party in good spirits and was accompanied by Sonia.

However, due to the traumatic events of the past, she was still on edge, her nerves frayed as she kept a vigilant eye on the baby, fearing any potential mishaps. Yet, when the child smiled, Mona's anxiety seemed to melt away, and a calm, gentle expression took over her features.

Janet watched the crowd gather around her baby. "How wonderful! My child was born with the one thing I longed for most in my first twenty years—family love.”

At that moment, Brandon wrapped his arms around her from behind and whispered, “Don’t worry. Whatever you missed in the past, I’ll make up for it twice over in the future.”

Janet turned to face him, her gaze locking with his. They stood there, eyes only on each other as if the rest of the world had faded away, leaving just the two of them in that perfect moment.

When their child turned three months old, Janet had completely regained her figure. Her delicate curves were even more captivating than before she had given birth.

Having refrained from intimacy during her pregnancy, Brandon now seemed intent on making up for lost time, spending every night with Janet in passionate embrace until the early hours. He also introduced her to new experiences and positions, leaving her feeling both exhilarated and a bit overwhelmed.

One morning, as Janet was just waking up, she received a text message from Brandon asking her to meet him in the backyard.

She couldn’t help but feel puzzled, both of them were at home, so why send a message instead of simply coming to get her? The whole thing seemed wrapped in mystery.

However, Janet quickly freshened up, changed her clothes, and made her way to the backyard.

As she stepped outside, she spotted Brandon standing with his back to her, beneath a wall adorned with climbing roses.

With a smile, Janet approached him and asked, “What’s going on? Why the sudden interest in strolling in the garden today?”

Brandon turned to face her, his expression unusually serious, which made Janet’s heart skip a beat with nervous anticipation.

Then, without warning, he knelt down, pulling out a diamond ring. His voice filled with deep love and solemnity as he asked, “Janet, will you marry me? Will you stay with me until we grow old, never parting for all eternity?”

Janet was momentarily stunned, her mind reeling from the surprise. But soon, a wave of joy washed over her as she extended her hand and responded, "I will!"

Hearing the words he'd been longing for, Brandon wasted no time slipping the ring onto her finger. He then gently kissed her hand, his lips lingering on the spot where the ring now sat.

After a moment, he stood up with a mysterious smile and said, "Close your eyes. There's another surprise."

Janet's excitement only grew. This formal and romantic proposal had already left her breathless, and she could hardly imagine what more could be in store.

With a shy smile, she obediently closed her eyes, her heart racing with anticipation.

Holding Janet's hand, Brandon led her forward a few steps. When she opened her eyes again, they had moved to the other side of the wall.

What she saw left her speechless with excitement and emotion.

It was a beautifully arranged lawn wedding.

Her family and friends lined the sides of the lawn, all smiling warmly at her.

The sight of it all was overwhelming, and tears welled up in Janet's eyes. After a few moments of shock, she finally found her voice. "How did you manage to arrange a wedding like this so suddenly? We're already married! When did you prepare all this?"

Brandon smiled and replied, "Even though we're already married, I still owe you the wedding of your dreams. I've always wanted to give you something grand. I know I haven't always treated you the way you deserve, but from now on, I promise to give you the very best this world has to offer."

Overwhelmed with emotion and happiness, Janet threw herself into Brandon's arms, hugging him tightly.

With all their friends and family watching, the couple held hands and walked down the long red carpet together, stepping into a beautiful future.
