The rose branch stacked on the bow whizzed like an atrox

It followed the route Kelvin had designed and shot steadily into the open window.

that it was a rose,

The rose was beautiful and had a strong fragrance, and it was very similar to the flower that Ian had brought for Tinley

No, it was exactly the same.

Wendy walked to the window and looked down.

Yvonne turned around excitedly and wrapped her arms around Kelvin's neck. With excellent hearing, Wendy could clearly hear her happy voice.

Yvonne rubbed Kelvin's cheek excitedly and said word by word proudly, "Dad! We gave the flower to Mom! We are amazing!"

The smile on Kelvin's face deepened and said, "Yes, we are amazing"

Seeing this scene, Wendy looked slightly stunned and her heart was touched.

She glanced at the vase full of flowers next to Yvonne, knowing there would be many more.

As one of the people who knew Tinley best in the world, she couldn't let Yvonne down, so she found an antique vase in the room.

Later, she was able to catch every flower that came in through the window downstairs. Finally, she took a lot of them and put them on Tinley's bedside.

Wendy could hear Yvonne's chirping voice when she stood by the bed watching.

She didn't know when Tinley would wake up, but her cold and weak face was much more serene.

Yvonne held the bow happily. But she was happier helping Tinley than that.

A sense of satisfaction rose in her heart, which was incomparable to giving a lot of flowers directly to her.

Kelvin held her up and picked up the antique vase.

When he saw Yvonne's expression, he knew he had chosen the right method.

Tinley was too careful with Yvonne, to the extreme.

Hearing this, the force on her hand loosened, and Yvonne quickly let go.

The rose branch stacked on the bow whizzed like an arrow.

It followed the route Kelvin had designed and shot steadily into the open window.

It vanished.

Wendy noticed when the rose shot in.

She raised her right hand lightly, seemingly inadvertently, but her two fingers firmly clamped the flower branch.

She was afraid that Yvonne would become weak in order to save her, so she kept her away.

But if something really happened to her, it would be a lifelong psychic trauma for Yvonne.

Kelvin silently thought to himself that it might be that he was too rough when raising children.

He read several parenting books more than a decade ago.

The knowledge wasn't used on his own naughty children at all. But he didn't expect to use it on Yvonne now.

She's a good girl, the standard good girl in the book.

"Dad, I miss you so much."

Yvonne was feeling sad just now and didn't have time to greet him.

But as his cute daughter, she wouldn't forget this routine.

"I haven't seen you for a long time, Dad."

Her tone was soft, even if her voice was not as tender as before, it didn't affect anything at all.

"Why didn't you come to accompany me for so long? I thought you didn't like me anymore."

Kelvin hugged her back tightly, his eyes helpless and guilty.

How could he be willing to let go?

He stood and looked at the few people who were far away, thinking of something.

"Yvonne, can you stay with me while your Mom is still unconscious?"

Yvonne was a little confused, "Dad, just live with me."

"It's different," Kelvin said in a coaxing voice.

He added, "Do you want to see Taylor?"

"Yes!" Yvonne did not hesitate.

Kelvin smiled and coaxed, "Then do as I say."

He took out his phone and found a contact number.

He specifically told Yvonne before making the call, "After Taylor connects later, tell him that you want to play with him."

"Okay!"

This was a simple task for Yvonne.

After the call was connected, Kelvin held the phone for her.

An old voice came from over there, "What are you doing, Kelvin?"

"Taylor!" The sweet voice interrupted Taylor's next words.

Obviously, his voice on the phone became much milder.

"What's wrong, Yvonne?"

Yvonne glanced at Kelvin's face and remembered what he had just said.

She said, "Taylor, I want to play with you."

After hearing these words, there was a long pause.

Then, Taylor said nervously, "I'm so busy every day. You still want to disturb me. Didn't we just meet two days ago? Do you miss me again? So clingy..."

He added, "By the way, when are you coming?"

Yvonne didn't know.

Kelvin took his phone and replied, "Just today. Taylor, I'll take Yvonne over and accompany you for a few days.

"You will waste my time. My time is precious... Will you play until the end of the festival?" Taylor said.

"Yes, but a person prevents Yvonne from going out to play. I need your help."

Taylor didn't even think about it, and decisively agreed, "Okay, let me tell that person."

Hearing his words, Kelvin took his phone and walked towards Ian.

"Master of Yvonne," he said to Ian before handing over the phone.

Ian knew that Taylor was covering for Yvonne, so he took it very seriously.

He thought there was something wrong with her ability.

He was too concerned and felt that Taylor was respected and would not lie, so when he heard that Taylor wanted to take Yvonne for two days, he agreed without hesitation.

After hanging up, Ian nervously asked Kelvin, "Has Yvonne's matter been discovered?"

Kelvin said with a deep voice, "I'll take Yvonne to see."

"I'm with you." Ian was about to follow them.

But he was stopped by Kelvin.

Kelvin said, "Taylor has a strange temper and doesn't like to be disturbed by others. I have dealt with him a few times and we are friends. Just let me take Yvonne there."

What he said was reasonable. After Ian thought about it, he stopped insisting.

Outside the door of the Holmes family, Yvonne couldn't help but laugh.

She said, "So funny, Dad!"

The serious and calm expression on Kelvin's face disappeared quickly and smiled.

He said, "If you like, we will play again in the future."

"Okay!"

Inside the research institute, Taylor hurried out of the lab and into his office.

He had a house nearby, allocated by the state, but he had not lived much. He spent most of his time eating and sleeping in the research institute.

After rummaging through the cabinets for a long time, he couldn't find what he wanted. He stood up anxiously.

Alex asked curiously, "Taylor, what are you looking for?"

Taylor said, "Why is the handful of candy I brought back last time gone? I remember putting it here."

Unable to find it, Taylor dug out the drawer, took out the money at the bottom, and handed it all to Alex without counting.

He said, "Go and buy me some candy and sweet fruit."

Alex didn't take the money and said, "Taylor, I'll just buy it with my own money."

Taylor's attitude was tough, pushing him out and telling him. "Take my money! Buy something better."
