Chapter 161

Before they reached the backyard, they saw Jeremy wandering around in the yard.

Carol Adler, the eldest daughter-in-law, thought she had mistaken Jeremy when she first saw him.

'Didn't Jeremy go to Blorencce City? How could he appear in the Holmes family? Carol thought.

She called out Jeremy's name, stopped him, and asked. "Jeremy, aren't you in school? Why are you here?"

Jeremy had just returned home to change and was now busy searching for Yvonne in the backyard.

He stopped with a look of helplessness when he heard someone call him.

"A high school student also has Sundays. Don't you want to see what day it is today?"

Carol looked at her watch and choked.

It was Saturday,

That was fine.

But then she thought of another thing.

Jeremy is here. Does it mean Kelvin is there, too? Is he with Richard in the backyard or playing with that kid thought Carol.

The few people with their thoughts lost their heart to enjoy the scenery in an instant and followed the servant in without saying a word.

It was a good thing that the two families had a good relationship, but this good thing had nothing to do with them, which was frustrating

The more they went to the backyard, the more lively it was. The number and variety of birds were increasing.

An invisible power diluted the utilitarianism and boredom in their hearts.

They heard exclamations from a distance after a long distance.

"Don't move. Don't scare it away!"

"It seems to be eating oranges..."

"Don't just seem, my sister. It is coming for your orange.

Everyone's voice was there. In short, it was lively.

The people from the Adler family walked over and saw an incredible scente.

Richard, who was usually dignified and unsmiling in front of them, stood behind the camera and took pictures.

The shutter sound was like a gunshot

Jeremy, whom they had just met in the front yard, was standing next to an orange tree with Yvonne in his arms, smiling brightly.

"Grandpa, take a good-looking picture of me. I want to send it to Instagram"

Chapter 161

Yvonne in Jeremy's arms stretched out her small, chubby hand restlessly, and a somewhat large egret fell on her arm.

There was some panic in her soft voice as she said, "Grandpa, are you done yet? It bit my hair!"

"Don't move. Don't move. Richard could only repeat the words like a human machine.

Tinley stood not far away, also holding a camera.

Wendy stood in front of Yvonne with a large light panel in her hands.

It was cloudy today. She was afraid the photos would turn gray, so she took a light panel to light Yvonne to ensure she was also beautiful on camera.

Of course, the light was all on Yvonne, and Jeremy, standing next to her, didn't get it. He looked gray compared to Yvonne. Yvonne was wearing a hairpin today, full of small orange oranges.

The egret was naughty. It grabbed the little orange with its long mouth. After pulling it off, it tilted its head and spat it all on the ground.

Kelvin ran over to pick it up and held five or six in his big hands against the cold white of his skin.

The Adler family rushed over to see the scene, stunned.

They knew they were in harmony but didn't know they were so harmonious.

If it were not mentioned, who would know they were two families?

Richard finally stood up after the egret got bored and flew away.

"It's done," said Richard.

He looked proud, as if thinking of the scene when his group of photos won first place in the major photography competitions.

Jeremy put Yvonne on the ground and rushed over to take a look.

Wendy took the light panel back and walked behind Tinley to look at the photos she had taken.

Kelvin squatted next to Yvonne and re-stuck the six oranges in her hands one by one onto her hairpin

At the end, he also kindly smoothed out Yvonne's hair that had been pecked into a mess.

Jeremy, who had just gone to check the photos, let out a roar of disbelief.

"No. What did you shoot for me? It's dark," said Jeremy.

His sister's skin was smooth and tender. Alter magifying i even the small fluff on her face was clear to see.

On the other hand, his photos looked dark. He even went to change into brightly colored clothes, but it turned even darker after being photographed

Richard for used on Yvonne when he took the pictures. Jeremy was like an irrelevant background, not on the same layer as Yvonnet

The most unbearable thing for Jeremy was that Richard, his grandfather, was so biased!

Richard only captured Yvonne's living expression, regardless of whether his expression was ready or not.

Jeremy did manage his expression throughout the process, but Richard insisted on pressing the shutter in the seconds when he turned his head, blinked, or spoke.

In summary, he looked dark, ugly, and fuzzy in photos.

But Richard was still unconvinced, saying Jeremy was more angry than anyone else and stared at him.

He said something even more heartbreaking "That's just how you look"

Jeremy was speechless.

Am I ugly: Then I leave? thought Jeremy

"Are you kidding Grandpa? I inherited my dad's face. How can I look like this? Your shooting skills are not good!

"How do you want me to post my photos on Instagram: No, I have to take a few more shots!"

His words aroused Charles's dissatisfaction.

Jeremy, you've been photoing for a long time. It's our turn."

Jeremy was relentless, covering his ears

I don't listen. Ill reshoot!"

Jeremy brought craziness into the wealthy family.

He spooked Richard by splashing around here.

Richard didn't play with his mobile phone, and he didn't know it was popular crazy literature He would just hug his precious camera and tripod and silently distance himself from Jeremy As Richard slipped away, he muttered, "It's over. It's over. Richard is crazy..."

Under his influence, Jeremy successfully won the right to take another photo with Yvonne.

He stood in front of the orange tree, hugging Yvonne.

The egret didn't come but circled the orange tree.

However, Jeremy wasn't in a hurry at all. He patted Yvonne's hand lightly.

"Come, Yvonne. Call that egret over now.

Yvonne's face was full of despair. She looked at Jeremy eagerly, trying to awaken his love as her brother.

Jeremy, it keeps eating my hair...

But Jeremy, who was determined to have a good photo, ignored her, "It's okay. It won't be able to swallow it and will spit it out for you Yvonne said, "Ok..

Then a light green fluorescent dot emerged from her chubby little fingertips.

The egret by the orange tree was attracted and flew to her arm again.

Wendy ran over with a light panel with a serious face.

Chapter 161

She was focusing on contributing to the photos of her young lady.

Jeremy turned his head and looked. He now knew why he looked dark.

"No. Wendy, give me a little light, too, and hit me here. Otherwise, I will look dark when compared."

Wendy's expression froze, trying to pretend not to hear him.

In fact, she did it on purpose. If Jeremy looked dark, he would be able to make the lady look nice.

One side was the comparison, and the other side was the plug-in. Jeremy lost.

"Light me up. Wendy. If you step back, you can hit the light on us both," said Jeremy.

Jeremy kept pushing. Wendy had no choice but to take a step back as he said.

Another few minutes passed, and after photoing this time, Jeremy went to look at the finished photos and was finally satisfied.

"This is my normal appearance," said Jeremy.

"But then again, the egret is in focus, and so is Yvonne. Even the orange tree that is used as the background board is in focus, but I'm not and blurred. What can I say? I guess I'm just not worthy?"

Yvonne was sharp as a blade, and he melted like cream.

Jeremy went to look at Tinley again..

Tinley was much fairer and photographed Jeremy clearly.

And most of the girls pay attention to the characters, so Tinley photographed him nicely.

The more Jeremy looked at the photos, the brighter his eyes became.

He was super familiar and stood beside Tinley to act spoiled. "Tinley, let's add WhatsApp and send photos to me later..." "Okay. Tinley took out her phone.
