

Abandoned Super Cutie Adopted by Billionaire Clan

Chapter 174

Chapter 174

The Lawson family's driver rushed to the school after receiving the order.

Then he took the little schoolbag full of oranges from Anna.

66% He was stunned for a while, but Anna said to him seriously, "Be sure to bring the little orange home safely, and then give it to my grandfather and let him put it away."

This solemn tone made the driver feel that what he was holding was not oranges, but a priceless treasure.

Seeing that he was in a daze, Anna said again, "Remember, when you get home, tell grandpa that it was given to me by Yvonne, and he will know."

"Okay, Miss Lawson

The driver left with a small schoolbag. After he left, Anna and Yvonne returned to the classroom.

Rachel came over with concern to ask about the situation.

After the three children returned to class, the entire process and video of the skirmish were completely sent to their parents' mailboxes by the teachers, with the processing results attached.

No matter what parents had the right to know.

After school, Kevin walked out of the classroom door.

He was usually picked up by the family's driver and nanny, but this afternoon it was his father.

The moment he saw his father, his heart trembled suddenly, and he didn't dare to come forward.

There were too many people here, and he was afraid that his father would hit him.

Carlson came up to him, unconcerned about how Kevin was doing at school or asking him why the afternoon clash had occurred.

After he approached, he directly looked for Yvonne among the many children behind him.

Not finding it, he said the first words to Kevin, "Where is that little girl from the Holmes family?"

Kevin lowered his head and whispered, "She left. Her uncle picks her up every d

day on time.

Ian was practically synced to the bell, whisking Yvonne away the nanosecond class ended without letting her linger

Carlson was silent for a moment, then turned and pulled Kevin back into the car without a word.

Kevin was very perturbed and thought he would be scolded, so he took the initiative to apologize. "I'm sorry, Dad, I...

However, before he could finish his apology, he was interrupted.

"We're going to the Holmes family to apologize later. You must soften your attitude at that time. No matter what the girl says, you must coax her and let the Holmes family see your sincerity, understand?"

"But... I have already apologized to them, and she has forgiven me."

Kevin didn't want to go. He was upset when he apologized to Yvonne in the office. He didn't want to go through it again.

But Carlson wouldn't listen. His mind was already made up, locked tight in his stubborn worldview.

1/3

17:30 Mon, 7 Apr

Chapter 174

He even darkened his face.

K 65%

"What is your apology? You have to bring a gift to the Holmes family and be solemn in front of their parents. Otherwise, maybe they will cause trouble for me elsewhere."

His tone was so serious that Kevin opened his mouth and couldn't say anything more. 'Dad can't go wrong, so Dad's right!'

Tinley saw the video in the mailbox that Wendy brought her.

When she saw Yvonne shed tears of grievance, she was really angry.

There was also a video from the back office, where the little boy apologized to Yvonne.

Since the relationship between the three children had been resolved, she would not interfere.

And with Anna guarding the school, Yvonne would not suffer at all.

Tinley held a special appreciation for Anna, perhaps partly due to her fondness for Anna's family, and also because Anna was the child of her old friend.

Yvonne had impeccable taste. Naturally, that extended to her choice of friends, too.

The room had been very quiet. After the sound in the surveillance stopped, the noise downstairs was particularly obvious.

This ruckus was a strange blast from the past. The house hadn't been this alive with chaos since her brothers outgrew their boisterous phase ages ago.

Tinley raised her eyes, and the cold and beautiful eyes narrowed. "Who is making trouble below?"

Wendy coughed. "It's Richard and Jeremy."

When she came to find Tinley, the two were still chasing in the small pavilion not far away. She didn't expect that in just a few minutes, the commotion would be nearby.

"Jeremy felt that Richard took a few of his oranges, and he just chased after Richard. He'd been hounding Richard all the way from the Adler residence across the street, their bickering never letting up until they got here."

Hearing these words, Tinley's eyebrows twitched.

Wendy stepped aside. "Ms. Holmes, do you want to go down and have a look?"

The scene was quite funny, and several people didn't manage to stop them.

Tinley stood up, walked to the window, and looked down.

Jeremy ran ahead with a password box in his arms, trying to unlock it as he ran. Richard chased after him with a stick, calling him an unfilial grandson while chasing.

The two of them started fighting from a distance, circled the building, and ran back again. Tinley leaned against the window frame, and the delicate features seemed to come alive.

Wendy couldn't help laughing from the side.

"Richard was such a serious person when he was young. I didn't expect him to look like a child when he got older.

2/3

30 Mon, Apr

Chapter 174

Tinley raised her eyelids and stopped looking at the two noisy people below.

Chapter 174

The Lawson family's driver rushed to the school after receiving the order.

Then he took the little schoolbag full of oranges from Anna.

66% He was stunned for a while, but Anna said to him seriously, "Be sure to bring the little orange home safely, and then give it to my grandfather and let him put it away."

This solemn tone made the driver feel that what he was holding was not oranges, but a priceless treasure.

Seeing that he was in a daze, Anna said again, "Remember, when you get home, tell grandpa that it was given to me by Yvonne, and he will know."

"Okay, Miss Lawson

The driver left with a small schoolbag. After he left, Anna and Yvonne returned to the classroom.

Rachel came over with concern to ask about the situation.

After the three children returned to class, the entire process and video of the skirmish were completely sent to their parents' mailboxes by the teachers, with the processing results attached.

No matter what parents had the right to know.

After school, Kevin walked out of the classroom door.

He was usually picked up by the family's driver and nanny, but this afternoon it was his father.

The moment he saw his father, his heart trembled suddenly, and he didn't dare to come forward.

There were too many people here, and he was afraid that his father would hit him.

Carlson came up to him, unconcerned about how Kevin was doing at school or asking him why the afternoon clash had occurred.

After he approached, he directly looked for Yvonne among the many children behind him.

Not finding it, he said the first words to Kevin, "Where is that little girl from the Holmes family?"

Kevin lowered his head and whispered, "She left. Her uncle picks her up every d

day on time.

Ian was practically synced to the bell, whisking Yvonne away the nanosecond class ended without letting her linger

Carlson was silent for a moment, then turned and pulled Kevin back into the car without a word.

Kevin was very perturbed and thought he would be scolded, so he took the initiative to apologize. "I'm sorry, Dad, I...

However, before he could finish his apology, he was interrupted.

"We're going to the Holmes family to apologize later. You must soften your attitude at that time. No matter what the girl says, you must coax her and let the Holmes family see your sincerity, understand?"

"But... I have already apologized to them, and she has forgiven me."

Kevin didn't want to go. He was upset when he apologized to Yvonne in the office. He didn't want to go through it again.

But Carlson wouldn't listen. His mind was already made up, locked tight in his stubborn worldview.

1/3

17:30 Mon, 7 Apr

Chapter 174

He even darkened his face.

K 65%

"What is your apology? You have to bring a gift to the Holmes family and be solemn in front of their parents. Otherwise, maybe they will cause trouble for me elsewhere."

His tone was so serious that Kevin opened his mouth and couldn't say anything more. 'Dad can't go wrong, so Dad's right!'

Tinley saw the video in the mailbox that Wendy brought her.

When she saw Yvonne shed tears of grievance, she was really angry.

There was also a video from the back office, where the little boy apologized to Yvonne.

Since the relationship between the three children had been resolved, she would not interfere.

And with Anna guarding the school, Yvonne would not suffer at all.

Tinley held a special appreciation for Anna, perhaps partly due to her fondness for Anna's family, and also because Anna was the child of her old friend.

Yvonne had impeccable taste. Naturally, that extended to her choice of friends, too.

The room had been very quiet. After the sound in the surveillance stopped, the noise downstairs was particularly obvious.

This ruckus was a strange blast from the past. The house hadn't been this alive with chaos since her brothers outgrew their boisterous phase ages ago.

Tinley raised her eyes, and the cold and beautiful eyes narrowed. "Who is making trouble below?"

Wendy coughed. "It's Richard and Jeremy."

When she came to find Tinley, the two were still chasing in the small pavilion not far away. She didn't expect that in just a few minutes, the commotion would be nearby.

"Jeremy felt that Richard took a few of his oranges, and he just chased after Richard. He'd been hounding Richard all the way from the Adler residence across the street, their bickering never letting up until they got here."

Hearing these words, Tinley's eyebrows twitched.

Wendy stepped aside. "Ms. Holmes, do you want to go down and have a look?"

The scene was quite funny, and several people didn't manage to stop them.

Tinley stood up, walked to the window, and looked down.

Jeremy ran ahead with a password box in his arms, trying to unlock it as he ran. Richard chased after him with a stick, calling him an unfilial grandson while chasing.

The two of them started fighting from a distance, circled the building, and ran back again. Tinley leaned against the window frame, and the delicate features seemed to come alive.

Wendy couldn't help laughing from the side.

"Richard was such a serious person when he was young. I didn't expect him to look like a child when he got older.

2/3

30 Mon, Apr

Chapter 174

Tinley raised her eyelids and stopped looking at the two noisy people below.

Her voice was light and lazy, and she complained without mercy at all. "Yvonne raised him too well."

If it had been in the past, he would not have had the energy to chase a child for so long.

Wendy pursed her lips and smiled. "Yeah."

She retracted her gaze and looked at the clock in the room. "Yvonne should be back."

Tinley nodded slightly, left the window, and went downstairs to pick up Yvonne.

E

Chapter 174

The Lawson family's driver rushed to the school after receiving the order.

Then he took the little schoolbag full of oranges from Anna.

66% He was stunned for a while, but Anna said to him seriously, "Be sure to bring the little orange home safely, and then give it to my grandfather and let him put it away."

This solemn tone made the driver feel that what he was holding was not oranges, but a priceless treasure.

Seeing that he was in a daze, Anna said again, "Remember, when you get home, tell grandpa that it was given to me by Yvonne, and he will know."

"Okay, Miss Lawson

The driver left with a small schoolbag. After he left, Anna and Yvonne returned to the classroom.

Rachel came over with concern to ask about the situation.

After the three children returned to class, the entire process and video of the skirmish were completely sent to their parents' mailboxes by the teachers, with the processing results attached.

No matter what parents had the right to know.

After school, Kevin walked out of the classroom door.

He was usually picked up by the family's driver and nanny, but this afternoon it was his father.

The moment he saw his father, his heart trembled suddenly, and he didn't dare to come forward.

There were too many people here, and he was afraid that his father would hit him.

Carlson came up to him, unconcerned about how Kevin was doing at school or asking him why the afternoon clash had occurred.

After he approached, he directly looked for Yvonne among the many children behind him.

Not finding it, he said the first words to Kevin, "Where is that little girl from the Holmes family?"

Kevin lowered his head and whispered, "She left. Her uncle picks her up every d

day on time.

Ian was practically synced to the bell, whisking Yvonne away the nanosecond class ended without letting her linger

Carlson was silent for a moment, then turned and pulled Kevin back into the car without a word.

Kevin was very perturbed and thought he would be scolded, so he took the initiative to apologize. "I'm sorry, Dad, I...

However, before he could finish his apology, he was interrupted.

"We're going to the Holmes family to apologize later. You must soften your attitude at that time. No matter what the girl says, you must coax her and let the Holmes family see your sincerity, understand?"

"But... I have already apologized to them, and she has forgiven me."

Kevin didn't want to go. He was upset when he apologized to Yvonne in the office. He didn't want to go through it again.

But Carlson wouldn't listen. His mind was already made up, locked tight in his stubborn worldview.

1/3

17:30 Mon, 7 Apr

Chapter 174

He even darkened his face.

K 65%

"What is your apology? You have to bring a gift to the Holmes family and be solemn in front of their parents. Otherwise, maybe they will cause trouble for me elsewhere."

His tone was so serious that Kevin opened his mouth and couldn't say anything more. 'Dad can't go wrong, so Dad's right!'

Tinley saw the video in the mailbox that Wendy brought her.

When she saw Yvonne shed tears of grievance, she was really angry.

There was also a video from the back office, where the little boy apologized to Yvonne.

Since the relationship between the three children had been resolved, she would not interfere.

And with Anna guarding the school, Yvonne would not suffer at all.

Tinley held a special appreciation for Anna, perhaps partly due to her fondness for Anna's family, and also because Anna was the child of her old friend.

Yvonne had impeccable taste. Naturally, that extended to her choice of friends, too.

The room had been very quiet. After the sound in the surveillance stopped, the noise downstairs was particularly obvious.

This ruckus was a strange blast from the past. The house hadn't been this alive with chaos since her brothers outgrew their boisterous phase ages ago.

Tinley raised her eyes, and the cold and beautiful eyes narrowed. "Who is making trouble below?"

Wendy coughed. "It's Richard and Jeremy."

When she came to find Tinley, the two were still chasing in the small pavilion not far away. She didn't expect that in just a few minutes, the commotion would be nearby.

"Jeremy felt that Richard took a few of his oranges, and he just chased after Richard. He'd been hounding Richard all the way from the Adler residence across the street, their bickering never letting up until they got here."

Hearing these words, Tinley's eyebrows twitched.

Wendy stepped aside. "Ms. Holmes, do you want to go down and have a look?"

The scene was quite funny, and several people didn't manage to stop them.

Tinley stood up, walked to the window, and looked down.

Jeremy ran ahead with a password box in his arms, trying to unlock it as he ran. Richard chased after him with a stick, calling him an unfilial grandson while chasing.

The two of them started fighting from a distance, circled the building, and ran back again. Tinley leaned against the window frame, and the delicate features seemed to come alive.

Wendy couldn't help laughing from the side.

"Richard was such a serious person when he was young. I didn't expect him to look like a child when he got older.

2/3

30 Mon, Apr

Chapter 174

Tinley raised her eyelids and stopped looking at the two noisy people below.

If it had been in the past, he would not have had the energy to chase a child for so long.

Wendy pursed her lips and smiled. "Yeah."

She retracted her gaze and looked at the clock in the room. "Yvonne should be back."

Tinley nodded slightly, left the window, and went downstairs to pick up Yvonne.

E

Chapter 174

The Lawson family's driver rushed to the school after receiving the order.

Then he took the little schoolbag full of oranges from Anna.

66% He was stunned for a while, but Anna said to him seriously, "Be sure to bring the little orange home safely, and then give it to my grandfather and let him put it away."

This solemn tone made the driver feel that what he was holding was not oranges, but a priceless treasure.

Seeing that he was in a daze, Anna said again, "Remember, when you get home, tell grandpa that it was given to me by Yvonne, and he will know."

"Okay, Miss Lawson

The driver left with a small schoolbag. After he left, Anna and Yvonne returned to the classroom.

Rachel came over with concern to ask about the situation.

After the three children returned to class, the entire process and video of the skirmish were completely sent to their parents' mailboxes by the teachers, with the processing results attached.

No matter what parents had the right to know.

After school, Kevin walked out of the classroom door.

He was usually picked up by the family's driver and nanny, but this afternoon it was his father.

The moment he saw his father, his heart trembled suddenly, and he didn't dare to come forward.

There were too many people here, and he was afraid that his father would hit him.

Carlson came up to him, unconcerned about how Kevin was doing at school or asking him why the afternoon clash had occurred.

After he approached, he directly looked for Yvonne among the many children behind him.

Not finding it, he said the first words to Kevin, "Where is that little girl from the Holmes family?"

Kevin lowered his head and whispered, "She left. Her uncle picks her up every d

day on time.

Ian was practically synced to the bell, whisking Yvonne away the nanosecond class ended without letting her linger

Carlson was silent for a moment, then turned and pulled Kevin back into the car without a word.

Kevin was very perturbed and thought he would be scolded, so he took the initiative to apologize. "I'm sorry, Dad, I...

However, before he could finish his apology, he was interrupted.

"We're going to the Holmes family to apologize later. You must soften your attitude at that time. No matter what the girl says, you must coax her and let the Holmes family see your sincerity, understand?"

"But... I have already apologized to them, and she has forgiven me."

Kevin didn't want to go. He was upset when he apologized to Yvonne in the office. He didn't want to go through it again.

But Carlson wouldn't listen. His mind was already made up, locked tight in his stubborn worldview.

1/3

17:30 Mon, 7 Apr

Chapter 174

He even darkened his face.

K 65%

"What is your apology? You have to bring a gift to the Holmes family and be solemn in front of their parents. Otherwise, maybe they will cause trouble for me elsewhere."

His tone was so serious that Kevin opened his mouth and couldn't say anything more. 'Dad can't go wrong, so Dad's right!'

Tinley saw the video in the mailbox that Wendy brought her.

When she saw Yvonne shed tears of grievance, she was really angry.

There was also a video from the back office, where the little boy apologized to Yvonne.

Since the relationship between the three children had been resolved, she would not interfere.

And with Anna guarding the school, Yvonne would not suffer at all.

Tinley held a special appreciation for Anna, perhaps partly due to her fondness for Anna's family, and also because Anna was the child of her old friend.

Yvonne had impeccable taste. Naturally, that extended to her choice of friends, too.

The room had been very quiet. After the sound in the surveillance stopped, the noise downstairs was particularly obvious.

This ruckus was a strange blast from the past. The house hadn't been this alive with chaos since her brothers outgrew their boisterous phase ages ago.

Tinley raised her eyes, and the cold and beautiful eyes narrowed. "Who is making trouble below?"

Wendy coughed. "It's Richard and Jeremy."

When she came to find Tinley, the two were still chasing in the small pavilion not far away. She didn't expect that in just a few minutes, the commotion would be nearby.

"Jeremy felt that Richard took a few of his oranges, and he just chased after Richard. He'd been hounding Richard all the way from the Adler residence across the street, their bickering never letting up until they got here."

Hearing these words, Tinley's eyebrows twitched.

Wendy stepped aside. "Ms. Holmes, do you want to go down and have a look?"

The scene was quite funny, and several people didn't manage to stop them.

Tinley stood up, walked to the window, and looked down.