Chapter 269

Kenny, who was helping Yvonne with her crafts next door, suddenly felt a chill down his spine

He subconsciously looked up and glanced around. At that moment. Yvonne called out to him softly “Uncle Kenny, you’re amazing

Kenny looked down and met Yvonne’s gaze of admiration and awe. His heart softened, and he umidled faintly.

The smile made him look even more like a gentleman, so elegant and polite.

His hands moved swiftly, carving the wood piece into a chubby little fish in no time.

It was plump and looked round and comical.

Yvonne thought it looked very much like the little fish in the small pond at home

She held the small fish preciously, pinching its round belly with her soft fingers, and after pinching it, she looked at Kenny in surprise. “It’s lovely!”

Kenny nodded, the corners of his lips curving into a smile..

After playing with it lovingly for a while, Yvonne looked up, her bright, sparkling eyes staring at him expectantly

She asked carefully, “Uncle Kenny, can you make one for Anna?”

She thought this chubby little fish was beautiful, so she wanted to give one to Anna so that they could make a pair

Kenny said yes, and directly picked up the wood piece and began to craft it.

His fingers were long and bony, and it was pleasing to the eye to watch them working on the wood piece.

After he was done, Kenny had someone get him a pen to draw the fish eyes and put a string through it.

He handed over the two almost identical little fish.

After adding eyes to them, the fish looked more lifelike and delicate. Yvonne liked them better.

She hung hers on her schoolbag and carefully put the other one in a small box, waiting to bring it to Anna when she went to school.

After wrapping it, Yvonne thanked him happily, then took her schoolbag and ran out to show off to others

Watching her leaving figure, Kenny let out a long sigh of relief.

He was quite scared when he came back this time, afraid Yvonne would turn him into a cat

Unexpectedly, Yvonne didn’t mention it at all. ‘Maybe she forgot, Kenny thought.

It was good that she forgot. Otherwise, he was afraid Yvonne would be sad when she knew he was actually a human

But Kenny had no idea Yvonne had known for a long time.

Although she was sad for several days after knowing Kenny was not a cat, it did not affect her love for him. On the contrary, after knowing he could make such beautiful little fish, she liked him even more.

Yvonne, carrying two small fish, happily went to share it with her mother.

She ran excisedly all the way, and the bodyguard guarding the door didn’t dare to stop her when he saw her coming, He directly opened the door and let her in.

In this way, carrying her small schoolsag, Yvonne ran happily into the council hall without any obstructive

The door suddenly opened, and everyone’s eyes turned to her.

Yvonne was stunned for a moment when she saw many people sitting inside.

The guards outside had opened the door and let her in, and she thought only her mother was inside.

Her eyes moved to her mother in the middle. Tinley raised her eyebrows slightly, her expression relaxed a hat, and the cure of her lips was obvious

At a glance, Tinley was the most eye–catching beauty in the room.

“What’s wrong, honey? Come here. Tinley’s bright eyes revealed a gentle look, as if a gentle wind had dispelled the coldnes of the snowy field.

At that moment, spring blossomed, and even the atmosphere in the room seemed less tense.

Yvonne heard Tinley, but she froze in place for a few seconds, seeming to be thinking

After thinking about it, she decided to wait until Tinley finished her work.

Yvonne didn’t move. She looked up at Tinley with a sweet smile and said in a cute, sweet voice, “Mommy, I will come back when you’re done.”

With that, she waved her little hand and turned to slip out the door she had just entered.

Silence fell upon the room once more.

The curve of Tinley’s lips fell, the smile in her eyes faded, and her pale lips pressed into a line.

Looking at the tightly closed door, she remained silent.

She didn’t say anything, but the cooling atmosphere in the room was enough to make people realize she was in a bad mood.

The people below looked at each other and changed the subject.

“Miss Adler is so well–behaved

“Yes, exactly. She’s so well–behaved and sensible. She’s so lovable.”

That was absolutely true. They also really wanted to have such a cute daughter because just one look at the little girl would make people want to have a child like her.

No one could resist her charmi

However, after they finished speaking, Tinley’s expression did not soften in the slightest. Her beautiful eyes were gloomy and still chillingly cold..

Yvonne was always so sensible, but it was precisely because she was so sensible that it broke Tinley’s heart.

She hoped even more that Yvonne could grow up safe, happy, and carefree.

After quickly finishing, Tinley found Yvonne waiting for her outside.

She was sitting on a chair, holding a small schoolbag in her arms, her calves dangling leisurely. She looked relaxed

She was so small and soft. Today, she was wearing fluffy yellow clothes, looking like a fluffy little new–born yellow chick.

Seeing Tinley walking towards her, Yvonne quickly jumped down from the chair, picked up her small schoolbag, and ran towards her “Mommy!” Her soft, sweet voice could melt anyone’s heart.

She pulled up her linle schoolbag and happily shared her joy with Tinley. “Mommy, look. It’s the little fish Uncle Kenny made for me!”

Tinley bent over slightly and looked at her. Yvonne’s bright eyes were too infectious, and she couldn’t help but smile.

Her slender but strong, warm hand landed on Yvonne’s head, gently rubbing it, her eyes filled with a bit of heartache. “Honey, as long as you like it.”

Yvonne loved it. Her bright eyes curved up as she snuggled in Tinley’s arms and told her what she thought was happy

She began, “Mommy, the teacher said holiday would start in three weeks, and then I won’t have to go to school. Are you happy?”

Tinley meant it when she said she was happy.

When the holiday started, she could see Yvonne at home anytime and anywhere, which was a great happiness for a loving mother.

After a while, Yvonne got out of her arms. She glanced at the door, thought for a moment, and said to Tinley, “Mommy, I think I have to go to school now, Wait for me to come back!”

She was a little sad and happy, sad to be separated from her mother, but happy to see Anna soon. Tinley agreed and stood up with her, her voice soft and gentle, ‘I will take you to school.”

That was her first time taking Yvonne to school Yvonne was stunned for a moment, then looked up at her with joy and worry.

She hugged Tinley’s leg tightly, her soft voice filled with concern. “Mommy, it’s okay that Uncle Ian takes me. You can wait for me at home. I’ll be back soon.”

Tinley looked down, a faint smile on her lips. “It’s okay. I want to take you to school.”
