Chapter 270

When Tinley and Yvonne reached the Holmes family's door, everyone who had received the news came out.

Seeing so many people gathered at the door, the bodyguard at the door of the Adler family hurriedly ran back to report to Richard.

Richard had instructed the guards that if there was any movement in the Holmes family, he should be informed immediately.

Even though he couldn't take Yvonne out, his men were watching the Holmes family.

The bodyguard ran very fast. In less than two minutes, he found Richard, who was strolling in the yard.

The bored Richard was pointing and talking to the flowers grown by Charles.

"Why are you so useless? All the others are blooming, but you are not."

The flower that was pointed at wanted to protest if it could because it wasn't supposed to bloom at this time of year.

"And you, you grow at Yvonne's doorstep, but you are so short. What a waste of the air here. Can you do it or not? If not, then get out of the way for other flowers!"

The short flower wished it could speak. It had just been transplanted the day before.

Perhaps because he was in a bad mood, Richard vented all his anger on them, standing in the yard and giving them a piece of his mind.

The flowers and plants seemed to sigh, 'Bad luck! What bad luck

At that moment, the bodyguard ran over.

He reported, Mr. Adler, a lot of people gathered at the gate of the Holmes family. I don't know what they are up to. Even the head of the Holmes family came out, and she even brought our darling Yvonne with her."

The words 'our darling Yvonne' revealed the Adler family's ambition.

Upon hearing that, Richard's eyes lit up. He looked around and climbed over the railing, just like those people on the street who disregard traffic rules and hop fences.

It was hard to imagine such an undignified move was actually made by the head of the Adler family.

The bodyguard carefully supported him from below, fearing he might fall or get hurt.

After getting down, Richard urged the bodyguard to hurry out, and he also moved quickly.

The flowers and plants behind them, finally free, seemed to breath a sigh of relief. This old man is finally gone!

When Richard arrived. Tinley hadn't left yet.

Taking advantage of his age, he squeezed in from the outermost part of the crowd.

The people squeezed out were unhappy, wondering who was so rude. But when they turned around and saw it was Richard. they didn't mind anymore.

Facing Richard, they chose to swallow their anger and make way for him.

Thus, Richard squeezed through the crowd to reach Tinley, met with groans of discontent.

Richard asked, "What happened? What's going on?"

Clueless about the situation, Richard Jauriedly questioned. Unable to wait any longer he reached and walked on "What happened?"

Jan explained, "Tinley is going to take Yvonne to school"

"Oh Richard couldn't help but feel disappointed.

Seeing so many people at the door when he came, he had a fantasy, wondering if Yvonne had defied all opinions and wanted to live in Adler family, so people from the Holmes family were stopping her.

He did not expect that it was because of such a trivial matter as taking Vonne to school.

He felt extremely disappointed, unterly bored!

Richard lost his initial enthusiasm because it was not his turn anyway, so he stood by and said wmething irrelevant.

When he stood behind people playing chess and tried to coach them, people wanted to chase him away.

"Why stop her? What's wrong with a mother taking her daughter to school?"

Ian glanced at him, thinking it was normal for Richard to be a little crazy since he wanted to take Yvonne out to play the day before but failed, so he ignored him.

Seeing no one paid attention to him, Richard added, "I think Tinley should go out more. Staying home all the time makes her a homebody. Is that good?"

He was probably the only one who dared to call Tinley a homebody.

It was nice to have a homebody son at home and a homebody opposite their house.

The four-year-old girl didn't understand the meaning of the word, so she asked him sofily, "Grandpa, what's a homebody"

Richard was overjoyed that his beloved granddaughter was talking to him, and he was happy to explain it to her. "A homebody is someone like Charles who doesn't go out very often.

"Oh, I see Yvonne hugged Tinley's leg and nodded her little head thoughtfully.

Jan couldn't help but correct him. "Mr. Adler, Tinley only stays home because of her poor health, not because she's a homebody."

Richard, who equally retorted to anybody, simply said, "Still not leaving the house, though":-{

Jan was speechless. He felt a sense of helplessness as if he had punched cotton.

Richard smiled. "Now that you're feeling better, go out more, and if you want to take Yvonne to school, go ahead."

Richard made the decision for them and waved his hand at the surrounding Holmes family members. "Alright, everyone Get back to whatever you need to do."

Tinley hadn't said anything until then, but after Richard spoke, she simply replied, "Go back, all of you."

And then, under everyone's worried gaze, she took Yvonne with her into the car.

After watching the car leave, the bored Richard glanced at the Holmes family who were still frozen in place, walked over and patted Ian on the shoulder, comforting him.

"Relax, I have a friend whose grandson became withdrawn after spending too much time at home. He hadn't left the house for two years. The first time he went out, the family was so worried that something might happen to him, and even the passersby were their bodyguards in disguise. But actually, their worry was all for nothing. The kid was just autistic, not stupid. The family had worried too much"

The more he spoke, the gloomier Ian's face became. He didn't speak until Richard finished.

He corrected him sternly, word by word, "Mr. Adler. Tinley is not a homebody, nor is she autistic

"Oh, alright." Richard knew how to get under people's skin. He turned to Kenny, thought for a moment, and leaned into inquire about his departure.

He asked, "Kenny, how long will you be staying this time?"

In fact, Richard wanted to ask, "You've been back for a day. It's time to go, isn't it Kenny had a hint of confusion in his eyes, and although he didn't figure it out, he answered truthfully, "About a week, Mr. Adler. Why?

Richard walked away disappointed upon hearing Kenny's answer.

A week was too long!

His sweet granddaughter wouldn't come to play with him for a week. How could a lonely old man like him bear that Upon returning to the Adler family. Richard's demeanor changed instantly. He pulled out his phone and urged the person on the other end

He told the person to quickly get Kenny something to do and make him leave!
