Wendy had already tumed and left when Yvonne spoke. But within a minute, she turned with the Buffy green coat Yoon had mentioned. The coat made her appear round and plump

Although her mother didn’t ask, Yvonne still explained, “Mom, I’m wearing green because Anna and she wanted to wear green At such a young age, she knew to wear matching fits with her favorite person

Tinley glanced at her dark purple coat and turned to Wendy beside her.

With just a glaner, Wendy knew exactly what she wanted, without a word being spoken: She scurred off to fetch a green from the walk–in closet..

On her way out, Tinley paused, then dashed off to change into her green coat. She believed a family should always coordinate their outfits. Seeing this, Yvonne’s eyes widened in surprise.

Thrilled at the thought of soon seeing Anna, her date for the birthday party, in matching outfits, and imagining everyone i faces when they saw her in green, Yvonne skipped down the stairs, and her eyes crinkled with mirth

During dinner, a thought struck her, and she turned to Tinley. “Mommy, I didn’t buy a birthday present for Anson Anson was the name of her classmate who celebrated his birthday.

I’ve taken care of it. Sweetie, Tinley replied gently. “It’s in the car Thanks, Mom, you’re the best!” Beaming. Yvonne leaned over and planted a kiss on Tinleys check Without any wornes Yvonne started to rat heartily

Tinley was going with her that day, along with Wendy and two men Yvonne had never seen

Yvonne curiously sized them up while lying on Wendy’s shoulder. Meanwhile, the two men looked gloomy and didn’t reat much when they met Yvonne’s curious, clear eyes..

Just as Tinley looked over, they nodded to Yvonne as a greeting. Tinley saw it but didn’t say anything. She was tolerant of capable people.

Those two men were like that by nature, tacitum to everyone. This was evident from their attitude. Because of their abilities. Tinley trusted them completely. It didn’t matter whether they were polite or not, as long as they did their jobs well.

Tinley came over, took Yvonne from Wendy’s hand, and said softly, “Let me carry you”

Her gentleness was like a spring breeze, something the two men behind her had never seen before. The men stood rooted to the spot. They looked pale as if they had seen a ghost

Who is this girl in a green coat? Why is Mrs. Holmes talks to her in such a manner?

That short sentence, just those few words, completely changed their understanding of Tinley

They still remember how cold she was when they were tied up and forced to work for the Holmes family a few years ago She walked lightly before them, but her presence put immense pressure on them.

It was hard to believe that the woman from lack then and the one before them were the same person. They couldn’t believe that the fiercest and toughest woman could go soft before a child. They thought this was mind blowing “Get in the car quickly. Don’t waste our time, Wendy urged them after seeing the men stand still. Meanwhile, Tinley had already gotten into the car, holding Yvonne.

The men returned to their senses and turned stiff upon hearing Wendy’s urge. Those two looked as if they had no interest in life and were devoid of life.

In the car, one meticulously polished his dagger while the other, carsick, slept with his eyes closed, swaying from side to side.

When they arrived, the carsick one, like a prisoner escaping his cage, was the first to get out of the car, staying far away from the vehicle. The other followed closely behind, standing far away from him.

Wendy saw them but only glanced, saying nothing. She approached and whispered in their ears, “Take a moment to recover. then go find us. I’ll go ahead.”

She had to stay by Tinley’s side, especially in crowded situations.

Neither of the men spoke, but Wendy knew they had heard her. Hence, she turned and trotted to catch up with Tinley.

After a while, the carsick person finally felt better. Just as they were about to enter, they realized they didn’t have an invitation. Seeing Wendy had disappeared, they didn’t know if the guards would let them in “What should we do? Try to enter casually?” One asked with a straight face.

The other quickly denied it, “No, it’s embarrassing if we got rejected.” The other had a fear of rejection.

The men were a bit socially anxious, and their opinions were the same. Hence, they turned around without a word and went to the side of the villa.

Two minutes later, they landed safely inside. They found a deserted place, opened their phones, saw the little red dot on the screen, and followed it.

After they arrived, seeing so many people around Tinley, they both chose to contact Wendy. They refused to go and meet those people inside

They were like cavemen who had just left their caves and suddenly put on a stage, bathed in spotlights

After reading the message, Wendy whispered something in Tinley’s ear and walked towards the two of them. The three found a quiet place.

Wendy looked at the man who had just gotten carsick and told him, “Thave already spoken to the head of the Jones family. The items are all on the shelf where you specified. You can go directly.”

“Okay,” he said.

Before he left, Wendy emphasized again, “Frost, remember what I said before we came here. If you notice anything wrong. shoot immediately.”

As his name suggests, Frost Xander was indifferent, “I understand”

After he left, Wendy looked at the other person standing beside her.
