Chapter 131 - Hidden Compartment Chest

A mountain of jigsaw boxes, cross word puzzles toys, colorful cubes and more of such games, all piled up in the corner of the room. Some were brand new, while the majority had tear marks on them.

"Let's see if I can break my record."

She switched her vision from that mountain to Felix, who was sitting in front of two cartoonist jigsaw boxes. He put a timer next to him and unlocked the boxes at the same time. He then did the unexpected, as he emptied them all in one spot and mixed their pieces together!

"Let's begin! I need to finish before lunch."

He let out a childlike laugh and began piecing the two puzzles, each in one space.

Asna didn't stay to watch the rest, as she already saw enough to understand Felix's abnormal familiarity with puzzles.

If she stayed another second, she might begin reevaluating his stupid image in her mind to an intelligent one. She would rather die before that happened. So, she could only exit the memory and reconnect her connection with Felix.

'Asna? It's weird that you are not begging me to use the teleportation circle.'

Befuddled, Felix crouched near the circle while scratching his cheek. He expected that Asna would squeal at him for using it, but she went silent for a while now.

'No need! You won't listen to me anyway.'

'True.'

'Bastard.'

She gritted her teeth and stopped bickering with him. As for mentioning what happened earlier? She wouldn't mention it even if the fate of the universe was based on it. She knew that Felix was merely waiting for her to ask, so he would reply smugly about his childhood.

There was nowhere in hell, she would put herself in that situation.

'Let's hope we find something worth our time.'

Felix decided to focus on the chest after realizing that his chance to brag was not coming. Annoyed, he approached the chest aggressively.

"Don't kick it!" "Don't kick!!" "Don't kick!"...

The spectators yelled with desperation written all over their faces after seeing his hands were in his pockets as he approached the chest.

Smach!!

Zero f*cks given by Felix, as he kicked the lid of the chest wide open. The audience instantly spat and cursed at him. Before long, boos rained on him again.

His fans didn't even make a squeak this time, as they were also low key hating what he did.

Two epic chests were just ruined by his thuggish personality. What's sad was the fact those chests were the only ones found in the game currently. For both of them to end up on Felix's hands, was truly an unfortunate day for the audience.

Felix sighed in relief after seeing no fireworks leaving the chest. Well, it was only natural, as he was currently inside a wall, and with the SGA taking realism dead serious, they wouldn't do so, even if they could.

He waited for a moment, but it seemed that the chest wasn't going to display its content like the one before. So, he put his hand inside and brought everything outside.

'Oh! Not bad at all.'

Delighted, his eyes gleamed as he evaluated the three items in his hands. The first one appeared the same as a chicken leg. If it wasn't for its l.u.s.trous azure color, everyone would mistake it as such.

"Hehe, Malon Chicken fish leg, this one is going to net a good sum."

How could it not?

This leg was one of the few possible ways for nonmarine races to be able to breathe underwater freely without side effects. Though for a limited time.

"Never mind I should probably use it."

His thoughts of selling it were extinguished after recalling games, which had marine-based maps. If he had it in his previous life, he wouldn't have struggled to just survive against the environment.

Satisfied with the first item, he retrieved it inside his bracelet. As for the other two items, one was a small book and the other was an orange shimmering scroll.

"Interesting, Exit navigation ability?"

He opened the book and found out after reading the first page that it was an ability, which uses an arrow to point in the right direction of the exit.

His palms couldn't help but get sweaty after reading that. However, his tense muscles relaxed after finding out that it had only 2 minutes duration.

No one could run from their spot to the exit in 2 minutes unless they were already quite close to it. At that point, this ability was going to be a ticket to the championship.

He wiped his sweaty hands and focused on the scroll. He unsealed it with an eager expression, hoping to be surprised.

"The hell!"

Well, he was surprised alright after seeing a path drawn from his current spot to a red 'X' at the top rightmost corner of the maze, written above it >Legendary Chest<.

Yet his happiness didn't even take root before it got quenched by the long distance between him and the mark.

Based on the scroll, he figured out that his position was near the bottom leftmost of the maze. This meant to reach the chest; he would need to travel the entire map from corner to corner on foot while dealing with beasts, chests, and players on the way. He knew that was impossible to do, especially now that there was a bet ongoing.

Irritated yet again, he kicked the damned chest for giving him such a treasure without the ability to use it. If only he was given the first two items alone, his mood wouldn't be ruined like this.

'Felix there is another way to solve it.'

Asna decided to rejoin the chat after believing that this problem should have offset his focus from the puzzle.

'Don't you dare propose using the circle.'

Felix easily figured out her purpose based on her appeasing sweet tone. Every time she required something for him, she used the same tone.

'Come on, just use it, what are you going to lose? You are already at the worst possible position to get the chest.'

He glanced at the white circle and at the scroll in his hand. He kept switching sight between the two not knowing if it was a worthy venture or not.

Asna had a good point. He understood it clearly as well. But, if he decided to teleport, it meant that he would need to give up on the beasts he marked in this area and start hunting randomly in whichever zone he got teleported at.

It's a big gamble to take. If he succeeds, he would be close to the legendary chest, making the venture worth it. But if he failed, which was actually highly likely to happen, he would end up hunting leftovers of the players in the zone he got teleported into.

If he got lucky, he might find epic rank beasts that no one dared to fight against.

"Whatever."

Helpless, he rubbed his eyelids and entered the circle under the cheers of both Asna and his fans. Both of those bastards only wanted to get entertained, uncaring about the stress of the player.

However, Felix didn't do it for either of them, He only believed that regret awaits him if he missed this chance to open a legendary chest. Especially when he needed a massive amount of GP.

If he failed, so be it, he could just frenzy hunt anything he meets. But if he succeeds, those hardcore players should just give up on the wager.

If epic chest gave 1500 GP, How many more a legendary chest would give Felix?

30 seconds later, Felix's body reassembled from light particles into becoming whole again.

A moment after, He opened his eyes and raised his vigilance to the peak; he began surveying the area with his infrared vision activated to its full potential.

Wall after a wall was being removed from his sight, exposing a 100-meter diameter around him without a single hindrance.

Immediately after, two red lights were laid bare in his predatory eyes. One was at the very tip of his vision, showcasing a weak shape of a quadruped beast, while the other was 70 meters away to his right, displaying a shape of a human.

'Not bad, a beast and a human.'

Satisfied, he smiled and lowered the intensity of his vision to the minimum again. The walls began to reappear until he was sandwiched between two, creating a path that led to a 90 degree two ways cross.

Felix pulled his right sleeve up and clicked on his bracelet, planning to bring out the scroll to check on his position.

Hopeful, he unrolled the scroll wholly, showcasing a new drawn path between him and the chest. The path was the only thing shown on the map, as for the rest of the maze? It appeared foggy, blocking his vision from seeing the paths around his position.

'See?! You should always listen to my advice!'

Felix didn't even get the chance to feel elated about the new path before Asna's proud voice ruined it for him.

'It's just alright. I will still need 1 hour and half at least to reach the chest.'

Annoyed, he snorted and closed the scroll, not wanting to give her the satisfaction of being right. Although he didn't enter the circle due to her advice, Asna would still see it as such and take the credit since she was the first to propose it.

'Hehe, I can taste your salt from this misty popcorn.'

Felix clicked his tongue and stopped bickering with her. There were more pressing issues to take care of now.

'Which one of those two are on the way to the treasure?' He asked.

He didn't want to move until he got a clear objective of what he should do. As for the chest? That was for later.

Felix never planned to just run to it straight, ignoring all the preys in his path. He was not stupid to miss free guarantee GP.

After all, he had no idea which beast was guarding that chest. Hell, it could be a mental type legendary beast, and Felix understood clearly that if it was, the only option he had was to give up on it.

This meant that he would have wasted 1 hour and a half running for nothing. His contenders on the bet were definitely going to surpass him. Forget about Princess Bird, Mastermania who wasn't even in the top 5 could reach him!

Thus, Any prey he met on the way must be killed no matter what!

Chapter 132 - Charm Elementalist!

Asna closed her eyes, as she examined the map of the scroll in her mind. If it wasn't for this cheat, Felix wouldn't have closed the scroll so quickly.

'Hmm, it seems like the human is the closest one to the path. The beast is way off.' She answered.

'Alright, the human it is!'

Felix cracked his knuckles while bending his knees forward. The spectators knew that he was going to sprint through the paths again. Something only he was doing so far.

The rest of the players walked on the ground like they were stepping on eggshells, boring them to death, especially when they had an omnipotent vision.

No one could understand their vexation of knowing that the path was free of traps, yet they had to watch a player, calculating each step he takes.

This was one of the reasons why Felix was still the preferred main target of the camera, even though he gave no heed to their wishes.

However, that was only if there was nothing interesting going on with the rest of the players.

Zoe wasn't unprofessional to focus the camera on Felix who was doing nothing but sprinting while ignoring other juicy dramatic fights.

Just like in this case!

"Who would have known that Charming Sky was the first to find an epic beast after Landlord?" Zoe dragged her finger on the small screen belonging to Charming Sky and put it on the large screen.

As an MC on the verge of promotion to middle Elo, Zoe's eyes were of course top-notch, not missing a thing on those 100 invisible small screens.

After seeing Charming Sky on the screen, the men cheered and whistled, creating a symphony of catcalls. It was about time for beauty to grace the stage!

....

In the very center of a wide-open cross where five paths met, sat a serpent-like beast while coiled around itself, displaying its bestial beauty to all.

It had golden sandy scales gleaming under the sunlight, three white slitless eyes, and a long purple tongue, making hissing sounds each time it came out of its fang-less mouth.

Although the beast was coiled, Charming Sky was not fooled by its two-meters length. She discerned that its real length was probably 6 meters or more.

She was quite close, as the beast statics which was shown on the screen, clearly mentioned that its length was 7.5 meters sharp.

"My little bunnies, I have a mission for you." She smiled alluringly with her eyes shimmering a pinkish color and said to the 6 men surrounding her, "I need you to slay that beast for me. It's blocking my path."

Irritated, Charming Sky saw that the small pink hearts on their eyes dimmed a bit at her request. She knew that her ability was giving in to their struggles.

'F*cking sc.u.mbags, why do you force me to waste more energy?!' Although her thoughts were toxic, her entire visage was a completely different story.

She folded her arms under her chest, lifting her b.r.e.a.s.ts slightly upward, exposing a deep creamy white cleavage. She then bent her head slightly with a cute pout on her glossy lips.

This alluring combination of cuteness and s.e.xiness caused the small pink hearts on those men's eyes to brighten up again, as they ogled her chest with a l.u.s.tful expression.

No one but her was able to see pink particles getting absorbed from her body into those men's eyes.

'Bastards, you better kill it! I lost 40% energy all at once.'

Her pink shimmering eyes dimmed a bit in the process. It was like the small pink hearts were batteries, and she must constantly recharge them with energy if she wanted her requests to be fulfilled.

"As expected from Feather Tail Fox Bloodline." Zoe brought the mic closer to her lips and explained it to those who never heard of it. "This is one of the few remaining tier 2 charm elemental beasts! Plus it is an epic rank!"

"Sadly, the only known method to obtain it is to join the Six Tailed Dream Fox Clan." She covered her mouth and giggled, "Sorry boys, they only accept females."

...

Charming Sky had her hands resting on her h.i.p.s as she kept watching her 6 admirers approach the serpent. Their tensed shoulders and sweaty foreheads were an obvious sign of being terrified by the golden serpent.

Charming Sky neither joined them nor ordered them on how to fight. She simply kept her distance, preparing to bolt the moment shit hit the fan.

She understood clearly that her active ability Unrefusable Request didn't allow her to control men like puppets. But merely turn them into her admirers, who would fulfill her requests. As for how they planned to do so? She had absolutely no clue.

The ability itself just installed a notion in their minds that Charming Sky's requests were the same as heaven decrees, irrefutable, and unquestionable.

However, such a busted ability of course came with a massive price. That was the energy needed to fulfill a request was a proponent to its danger!

If she asked for their death, the price would sap all of her energy, leaving her drained. Even then, the energy wouldn't be enough to force just one into committing suicide.

"That's it, surrounded it like that, good job!"

Her eyes shone with delight at their smart strategy. She wanted to clap her hands to cheer them on, but she was afraid about attracting the serpent's attention.

Based on its slitless white eyes, she easily figured out that it was blind, and those blind beasts were the hardest to deal with, as their other senses were enhanced over the top. Not a single whisper, smell, and even an air vibration could bypass them.

'Good, they were not total morons to rush it from one side as I assumed. I might have a chance to kill it.'

Thrilled at that thought, she clenched her hands tightly. She had no idea if Felix was still rank 1 or not, but she was certain that by killing this beast, her rank would jump straight to rank 1.

Ssssss!

However, before she went too deep in her imagination, an ear-piercing sound brought her to reality. She crouched down and pressed her palms tightly on her ears, trying her best to alleviate the ringing noise that was playing on her brain over and over again.

'What the hell is this?! Is it an ability or normal hissing sound?'

Frightened, she stood up and distanced herself even further, totally abandoning her minions behind. She truly made a grave mistake by sticking next to battle with her trashy defenses.

After seeing that she was quite far enough, she stopped and leaned next to the wall's corner, peeking at the unfolding battle with one eye.

Zoe and the spectators didn't know whether to laugh or cry at this sight. How could she be this scaredy-cat?

The serpent merely hissed as a warning for over-stepping its territory. It wasn't even an attacking attempt. The six players surrounding the serpent with unbothered expressions was the perfect proof.

"Cough, Charming Sky made the right decision." Zoe tried her best to keep a serious expression as she defended her, "As a mental type fighter, one should always keep a safe distance from the battle. Although, not as much as hers. But who are we to judge?"

The spectators guffaw at her claim for a bit before quietening down at the sight of the serpent uncoiling itself, standing on its tail proudly and towering over the six men, akin to rats in its presence.

Calamity Wind Storm... Blizzard Vortex.... Claws of the Fury... Bronze Wall.... Barrier of Renewal... Hellfire Salvo!

They didn't wait for it to make a move, as each one of them activated their abilities, wanting to strike first!

Those with morphing abilities rushed forward, unbothered by the massive pressure the serpent kept emitting. As melee fighters, they were already used to this kind of pressure.

Meanwhile, the elemental rangers used all of their attacks at once, creating a messy battlefield, filled with wind storms, icy vortex, and flames raging all around the serpent.

The melee fighters were not worried about getting affected by their allies' abilities, as they had defensive barriers on them created by supportive type players.

This kind of basic synergy between them was only working because they were using a foundation formation everyone had an idea of.

Melee fighters at the forefront, offensive rangers at the middle, and supportive players at the back end. This division of labor allowed even random players like them to fight as a team without stepping on each other's toes.

Thrilled and entertained, the audience cheered at this spectacular sight with their hands waving in the air.

Individual games might be fun, but it would never surpass the popularity of planetary type games, just because of those abilities combination and teamwork, especially when humans had a limited number of abilities in their arsenal. Only in planetary games where bloodline abilities truly shone, as synergy between teammates was well endorsed.

Ssssss!

The serpent raised its head and hissed in agony and fury as it being was assaulted by a rain of never-ending projectiles.

The rangers didn't plan to stop their attacks until the serpent either drop dead or they drop drained!

Excited, Charming Sky thumped her fist in the air, as she cheered them on.

SSSSSSSSSS!

However, after hearing that ear-piercing sound again, she closed her eyes and obediently retrieved her fists. Then she covered her ears with an aggrieved expression.

'Bastard, you only know how to bully me! I dare you to fight my mi..nio..ns...'

Suddenly, her tongue was tied as she saw a horrifying sight of an infinite amount of golden sand, oozing from the cracks of the serpent's scales!

It didn't even take thirty seconds before the area got turned into a deep knee desert. Yet, the serpent didn't stop releasing sand but actually increased its speed, trying to bury everyone alive!

Glacial land... Heat Furnace... Skin of Bronze... Floating Sphere...

The players used whatever in their pocket to get them out of this raging tsunami of sand. Even though the easiest method was to simply retreat to the paths behind them, they couldn't do so.

The request forbade them from having any thoughts of escape!

Thus, they could only try and defend themselves from the sand, using any means possible. One of them floated in a see-through sphere while another hardened his skin as bronze.

Each to their own.

"The Blind Terror Serpent is finally making its move!!"

Stirred, Zoe slammed her palm on the commentary table, as she watched the serpent dive deep within the self-created desert, hiding out of sight!

She knew that an upcoming massacre was about to occur. The first attack of the serpent was merely the beginning of those players' nightmare.

It was time for the predator to make everyone realize why epic beasts should not be messed with by any average joe!

Chapter 133 - Raging SandStorm!

Scared shitless, the players stood above the sand with heartbeats racing and tense limbs. Their eyes kept shifting from a sand dun to another, trying to catch a glimpse at the predator underneath them. Unfortunately, only rolling waves of sand covered their vision.

There was absolutely no sign of the serpent's whereabouts. This feeling of knowing that they were being watched without the ability to discern from where caused their already tense limbs to stiffen even further.

They would rather have the beast towering over them as before than hide underneath their feet like this.

Seconds went by and the only thing that was still making its presence heard, was the sound of the desert getting larger and spreading wider.

The serpent was acting the same as a chef, preparing the ingredients meticulously before cooking them off. However, its way of doing things was putting a dent in those players' mentality.

Their gut feeling screamed at them to leave this death trap. Yet, their bodies were as unresponsive as a log. Find authorized novels in , faster updates, better experience, Please click #!_48190180611375856 for visiting.

Zoe and the spectators all went quiet as well. No one made a single sound, as their eyes were fixated on the serpent that was swimming within the sand, unhindered like a fish in the ocean. Few whispers were thrown here and there about who was the lucky player to get picked up first.

Suddenly, their eyes brightened up, as they noticed the serpent slithering towards a player that had a frozen area of sand around him.

The player was putting his entire focus on freezing the sand underneath him, so the serpent wouldn't pop out straight under his feet.

Too bad, his proactive defensive attempt made the serpent put its focus on him first. It sensed that it shouldn't let him continue building his defenses around him. Otherwise, it would affect its final attack.

Thus, the poor lad just shot himself in the foot, as the serpent used its long golden tail like a whip, sending it towards his feet.

Boom, Crack!

The frozen sand broke into small pieces, as the tail kept penetrating it without a single ounce of resistance.

Frightened, the player tried to jump in the air after sensing that his defenses were getting ruptured within moments. However, before he reached even one-meter mid-air, the tail latched into his waist and dragged him down, burying him out of sight in an instant.

It happened so fast, the others in the area didn't even catch a glimpse at the serpent. The only thing their eyes kept feeding them was a two-meter hole left behind after that deadly and hidden ambush.

The open cross was engulfed in an ever creepier silence. Gulping sounds were heard here and there, as the players were on the verge of a mental breakdown. Their mind and instinct kept clashing for control over their bodies.

Their instinct kept sending signals to retreat as fast as possible. Meanwhile, their minds refused to disobey Charming's request.

This constant war was taking a toll on their bodies, leaving them unfocused and weakened. They already had a null chance of slaying the serpent with their basic synergy, but now, it was simply a fat joke!

They were just sitting ducklings in the eyes of the spectators, waiting for their turn to get dragged deep within the sand.

Worried, Charming Sky kept biting her nails while observing this trashy display of skills. In her eyes, there were plenty of ways they could rely on to counter-attack the serpent ambushing techniques.

The easiest and fastest way, was of course to use a bait to drag the serpent out and bombard it with a barrage of elemental abilities.

They could simply make their front-liner taunt the beast underneath while having every defensive ability on him or ready to activate.

The serpent with its top-notch hearing would not miss his voice, and after constant provocative attempts, the serpent was definitely not going to spar him.

If that happened, the rangers with all of their strongest offensive abilities would have an easy time barraging it after it exposes itself.

This was merely one of the many ways this battle could have played out. But those strategies only worked for well-trained teams.

As for those randoms who weren't even able to control their own decisions properly? Forget about having synergy with each other, they didn't even have a proper synergy between their bodies and instinct!

This was one of the many weaknesses of Charming Sky's bloodline. The players' gut feeling always gets in the way of her request, thus lowering their strength by at least 60%. This issue only crops up during those kinds of difficult battles.

Charming Sky knew so as well but didn't want to admit it. She would rather blame the stupidity of her minions than to accept that her bloodline was flawed.

Unfortunately for her, the Terror Serpent wasn't in the mood to entertain her ego, as its preparation for her final attack was finally over.

the desert that was enlarging within eyesight abruptly stopped, leaving the players worried about this unknown action and the spectators holding their breath in anticipation.

"It is coming!!!!"

Thrilled, Zoe pointed with a slender finger at the serpent, which buried deep down start to coil around itself until it was squeezed into merely one meter and a half.

The cracks on its scales opened up yet again, but this time instead of releasing sand, it withdrew it!!!

Whoosh! Whoosh!...

If before, the sand oozing speed was fast, then its withdrawal was at least ten times that!

Yet, the scary part wasn't even this, but the fact that the sand was whirling in the process, creating a horrifying sandstorm!

The players' defenses meant jack shit in front of this raging storm that was traveling 750km/h. Their bodies were all flung in the air and revolved around the center of the serpent's position.

The weaker ones defensive-wise, had their body's limbs all ripped apart in a cruel fashion, spraying blood and pieces of flesh in the air just to be obliterated by the storm. As for the rest of the players, their skin was being peeled slowly by the sand particles, which were battering them in a consistent manner.

"Ahh.!..."

The moment one of them opened his mouth, trying to scream over this torturous way of dying, sand assaulted the inside of his body through his mouth!

If only swallowing sand was the end, it wouldn't have mattered that much. Sadly, it wasn't even close, as the sand inside his stomach kept trying to withdraw to the serpent's scales as well!

This resulted in having a mini storm inside the body too, destroying every organ insight.

Ooooooh!

Mortified, the audience's heads all drew back while hissing at the sight of that player's guts, exploding akin to eating a hand grenade.

He died instantly!

But he shouldn't feel too sad, as the rest accompanied him within a few seconds in between, leaving the sandstorm raging all by itself.

On the other hand, Charming Sky was already one km away from them and was still running barefoot while holding her high heels under her armpit.

She stood true to her word and escaped the moment shit hit the fan.

After seeing the desert stopped enlarging, her gut feeling told her that it was time to bolt. And bolt she did without questions asked.

She didn't care in the slightest about stepping on traps as the only thought in her mind was to be as far as possible from that damned serpent.

She truly overestimated her strength and her bloodline in thinking that it was enough to handle an epic tier 2 beast.

'Who can win against this monster?! Screw you, Landlord, you baited me!!'

Riled up and displeased, she gritted her teeth while checking from time to time behind her back.

Her displeasure was understandable, as she believed that since Felix could beat an epic beast solo, wasn't even easier for her team to do the same?

After all, she had six bloodliners under her thumb and all of them weren't too shabby.

Unfortunately, that thought was utterly extinguished from her mind after her team got played by the serpent without even wounding it that heavily.

Right now, she wanted nothing but to beat up Felix for baiting her into that death trap. She already placed all the blame on poor Felix, who had no idea about any of this.

Charming Sky's personality was still as irresponsible and egoist as ever. She would rather blame innocents than take the blame on herself.

"That's too unfortunate for Charming Sky." Zoe shook her head and highlighted Charming's statics on the screen. She pointed at the energy index and explained, "She consumed too much energy during that fight. Her energy now is not even 30%. If she won the battle that would still be alright." She sighed, "But now, she is definitely eliminated from the wager. There is nothing much she could do."

Although the spectators were disappointed at her early disqualification from the bet, they still cheered for her since she gave them a terrific fight to watch.

Though it was more like a one-sided slaughter, it was still pretty entertaining to watch.

Chapter 134 - Meeting Up With The Devil Himself

After a while, Charming Sky could be seen having a really tough time in the maze while acting frugal with her remaining energy. She kept her guard heightened to the peak, not daring to underestimate anything.

Heck, even one bullet could straight out kill her. She had not a single defensive passive or active ability, the only thing that set her body apart from commoners was the physical enhancement after she reached the 1st stage of replacement.

Nonetheless, that buff meant jack shit in front of those traps and other players' attacks. Before, she was acting c.o.c.ky because she had her minions with her, protecting her on the journey, but now, she could only rely on herself.

'I will use Alluring Perfume for a bit. I don't feel safe at all. I need meat shields!'

Desperate and quite terrified of the creepy silence around her, she leaned against a wall and activated the ability, which allowed her to gather that many men around her this early in the game.

Whoosh

An invisible pinkish smoke began to exude from her body's pores like she was releasing her natural fragrance.

This smoke unlike Felix's aura didn't stop within few meters but kept spreading wider and wider until none of it was near her.

The bait was laid bare, the only thing left was for men to smell it, and see if their mental defenses were enough to protect them from its enchantment.

If not, their fates were known already.

After a while of waiting, Charming began to lose hope. She understood that her ability was not foolproof, as it couldn't continue spreading to infinity.

Rather, it had a limited range as well, just a quite wide one. Based on her cheapskate use of energy, this range shrunk even further, thus she knew that her attempt was merely a shot in the dark.

Pitter, Patter...

Suddenly, a clear set of footsteps echoed in Charming Sky's ears akin to heavenly bells ringing to welcome her into its gate.

She never thought in her life that the sound of walking would appear pleasing and lovable until this moment.

'Please be a front-liner player.'

Excited and somewhat hopeful, she rushed to the corner of the wall and peeked at her prey with one eye.

"Hello there."

Too bad, a simple easy-going greeting sent her into the depth of despair. She knew that men controlled by her ability were not supposed to speak! This meant the player in front of her withstood her ability!

Yet, what pushed her even deeper within the abyss, was the fact that the damned voice belonged to the player she blamed her misfortune on him!

Landlord!!!

Her heart almost leaped out of her throat, as she saw him raising his hand. She thought he would launch a surprise attack on her since they were quite close to each other. But he just waved his hand as a greeting.

"What's up with you?" Felix approached her casually and said, "I thought you would have a bunch of men around you."

Charming Sky wasn't fooled by his nonchalant attitude. She sensed that her life would immediately be snuffed out if he reached her side. So, she stepped back while having the most beautiful smile she could muster.

"Stop jesting Mr. Lord. I am not that kind of woman." She giggled with one hand covering her mouth, and the other lowkey removing her high heels. She had to wear a provocative outfit in order for her abilities to take effect much faster without wasting too much of her energy. But now, she started to regret not just wearing sneakers or boots like the rest.

Felix didn't know whether to laugh or cry at this sight. He could only speechlessly watch her loosen up her heels' strings, clearly planning to bolt from his sight.

'It seems like something happen to her to be this fearful.' He smirked and created one milky white bomb in his pocket. 'Might as well enjoy this freebie.'

Felix never had the thought of sparing her. He was a true gentleman, who respected women's rights of equality. Thus, she deserved to be treated the same way he treated men!

"Mr. Lord, how about we create a partnership?" Charming Sky extended her hand forward, seeking a handshake, and said with a smile, "With my mental abilities and your legendary bloodline, our combination would dominate this game." She quickly added after seeing that he wasn't responding, "I don't care about the bet anymore. You can obtain all the GP we find."

Unfortunately for her, Felix didn't forget the rules of the wager just because she was a beauty with a bit of her skin exposed.

Creating alliances to hunt down beasts was forbidden! Felix had no plans to switch to hunting players to appease her.

"No thank you." Indifferent, he dropped all facade and threw his bomb as suddenly as his response.

Poof!

Charming Sky pinched her nose and closed her mouth shut, not daring to breathe in the inducement. However, before she could even exit the white mist that was blocking her vision, a hand suddenly clutched her neck tightly and lifted her in the air like she weighed absolutely nothing.

This was the fate of every mental type player. A total submission under the hands of melee type players.

Just as Felix wanted to snap her neck, he saw her mouthed a word soundlessly as she was being choked.

A bit interested in what she said, he hurled her towards the wall, smashing her body against it.

Thud, Argh!

A pained groan escaped from her lips, as she leaned against the wall with a drop of blood streaking down her chin, coming from her mouth.

Felix crouched next to her with one acid bomb hovering near her face and asked, "What do you mean by Epic?"

That was the word she mouthed earlier. Felix decided to give her a shot and speak her piece since he had nothing to lose but a couple of seconds. However, if she lied to him to buy some time for her eventful death, he didn't mind ruining her pretty face with that acid bomb before killing her.

Frighted out of her wits by his thuggishness, Charming Sky didn't even wipe the blood from her mouth as she began explaining with a bit of difficulty, "You were right...cough! I had six men with me before. But they all died after they failed to slay an epic serpent." She increased her pace after seeing the bomb etching closer to her face. "Please let me go! I can lead you to it."

Sob, Sob...

Finally not being able to handle the pressure, her tears started flooding down while sobbing out loud like she was being mistreated.

Slap!

Just as she wanted to wail to enhance her pitfall appearance, a sudden slap silenced her immediately.

"My patience is thin. You better be quiet and lead the way if you don't want your face to melt."

Felix knew that she was just trying to gain his sympathy by her appearing as such. But he didn't have time to waste on appeasing her gently. A slap was enough as a shortcut.

"Show me the direction."

Felix caught her hand and lifted her up.

"Ouch!"

She yelped at his rough way of doing it. But she could only hide her grievance in her heart and point at the path on their left.

Felix nodded his head and ordered sternly, "If you don't want to die by the traps or my bomb, stick close to me."

Without giving her a second to comprehend what he meant, Felix pointed his finger at her face, and the acid bomb started hovering slightly near it. Felix was using his energy to control it, just like the way Noah used his energy to carry that behemoth Ice Mace before.

The moment an ability was released from the body, the bloodliner could control it by his energy. Not manipulate the ability itself, but only how it moved. Felix always had a connection with his bombs before they exploded. If it wasn't for so, how was he supposed to blow them up manually?

Spooked, Charming Sky gulped a mouthful as she stared at this deadly threatening attempt. She understood clearly that the moment Felix turned his head and didn't see her behind him, he wouldn't hesitate to pop it off.

'But what did he mean by getting killed by traps? If we walked slowly we don't have to worry about th...'

Before her mind could even process what he meant, she saw him sprint on the path, leaving her behind.

Speechless and quite scared at the bomb exploding abruptly, she chased after him with one hand waving frantically, "Wait for me!!!"

Chapter 135 - F*ck Him Up For Me Blindy!

Charming Sky immediately apologized with her hands folded after seeing Landlord's fists clutched tight. She knew that he was livid at her direction mistakes she kept repeating over and over again. This was already the 5th one.

Felix didn't mind the first time, but after it happened twice, trice and it kept going on and on, he began to feel cheated honestly. After all, he activated his heat vision to its full potential more than twice now, but still, not a single sign of the serpent she spoke about was in his vision. He couldn't help but doubt her a bit and think that all of this was just a farce to prolong her life.

"Oh yes! we are near!" Charming pointed her finger at an image on a wall and explained with relieved expression, "I remember that picture clearly, as I leaned on it to wear my high heels before." She moved past him and said with a confident smile, "Please follow me, the beast is only a few hundred meters ahead of us."

Felix unclutched his fists and decided to trust her words one last time, if it turned that she lied to him again, he wouldn't hesitate to explode that acid bomb on her face.

"Lead the way." He ordered with a frigid tone.

Charming wasn't bothered by it, as this time she was certain about her direction. Without further ado, she walked with haste, unworried about stepping on the traps. She was certain that Landlord had an x-ray vision, as each time they were in front of a trap, he warned her before they bypassed it.

Now, Although she was leading the way, she was confident that Landlord wouldn't let her die by them. Otherwise, who would show him the path?

If only she knew that Felix's ability allowed him to see everything within 100 meters diameter for a couple of seconds, she wouldn't be that c.o.c.ky on her worth.

He could simply ditch her and find the beast by himself, but Felix didn't want to go that far unless she f.u.c.k.i.e.d it up. His mental energy and time would be consumed if he decided to go solo from henceforth. So, it was better to let her lead him on.

"May I ask you something?"

"Uhm?"

Charming Sky gathered her courage and laid out the confusion that was eating her up, since the moment she met him. "Why weren't you affected by my perfume ability?" She tilted her head and added, "As a poison element user, I doubt you have any mental defensive abilities right?"

"Oh? You mean that disgusting scent I followed? hell, I thought it was coming from a beast." He looked at her strangely and said, "I have no idea where did you get that confidence to call that smell a perfume." "Screw you! I asked you why you weren't affected by it, not to humiliate my ability!" Charming Sky snapped at him, uncaring anymore about his threatening acid bomb.

For a woman like her who relied on beauty and charm in her daily life, to get her ability that was more like a body fragrance degraded like this was intolerable.

"Huh, I was just being honest." Felix chuckled at her tantrum and answered her previous question, "As for how I bypassed your ability control, it was simple actually." He asked her first, "does your ability need to be absorbed by the body to affect the host?"

Confused at where he was getting at, she nodded her head in agreement. "It must be smelled to be specific. That's why it is called perfume."

"that's your answer." He shrugged his shoulders and didn't add anything extra to it.

It wasn't his problem if she understood what he meant or not, he already entertained her inquiry for quite enough.

After seeing that he wasn't planning to explain himself, she didn't bother to continue her questioning. However, her mind was at full capacity trying to figure out his meaning.

For a shrewd fox like her, who relied on intelligence and beauty to battle, she easily figured out his meaning by connecting the dots together.

First, she recalled that Felix had an advanced or even peak resistance to poison based on what she had seen in the first game.

This meant that her perfume ability was resisted by his body after it got labeled as 'poison' even though it was a mind-affecting ability! After all, her ability needed to be smelled in order to take effect. In other words, absorption was a must!

Displeased, She frowned her eyebrows at this conclusion. She knew that her bloodline was full of limitations since it was a low tiered for such a good element.

The beast she merged with, might appear strong and unique in the eyes of commoners, but only she knew that wasn't even true. The high tiered bloodlines she saw in her clan had mental abilities stronger than hers by far.

'Lucky bastard, if I had epic rank tier 3 bloodline, my controlling abilities would straight out target your brain without this absorption bullshit.'

Irritated, she increased her speed, wanting to get rid of his smug face as fast as possible. In her mind, that was how she pictured his face.

Indifferent, Felix chased after her, disinterested in finding out the reason for her weird behavior.

....

After a couple of minutes, the same massive Intersection, which was connected to multiple paths, appeared in their point of view.

"Oh?"

Surprised by the looks of the serpent Felix raised an eyebrow. It turned out, he fought this beast before in his previous life. Though, he was more like a spectator while his clan-mates were the ones fighting it.

"Am I allowed to leave now?" Charming Sky asked with a hushed tone while hiding behind a wall a couple of meters away from him. The serpent truly scared her shitless to act like this even though they were quite distant away from it.

Felix didn't even turn his head and glance at this scaredy-cat. He just waved his hand dismissively, shoos her away. However, she didn't move an inch.

"Cough, can you remove the bomb please?"

"Oh I forgot, my bad."

Felix chuckled at her displeased expression and snapped his finger. His sudden action made her heart skip a beat.

She reflexively closed her eyes with her hands raised in front of her face, expecting the bomb to explode. Yet, the only sound she heard was Felix's footsteps as he approached the serpent with his hands in his pockets.

She opened her eyes to this sight and stood stunned in her place. She thought before, that he would ask her about how the battle went, and decide whether to fight the serpent or not after hearing her minions' tragic fates. But, it turned out he wasn't even interested in gaining an understanding of the serpent.

'C.o.c.ky moron.' she sneered, 'Just because you have a legendary Bloodline, you thought this battle will be easy?' She sat down with her back glued to the wall and gloated, 'I can't wait to see your arrogance shatter to pieces.'

Her plan to bolt after he released her was totally ignored, as she raised her fist in the air while cheering out loud, "F*ck him up for me Blindy!"

Her fear of the serpent was instantly replaced by kinship to the point she even gave him a pet name. She truly wanted Felix to die as horrible as her minions did.

Just as Felix tried turning his head to glance at that trouble maker, an ear-piercing alert resounded throughout the entire maze.

'PEEEP! 'PEEEP!'...

Without a second wasted, Felix retreated away from the serpent. He knew that his body would freeze immediately after the alert finishes. He was not a fool to stay in close proximity to the serpent when that happens.

After all, Zoe explained before that beasts were completely free to move during the shuffle duration.

Before long, Felix stood in the middle of the path away from the walls. He didn't know if the walls were going to shuffle by moving around, or they would all disappear and reposition randomly. Regardless, The safest place to stand was away from them.

If it wasn't for the serpent sitting on the open intersection, he would have chosen that spot.

Charming Sky rushed to his side and stood next to him. Her thought process was completely different than Felix's. She believed that others would be able to spot them after the walls reshuffled.

This meant bad news for her if they saw her all alone. So, it was in her best interest to stick next to Felix and give them a false sense of partnership.

Even though she didn't want to admit it, she understood that his name was enough to deter 80% of the players!

Chapter 136 - The First Walls Shuffle!

If Felix had his attention on her, those pathetic attempts to take advantage of him would not be missed by him. However, his focus was entirely on the walls around him. How could he miss this chance to mark new prey without wasting his mental energy?

"You focus on that direction."

He pointed a finger at his back without turning his head. Charming Sky understood what he meant and fixed her head in that direction. Their heads might be frozen in the shuffle but their eyes were free to roam.

'PEEEEEP!'

The moment that last alert was heard, the maze rumbled akin to a 7.5 magnitude earthquake struck its core. The Walls which were towering over them kept shaking as they split up into multiple parts. Each one moved in a different direction and got affixed with other parts, creating a new wall that led to a totally new direction.

Felix and Charming Sky stood like ants between those behemoths moving around in a specific order.

Suddenly their eyes widened in horror, as two parts of the wall were heading towards them without any plans to change direction. They were going to get sandwiched by them!

'Felix I never thought you would die like this.'

Even in this messed up situation, Asna didn't forget to take jabs at him. Felix uncaring about her mocking tone kept staring at the wall that was closing in with his heart about to leap out of his throat.

'F*ck meeeee!!'

Just as the wall was about to make contact with his face, his body turned illusionary, bypassing the wall in one piece unharmed.

The audience and Zoe laughed at this sight that was happening all over the maze. Felix shouldn't feel that bad, as some players teared up or even pissed their pants in fear of being squashed to paste by two walls.

'Not a bad prank honesty.'

Instead of being furious at being played like this, Felix just chuckled in his mind.

For Felix who pranked his cousins at least hundreds of times in his childhood, this meant that he was more tolerant to others pranking him as well. He wasn't a cry baby to throw a tantrum over such a harmless prank, especially when he did the same to others.

That being said, Felix's reaction was an exception, as those players, who were publicly humiliated did not see Zoe's prank in a favorable manner.

Each one of them had their own way of getting their revenge. The first and most straightforward method was to deny her interview after the game ends. Find authorized novels in , faster updates, better experience, Please click #!_48263420826407517 for visiting.

Zoe had no idea that her prank had just resulted in creating mass enmity. She didn't inform them about their bodies turning illusionary, so she could display this sign to the spectators.

In her mind, it was simply a harmless prank to bring some laughs.

Too bad, she underestimated the reaction of the players. It was beyond her wildest dreams that some players would actually piss themselves due to horror.

But who could blame them?

To see yourself getting turned into a paste without the ability to move or the luxury to scream was a fate far worse than falling off a cliff.

'Haha! Felix, you should have seen that man in front of us, he was really crying his eyes out.' Asna guffawed as she rolled on the bed.

Being reminded of so, Felix turned off his infrared vision to be able to see the faces of players within his line of sight. After all, his passive showed him only black and white colors. It wasn't optimal in this scenario.

'12 Players, three partnersh.i.p.s, and two alliances.' He swiftly figured out the composition of those 12 players in front of him.

Every two players marked a partnership and three players or above marked an alliance. Not a single one of them was going solo. At this point in the game, meeting up with at least one player was normal.

Since this game supported alliances, there was no reason not to group up and kill beasts together. As long as the exit was not found, the partnersh.i.p.s were as solid as a rock.

Just like Felix sizing them up, they were also doing the same. The only difference was that Felix had absolutely no clue about their names, while they had instantly recognized him. His hoodie with that smirky emoji gave him away.

Regardless of being close to him, no one had the thought of meeting up or challenging him. They would be glad if he treated their existence like dirt and ignored them.

They just wanted to hunt rare beasts peacefully. But one of them had a totally different approach, as she fixated her delighted eyes on Felix.

'Hehe, let's see if you are going to reject me again Mastermania.' A beautiful lady with shoulder-length silky smooth black hair and wearing a tight purple leather outfit smirked in her mind.

She tried to look behind her back to gaze at Mastermania, who stood with focused eyes at those in front of him.

It turned out, he was this near to Felix! Yet he didn't even know about it as Felix was in the direction his partner was responsible for.

Felix also had no idea that Mastermania was in front of him due to the same reason. But honestly, even if he knew, he was completely disinterested in fighting it out with that phony. His ears were too precious for him to expose them to that cringy drama queen.

If before, he planned to kill him to bump up his popularity, now it wasn't even worth the effort of listening to him reciting rehearsed catchphrases for his fans' enjoyment.

Fighting with idols was always a pain in the ass, not to just Felix but to every player. But some sacrifices were required to obtain that fast popularity bump.

....

After 10 seconds exactly, the entire maze's walls were all pieced up together, reshuffling everything, paths, puzzles, riddles, traps positions, beasts positions, and more. It was like they just dropped in it without any idea where to go and where to step.

Felix massaged his neck after gaining mobility again. He turned around and saw that Charming was stretching her s.e.xy exposed legs in front of him with a playful smile.

Yet, Felix's indifferent expression didn't change a bit, as Asna's legs were by far the s.e.xiest and prettiest legs he saw in his life.

In comparison to Asna's ones, Charming's legs truly appeared like wooden sticks. She must step up her game if she wanted to tempt him.

"Remove your sticks from my face and tell me how many players you saw." Stoic, he ordered her while tapping on his bracelet, trying to create his own alarm on the shuffle's alarm.

Dumbfounded, Charming Sky froze in her position not knowing how to react to him resembling her most prized asset to sticks!

'Sticks, Sticks, Sticks...' It kept repeating in her mind, and each time it sounded more humiliating than before.

Abruptly, a finger snap near her face brought her back to reality. She looked at Felix standing before her with a bomb in his hand.

"Don't make me repeat myself. Tell me the number, and get out of my sight." His frigid voice made her realize that he was not joking around.

Irrked at his rough way of speaking to her, she threw her hair behind arrogantly and told him the number while walking away from him. "I saw 6 players grouped up in front of a rare beast and 2 others with wounds on them."

The moment she put a significant distance between them, she gave him the middle finger and bolted away, not planning to stay near to see his reaction.

'That girl is truly a piece of art.' Asna sneered sarcastically.

'Whatever, let's go search for that serpent.'

Unbothered, Felix reactivated his infrared vision and pushed it to the limit to survey a hundred meters around him.

Although the maze shuffle hid the serpent's whereabouts, Felix was confident in finding it again faster than before. After all, no matter how large the displacement was, it would never go beyond a hundred meters.

As he assumed, the serpent was lying in the same position, coiled around itself 70 meters away from him. If his infrared vision didn't belong to a primogenitor, a supreme being, Felix would have found it difficult to spot the serpent as it had cold blood instead of hot one like the rest.

The waves of energy the serpent kept releasing were more than enough to give itself away.

He licked his lips in anticipation and sprinted towards his prey. It was time to make the Terror Serpent realize that Felix was the alpha serpent in this maze!

....

A couple of hundred meters away from Felix...

"Guess who I just saw?"

Curious, Mastermania turned his head and glanced at his partner. "Who?"

She moved around him with her hands folded behind her back. But she didn't say anything, she simply kept smiling mischievously, trying to get him more curious.

Too bad, her attempt backfired as Mastermania turned his head away and continued walking forward with a disinterested expression. He already had his fans on his back to entertain, and he wasn't in the mood to entertain another one. So, his curiosity dies as fast as it appeared.

"Come on! Don't be like this." The girl chased after him and said with a smug smile, "Hehe, I saw Landlord!!"

She lifted her chin, waiting to get praised over her effort, but the only thing she received was a frigid look she never expected would appear on Mastermania's handsome face!

Chapter 137 - Princess Bird vs The Glacial Bane Tree!

Shaken, she gulped and narrated everything she saw without having him say anything. "He was standing with a girl. Probably his partner. I didn't see her face as she was looking in another direction."

"Distance?"

He approached her with an ever-growing chilling aura. Meanwhile, his face was as aloof as ever, not showing a single hint of emotion.

Even that frigid look was a slip that he quickly hid. Now, his face appeared the same as always. Yet she found that his entire demeanor was completely different. He resembled a suppressed volcano that was about to erupt at any moment.

She backed away from him and leaned against the Wall. She avoided eye contact and answered with an uncertain voice, "I think between 200 meters to 300 meters?"

Slightly irked at this distance, he tightened his fists for a second then released them with a long exhale from his nose. He understood that to reach Felix, the distance would widen from what she said to 600 meters or even a km!

The twisted and complex paths were no joke, as they need to knead through multiple ones to reach the position she saw him at before. However, would Felix stay in his place and wait for them? Not a fat chance.

This meant the task of finding him would only get harder and more troublesome since Felix could be at this point, anywhere in a one km radius in front of them.

"My dear fans, I think it's time to pay a visit to Landlord." He moved away from his partner and put his hand on his shadow.

"He still owns me a handshake after all." He smiled and called out loud, "Emerge and hunt down my enemy!!"

Shadowlings!

20 cm human-shaped shadows started to arise from Mastermania's shadow, creating ripples each time one of them appeared. The sight resembled baby turtles coming out of a shallow pond.

Mastermania's fans cheered at this sight with flushed cheeks in excitement. They recognized this ability, as he used it before to locate the beasts around him.

Although before, the number of shadowlings he created was few in comparison to this army that he kept creating nonstop.

They knew if he released them all, Felix's position should be found effortlessly. Simply because those little things could sense shadows and travel through them unhindered!

If Mastermania released only tens of them, the entire area around him would be under his surveillance. Don't even mention the hundreds that he just created.

"I think this should be enough."

Mastermania lifted his hand from his shadow and eyed with a hint of elation at the little things bouncing and colliding with each other.

Despite wasting 45% of his energy to create this staggering amount, it was all worth it in his eyes if he managed to locate Felix.

He might not have said anything when Felix humiliated him, but his heart was never settled about the treatment he received in public. He was dying to pay him back in the most humiliating way possible. This opportunity couldn't be missed no matter what.

"Go!" He ordered.

The shadowlings collided and stomped on each other while they moved towards the shadows in the walls. Mastermania displayed a small smirk as he saw his babies submerge themselves in those shadows until not one of them remained near him.

"Let's follow them, Miss Sassy."

He brushed his palms together and walked step by step towards the previous position Felix was at. Miss Sassy nodded her head and followed him with a blush, moved by his handsome visage and charisma of dealing with his injustice first before focusing on the wager.

Meanwhile, the fan club of Felix and Mastermania all held their breaths in eagerness and anticipation for their idols to clash.

The only downside about the epic fight that was about to happen was that Zoe had the camera focused on Princess Bird.

But they couldn't boo her about it as the princess was about to fight an epic beast solo!

A fight worth watching more so than Felix's battle against the serpent and the upcoming idol clash. Simply because she was a legendary bloodliner as well!

And every player with a legendary bloodline was a primary focal point for the camera. The only reason Zoe wasn't paying attention to Princess Bird before was due to her slaying rare beasts with one ability. Nothing more, nothing less.

The fights were boring and quite lackluster. But now, the spectators would fry her alive if she switched the camera to anyone! Not even for Felix.

They already saw his bloodline and understood everything about it. The only things that were still piquing their interest were his last ability and new inducements. However, they would rather watch the infamous Princess Bird in action than to watch him terrorize the Blind Serpent.

They did not doubt that Felix would bully the serpent even though they saw how strong it was. After all, The Iron Titan was by far the strongest Epic beast in the maze, yet he still demolished it solo.

their memory was still fresh on how it went!

....

"Ten meters left and Princess will come face to face with the Glacial Bane Tree!"

Zoe brought the camera closer to the beast to highlight its strange features for all to see. The beast had a body completely made of crystal see-through ice. But the strange thing about it was the fact that its shape was based on a Maple Tree!

Roots, branches, stems, and even leaves were made of ice! If anyone saw it without knowing that it was a beast, they were going to definitely assume it as a tree sculpture.

"What you are seeing right now is the famously known dual elemental beast!" Zoe said.

"Whoa! It can use ice and plant elements?! That's so nutty!"

"I understand the ice element, but how is it going to use plant element as well with those features?"

The spectators couldn't help but let out gasps of exclamation and wonder at Zoe's declaration. It was clear to them that the beast was an ice Elementalist.

However, they just couldn't figure out how the plant element was going to be used by it. After all, there was not a hint of greenish color on its body. Everything was ice-based, even its interior!

Interior?!

They gaped with bulging eyes at the interior of the beast that was in full display, trying to see if he had any organs. Nonetheless, they couldn't see a single one, not even its heart!

"I wanted to explain why the Glacial Tree had no organs, but Princess Bird is about to make a move!"

Zoe brought the camera to Princess and said, "Everything will be clear after this fight! You just need to pay attention, and don't forget to cheer!"

The spectators stopped bothering about the tree, and laid their eyes on Princess Bird, waiting and hoping to be amazed.

Princess Bird didn't disappoint their expectation, as, by the time she made eye contact with the tree, she called softly, "Wings of the Apex Eagle, grace me with your presence."

Saphire Apex Wings!

Her exposed back, suddenly began to morph and warp, as flesh was torn and blood streamed down.

Whoosh!

Saphire feather-like wings protruded from her back, extending for at least 1 meter on each side.

if it wasn't for the blood staining its breathtaking outlook, the sight would appear more pleasing to the spectators.

Blood?

The spectators quickly focused on her facial expression, trying to see if she was in pain from the process of morphing. Yet, her lips and nose which were in the open didn't even quiver.

She simply flapped her wings once and all the blood on it was hurled in every direction. However, this was not what amazed the viewers, but actually how the feathers of the wings got hardened like Sapphire gems before she flapped her wings!

No wonder they were named as such!

It turned out that her wings might appear feather-like, but they were actually made out of sapphire gems. And what's even more shocking was her free control over its transformation from feather to gems, and vice versa.

Before, they didn't see her use any of this, as she simply threw sharp feathers from her hands, like throwing daggers at the rare beasts, killing them in an instant.

Even when she met with a player, they simply bowed their heads and left her alone, not daring to attack and offend her.

Heck, she even met with a 4 players alliance before, and still, they let her go peacefully without raising a fart in her presence.

Her background was too large for commoners like them to mess around with. It was better to treat her as air in this game and play with each other.

Their understandable cowardly behavior made it harder for Princess to show anything else besides Feather Spray.

Thankfully, she finally met with a beast on her league, forcing her to pop out one of her hidden cards at the start.

"How is this fair?!!"

The spectators shouted at the sight of Princess Bird, soaring 80 meters above the tree. If it wasn't for the blue barrier blocking the sky, she could have gone further up. Regardless, just 80 meters was enough to brutalize the stationary tree without any way of retaliation!

Princess could literary just keep hovering like this, and spray her feathers at the tree until it dies.

'Damn it! if the fight is going to be like this, I should have focused on Landlord.'

Regrets began to wash over Zoe, as she saw Princess Bird began to flap her wings in direction of the tree, sending a shower of hardened Sapphire feathers, at each flap.

Phew! Phew!...

Just as she assumed, the tree did nothing but defend by creating an Ice wall in front of it. Yet, the wall cracked after two volleys, and the third did the finishing blow, leaving the tree exposed to Princess.

'Sigh, Whatever, it's better if she wrapped this out fast so we can catch Landlord and Mastermania battle at le...'

Just as she tried to switch her vision to Felix, so she could check up on his ongoing battle with the Terror Serpent, her mouth parted at the horrifying sight of the tree's icy leaves all pointing at Princess Bird akin to sharp daggers going for the kill.

The tree revolved its body twice, from the base of its stem until it couldn't add any more pressure. The tightness of its action caused cracks to appear on its crystal-like body. Yet, the tree didn't seem to mind, as its focus was clearly on the Princess. The pointy leaves were the perfect proof.

Whoosh!!

Then out of nowhere, it relaxed its body, causing the branches to spun once, releasing hundreds to thousands of leaves in every direction, left, right, ground, and especially the air. The leaves blackened the entire area with their numerous numbers!

Phew! Phew! Phew!...

Princess Bird didn't even attempt to dodge, as it was simply an impossible endeavor. Thus, she hardened her feathers and hugged herself, not exposing a single inch of her petite body.

Her defensive manoeuver helped her resist the barrage of the leaves easily, as they didn't manage to leave even a scratch on the wings. However, she was still affected negatively by them in another form.

The spectators watched her body nose dive towards the ground under the rain of leaves. After all, it was only common sense for her to drop immediately after she stopped flapping her wings.

Smash!

Her wings took most of the fall damage, leaving her unscathed. But, nothing saved her from feeling dizzy after this hard collision.

'Ouch! My head is about to split!'

Pained from the sudden headache, she hugged her head with her eyes closed shut. She wasn't worried about the tree making a move on her, as she was confident in her wings defenses.

Too bad, the hundreds of sharp branches extending towards her, said otherwise. Find authorized novels in , faster updates, better experience, Please click #!_48282986264720410 for visiting.

Chapter 138 - Princess Bird Slaying the Glacial Bane Tree! (2 in 1)

Princess Bird kept massaging her temples, unbeknownst to the great danger fast approaching her. Zoe and the spectators kept shouting for her to be careful, knowingly, their voices weren't going to make a difference.

'I will make you pay for messing up my bangs!'

Displeased, Princess Bird touched her long bangs that were now completely in disarray. A vast difference from their previous silkiness. One could only wonder if it was her confidence in her defenses that let her have this laid-back attitude or simply her arrogance and stupidity.

Regardless of both reasons, the branches already reached her and entangled the wings by rolling around it continuously until it was under a secure grip!

Before Princess Bird could even comprehend what happened, the Glacial Tree recalled its branches rapidly, bringing her with them akin to a spider pulling a cocooned prey to its grasps.

"Ahhhh!!!"

Princess Bird could only let out a delayed yelp after the deed was already done. Zoe and the spectators were honestly quite embarrassed for her father.

After all, for him to get her a legendary bloodline and all the resources needed for her integration. Yet, the result was this trashy performance.

They didn't know whether she lacked experience in death and life battles or she simply was that careless to underestimate an epic duel Elementalist beast.

If she thought that her father would save her from its clutches if things went horribly wrong, then she was truly in for a treat.

The SG rules were absolute! No one could interfere from the outside and save her if she was about to die, even if her background was terrifying.

In front of the Queen and the entity of the SGA, every background could only bow their heads in submissiveness if they wanted to continue their legacy!

"Princess Bird is truly in a pinch!"

Zoe wasn't exaggerating even a bit, as the Glacial Tree kept creating new icy branches and used them to tightened its grip even further.

Although the wings weren't broken or scratched by the continuous assault of the leaves, Princess Bird wasn't having the best of her time by getting strangled like this.

'What do I do?! What do I do?!'

Her brain was working on its full capacity to get her out of this miserable situation. However, nothing concrete was found yet, as every other ability she possessed was not equipped to handle this kind of attack.

A while passed by, and the scene was still the same, Princess Bird getting absolutely owned by the Glacial Tree without any way to retaliate. If it wasn't for the wings' overpowered defenses, she would have turned into a corpse by now. Nonetheless, that wasn't far off, as Princess Bird began to have difficulty breathing.

The tightness of the branches, plus her hardened wings, didn't allow a single oxygen molecule to bypass their heavy lockdown.

The spectators couldn't help but worry about her well being at this point. Never in their wildest dreams would they have thought that a Legendary Bloodliner could be dominated like this.

As far as they saw in the majority of the games, a legendary bloodliner either dominate his opponent or retreat to safety when shit gets worse.

Just like Felix's battle against the Titan. It was clean and neat. Thus, their confusion and worry were understandable.

They honestly didn't know anymore whether to believe that her Sapphire Apex Eagle bloodline was terrible or her lackluster battle experience was the cause of this situation. Whatever it was, Princess Bird must think of a solution swiftly if she doesn't want to die in such a humiliating way.

'Damn it! Papa and sisters must be watching the stream now. I can't let them see such a disgraceful battle. Otherwise, I won't escape getting extra practice drills added.' Princess Bird felt a shiver on her back as she recalled those drills. She shook her head firmly, 'I would rather feel the pain of morphing twice than practice those drills.'

She took a deep breath and said softly, "Retract Wings."

Suddenly, under the eyes of everyone, the wings which were being entrapped by the branches disappeared into light particles, leaving the branches in a fixed position.

If they were made of rubber, they might have instantly snapped on Princess Bird after the wings' disappearance. Alas, ice couldn't stretch or retract. Thus, Princess Bird immediately fell downwards, escaping the damned tree clutches.

However, the Glacial Tree proved that it was worthy of being an epic beast, as it reflexively sent the rest of its free branches at her prey that was nosediving.

"Sapphire Apex Wings!" Princess Bird called out loud without even turning her head to check on the fast-approaching branches.

This time she winced in pain, as the wings came out of the same wounded spot on her back. Blood and flesh were hurled everywhere yet again.

No wonder she didn't want to use this strategy until she was at end of the rope. Who would want to torture himself twice by this messed-up ability?

However, desperate times called for desperate measures. Princess Bird should feel blessed that her ability allowed her to remove the morphing. If those wings were based on mutation, then her fate could be far worse than wincing.

The Glacial Tree didn't stop its attempts of trying to recapture Princess Bird, as it kept sending branch after branch. However, Princess Bird wasn't a fool to put herself in the same position. Her wings kept flapping rapidly, like a graceful butterfly moving from one place to another unpredictably.

Not a single branch managed to touch her clothes in the process. The spectators had to admit that her dodging techniques and style were by far one of the best they saw. A total opposite of Landlord's monkey-like dodging techniques he showed before.

"She is finally out of the tree attacking zone!!" Zoe was the first to celebrate with her arms raised in the air at the sight of Princess Bird whizzing away from the range of the branches. The spectators followed after and cheered as well.

"Is she going to turn back and take her revenge or retreat?!" Zoe's eyes lightened up and said, "She is turning back! No one dares humiliate the royal family of the Maganda Tribe and live to tell the tale!"

Princess Bird hovered at the same height as before, but this time she kept a quite large distance between the tree and herself.

'Let's see how you deal with this.'

She raised her hands in the air and called softly, "Furious Tornado."

Whoosh! Whoosh!

Her wings flapping speed increased, and with each flap, a gale of wind could be seen heading towards the Glacial tree. The gales kept adding up on each other and whirling around the Tree, creating a furious tornado enclosing it in the center!

Even so, Princess Bird didn't stop adding gales at the already behemoth tornado, she wanted to make sure that every branch, root, and leaf snaps into pieces. So, she could have an easy time dealing with the stem.

Cracks!

The noise of ice cracking and shattering kept resounding in the ears of the spectators. Yet, they didn't cheer at all, as the sight that greeted them was more shocking than Princess summoning a Towering Tornado.

The Glacia Tree was rejuvenating every broken part of its body at the speed of light!!

The Glacial Tree's broken body parts kept healing at plain sight. Shattered leaves were renewed, broken branches recovered into becoming a whole, and the cracks on the stem withdrew rapidly, leaving a smooth looking surface.

The spectators drew a deep breath at such a busted rejuvenation speed. They knew this battle was going to be a long one unless Princess Bird found out the weakness of the Glacial Tree.

Although the Tree seemed like it was part of the immortal type beasts, the spectators couldn't help but doubt its truthfulness.

After all, those kinds of beasts were famously known for having a moving core inside their bodies that held their souls. However, in the case of the Glacial Tree, the interior was fully exposed to them, and so far, not a single hint of a core was seen inside. Thus, the beast definitely belonged to another type. They just didn't know which one.

Thankfully, they had Zoe whose eyes never stopped scanning the battle, the stream, and the audience's facial expressions all at once! She had to, otherwise, she might miss the best opportunity to sound her explanation without appearing out of the picture.

"This is the reason why the beast had no organs!" She paused for a bit to heighten their curiosity and said, smiling, "Because it belongs to the parasite type beasts!!!"

The spectators immediately recoiled from their seats at her mentioning that damned type of beasts. Some of them were even about to spew fire from their eyes!

Who could blame them though?

The parasite type beasts were infamous for causing the biggest and most impactful damages during the historical humans' war against beasts. It was common knowledge in the human race, like $1+1=2$.

Billions of lives lost singlehandedly due to those parasites that could enter the brain of humans and consume their memories, obtaining full control over their personality, bloodline abilities, and even their element! One could only imagine the fate of the human army when one of those parasites took control over a high-ranking personal.

This was the reason they were hated to the core by everyone. Because just one of those parasites had caused a mass genocide of a hundred million at once!

Such a dreadful history should not be visited again.

Irrked and livid, the audience began booing out loud with bloodshot eyes at surprisingly the Glacial Tree!

Although they knew that it was simply a digital version of the real thing, their suppressed rage was uncaring about it. They just wanted to vent, and vent they did.

The stadium rumbled and shook under their harmonious booing. Meanwhile, the spectators in the chat kept spamming only one word. KILL!!!!

Pleased, Zoe sat in her chair with one leg above the other with a slight smirk. She had predicted this outcome, but she was glad about it happening.

In her eyes, as long as those were not boos directed at her, she would gladly listen to them all day long. After all the MCs were getting paid commissions based on how hype and active the spectators were!

She would be a fool to miss such a juicy commission. However, Princess Bird's fight was still a priority, thus she stood up and lifted the mic close to her lips. "I understand your rage and fury. But instead of booing for a digital being." She suggested with a smile, "Why not cheer for Princess Bird? Who knows your cheers might actually be the fuse that allows her to win the fight."

The spectators just like puppeteers did exactly as she said without second thoughts. The boos were replaced by cheers and chants, rocking the stadium even further than before!

'Hehe, another bonus! I might actually get paid double than my previous game.' Zoe's smile widened until it became a satisfied grin. She then stopped bothering about them and refocused on the ongoing fight.

"It seems like our Princess still didn't realize that she is battling a parasite type beast."

Zoe shook her head at the sight of Princess Bird continuous spamming of Furious Tornadoes and Feather Sprays. She understood that as long as the parasite wasn't killed, the Tree would keep healing itself back up without effort.

The parasite's ability to steal its host element and abilities was not a joke. It was clear, that the tree was a plant elemental based beast, and the parasite was an ice elemental beast, thus after it consumed everything about the tree, it became a dual Elementalist with that kind of shape!

Princess Bird soon began huffing with drops of sweat dripping down her chin. Her reckless use of energy began to take a toll on her body. It appeared like she consumed more than 70% all at once for her to sweat and huff like that.

'What's the deal with this thing?! Why can't it just dies already.'

She stopped throwing abilities randomly, and simply hovered in the air, eyeing the Tree waving its branches in the air, like it was mocking her pitiful attempts.

'It does not have a core, either vital areas to target. So what the hell is it?' She scratched her hair in irritation. 'I should have paid more attention to the beastial terminology in class.'

'There was one way to find out I guess. I hope two seconds is enough.' She pursed her lips and removed her bangs to the side, exposing Sapphire like hexagon eyes!

They were shaped exactly like gems, breathtaking, and unique!

The spectators were shocked at her eyes, and more so at the reason for her hiding them! Who was in his right mind to not display such beautiful eyes to fish for appreciation?

However, those thoughts dashed as soon as they appeared after seeing tiny drops of blood began to stream from them.

'Found you little thing!'

Princess Bird returned the bangs in their position immediately after getting what wanted. Her wide smile plus the blood streaking down her cheek drew a creepy sight.

But, she was unbothered by it, as every time she used her passive Predator Sight her eyes bled due to not being able to handle all the tiny minuscule details it kept providing the brain.

Her passive was exactly like Eagle's long-distance eyesight, but more advanced, as it showed everything like it was mega zoomed. Not a single strand of hair could miss her sight even if it was hundreds of meters away. Don't even mention the parasite that was hiding at the bottom center of the tree.

As for the bangs? They honestly had no meaning besides stopping others from seeing her eyes. She was sick and tired of everyone's flattery every time they laid their eyes on them.

'Its time to end this!'

She spread her wings wide, displaying their enchanting beauty, and pointed her finger at the Tree. "Dazzle!!!"

A sudden Beam of bluish light was projected at the Tree, hiding its existence from everyone. The spectators stared in disbelief at that beam of light.

They couldn't comprehend how was she able to use such ability when her element was clearly wind-based. After all, she kept spamming Tornados!

However, before they could even break out of their shock, they heard Princess Bird proclaim out loud, "Sapphire Tornado Technique!"

The beam of light was replaced with gales of wind, followed by Sapphire sharp feathers. Their combination created a towering blue tornado that had hundreds of feathers revolving around its center, and especially the Tree!

Slice Slice!

The Tree's most prized rejuvenation ability wasn't actually used!! Its body parts kept being slashed and sliced into halves by the speeding feathers akin to knife slicing batter.

Yet, the parasite was as unresponsive as ever!

The spectators couldn't understand what the hell was going on! But they just watched with excited expressions and cheered on Princess Bird to destroy the beast once and for all.

The Blue Tornado answered their wishes, as it ripped the Glacial Tree from its roots, bringing it along in its whirling journey!

The parasite that was hiding at the very bottom of the tree within thousands of icy roots, was exposed in the open to the horrifying array of feathers!

It kept squirming like a worm trying to activate its rejuvenation ability. But to no avail.

SLASH!

Its fate was decided the moment it was exposed, as it got sliced into half by one passing feather. Its defenses were truly garbage. But it was understandable, as the universe didn't give this type of beast such hateful characteristic without such a massive weakness.

Shatter!

The Tree broke into small pieces, then into light particles after the controller was dead. Princess Bird, stopped the Tornado from raging, as it kept consuming her energy every second it was active.

Without further ado, she dove down and removed the damned wings as well and sat down on the ground, taking large breaths each time.

She really spent everything she had to win the fight. Not to mention she used all of her abilities plus even her technique!

Chapter 139 - Another Fireworks!

'My papa is definitely going to punish me!' Saddened, she sulked while wiping the bloodstains from her cheeks.

She knew that her performance was beyond trash, and there was nothing much she could say to explain herself. Find authorized novels in , faster updates, better experience, Please click #!_48402336158112176 for visiting.

However, the spectators didn't share the same view, as they were astounded by her fascinating abilities and techniques.

To this point, they still had no idea what was her true element. They assumed it was wind-based because she used Tornados, but that beam of light raised some doubts.

Zoe didn't keep them wondering for long, as she took a deep breath and explained what exactly happened during that battle. "Before you understand her abilities you must first know her elements!"

She swiped her finger at a small screen and displayed all of Princess Bird's known information in plain sight. There was no reason to hold back anymore. She then pointed at the two logos of elements. One had the shape of a wind gale, and the other had a hexagon shape!

"She is a dual Elementalist! A user of Wind and Gems!"

The spectators either had shocked expressions or knowing smiles at her revelation. After all, not everyone was unfamiliar with Princess Bird, as some minority already were fans of her and followed her through those few games she played. Yet, they didn't have a club like Felix or Mastermania.

They were too few to have one. Thus, they had no plans to further increase their fandom by exposing Princess Bird's abilities to all.

"The Sapphire Apex Eagle is one of the few dual Elementalist beasts that use wind for offense and mobility, while gems for defense and beauty!"

She highlighted all of the abilities she used and explained only Dazzle. As for the other two, Sapphire Apex Wings and Feather Spray, they were self-explanatory.

"Dazzle is the ultimate ability of her legendary bloodline. It blocks anyone who was exposed to the beam of light from not using their abilities temporarily. Whether passives or actives!"

She raised her voice higher after seeing their looks of understanding. "That's right! The reason the parasite couldn't use her rejuvenation was due to it."

A truly befitting ability of the gems element. After all, gems like diamonds, ruby, and sapphires were known for two things, dazzling beauty, and hardness. This further explained why her wings had such overpowered defenses.

The spectators figured as much from her clarification, and actually even more so, as they managed to understand that Furious Tornado was actually her permanent ability that she etched in her 1% after breaking through the first stage of replacement. Plus it must be an ability from a legendary bloodline as well!

It was pretty clear after she combined Furious Tornado and Feather Spray, creating Sapphire Feathers Tornado technique!

It was common knowledge that the only way to create techniques was to combine two different abilities from different bloodlines. It didn't matter if it was a passive from tier 1 bloodline, combined with tier 7 active bloodline.

Princess Bird obviously got this technique from her father instead of creating it by herself.

The process of creating techniques was far more deadly than one could understand. If it wasn't so, bloodliners wouldn't bother competing to join strong clans.

But that was another matter entirely.

...

After a couple of minutes of sitting, Princess Bird finally stood up with hands on her knees as support. She was truly too tired to make any large movement. However, the epic chest was still in front of her, gleaming with a purplish light.

Princess or not, nothing beats the feeling of obtaining a reward by one's own effort. Thus, she was pretty excited to open the chest. Not to mention the fact that she was probably going to be the first ranker after obtaining the points inside, surpassing Felix!

She smiled cutely and walked towards it under the cheers of the audience.

This was it, the moment they were waiting for. An actual normal opening for an epic chest. The way Felix kept opening them traumatized them greatly. At this point, they just wanted for Princess Bird to open it normally without any dramatic additions.

'Am I going to be rewarded with 1500 GP or more?'

Princess Bird extended her hand with anticipation clearly written on her face.

Boom!

However, a sudden explosion in the sky made her pause her action and glance at it. It wasn't only her who had their attention stolen by the explosion. But every player was affected by it and lifted their heads as well.

>Landlord has obtained 1400 GP from an epic chest!Phew! Boom!

>Birds Call has obtained 1450 GP From epic chest!!<

Just as the players regained their wits and wanted to continue their journey, a 2nd explosion in the air, stopped their footsteps. They gulped and raised their heads with stiff expressions, scared that Felix did it again.

But after seeing the owner of the 3rd fireworks, their tense shoulders eased up a bit. They knew that Princess Bird had a legendary bloodline just like Landlord, thus if there was anyone in the maze who was capable of repeating his feat, it got to be her.

As Princess Bird expected, their reaction was quite lackluster, as they soon ignored the bright lights and continued moving forward, hoping to luck out on the exit.

At that point, none of this bullshit points competition would matter anymore, as the championship was always the best reward in every game.

"That concluded Princess Bird's camera time!" Zoe smiled and suggested, "How about we watch Landlord's replay on his fight with the Serpent?!"

Felix's fans screamed their lung out in approval, while the rest murmured and mumbled like a bunch of tsundere.

Indifferent to their opinions, Zoe tapped on Felix's small screen and dragged her finger left. A few seconds later, she paused the replay and sent it to a large screen with her finger.

The audience chatter immediately shushed down after landing their eyes on Felix sprinting with a clear destination on his mind. They couldn't help but be amazed again at his all-knowing eyesight.

They clearly noticed that the Serpent was 70 meters away from him in a straight line, but with the complex path added, the distance should be doubled or even tripled. Yet, he still managed to easily figure out the correct path.

They wondered that if the bet wasn't holding him back, would the game end in 30 minutes if he used this busted ability to spot the exit?

Soon, they removed those meaningless thoughts and focused on the upcoming battle. Felix and the serpent had only a wall separating them!

Chapter 140 - Replaying Landlord's Battle VS The Terror Serpent!

However, they waited and waited, yet Felix still didn't move from his position.

"He was probably planning on how to slay the serpent." Zoe drummed her fingers on the commentary desk and added, "Let's skip it."

Good thing she did, as Felix moved from his position exactly 4 minutes later, holding sky blue bombs in his hands!

Delighted and excited, the spectators began their guessing game on what kind of inducement was the blue one.

The majority believed that it was a dehydration inducement due to its color. But, the rest argued that it didn't make sense, as the serpent was a desert-based beast. Thus its body was equipped with dehydration countermeasures. If not, surviving in the desert was wishful thinking.

Soon, they stopped bothering with guessing and just focused on Felix, who was approaching the serpent on his tiptoes, trying his best to make his presence hidden.

"A smart move, but would it actually work?" Zoe smirked and explained, "The Terror serpent ears can spot the tiniest vibration in the air. This meant the moment he entered its range he would be noticed." She chuckled, "Unless he stopped breathing, he could forget about ambushing the Terror serpent."

Her words proved to be right, as, by the time Felix's foot landed on the territory of the serpent, it turned its head instantly and gazed at his direction with its creepy whitish eyes.

He truly got spotted red-handed akin to a thief. But, Felix just shrugged his shoulders and threw one blue bomb first.

Phew!

It whizzed in the air, like an unstoppable bullet. However, that was just in the eyes of the audience. As for the serpent? It simply waved its long tail from left to right, creating a screen of sand in the process.

The bomb landed on it and never made a sound again. Felix snapped his finger, trying to manually explode it, but still, no reaction was shown inside the sand screen.

Indifferent to his attack getting blocked easily, Felix kept creating bombs and throwing them periodically.

He didn't care about wasting energy, as he had to make sure that the serpent stayed in a defensive position, so it wouldn't create a desert and borrow underneath his feet. At that point, the fight's difficulty would truly increase by tenfolds. Therefore, he had to be on offense all the time while making sure to try his best and enter the 8-meter diameter as quickly as possible!

His Poisonous Aura and superstrength were the keys to winning the battle.

"It seemed that Landlord was pulling all stops to approach the serpent!" Zoe zoomed the camera on the serpent's scales that were opening up one by one and smiled wickedly, "But life isn't that easy!"

Felix's bombs did create some trouble for the serpent, as it had to constantly create sand screens to protect itself from them. It senses kept sending warnings to avoid the bombs at all costs.

Nevertheless, it still could open its scales one by one and create a desert again. It might not be as fast as before, but at least the environment would be on its side.

Beasts that relied on elements as their source of power were at their strongest inside the same elemental environment. Felix knew so as well. Thus he had to end this battle before the desert fills up the open intersection again!

"Landlord was truly struggling to get closer! He knew that his Inducement Aura was the only way to inflict damages to the serpent."

The spectators thought so as well. They were not blind to not see that Felix's bombs were absolutely useless against the serpent tight defenses.

As, no matter how fast he threw his bombs or how random and unpredictable his throw was, the serpent easily spotted and blocked them with sand screens.

The loud air vibration those bombs were making as they coursed through the air, was deafening in the serpent's ears.

What made the situation even worse for Felix was the continuously increasing sand under his feet akin to a ticking time bomb.

He knew that time wasn't on his side, as the more he delayed the battle the further his chances got reduced to land a deadly blow on the serpent. However, the serpent's never-ending slithering wasn't making it any easier for him.

As the harder Felix tried to approach the serpent, the faster the serpent slithered away. Just because it was a beast, it didn't mean it was a fool to not understand that the bug in front of it was trying his best to close the distance between them.

Therefore, it did the complete opposite and made sure that his presence was kept at least 20 meters away from it.

The spectators couldn't help but appreciate the serpent's intelligence. It might not be the same as higher-tiered beasts that had intelligence comparable to humans or even surpassing it.

But still, it was enough to put Felix at his wit's end, not knowing how to continue this battle forward.

It was as clear as daylight that his fighting style was completely countered by it. The only reason this battle was still in this state was due to his never-ending chase and smart way of utilizing the limited number of bombs.

If he stopped his offense for even a bit or dropped his guard, the serpent wouldn't hesitate to launch a deadly counter-attack. Not to mention pulling all stops and opening up every scale on its golden body to fasten the desert creation.

Hence, his only option was to either retreat from this battle and fight another time or rely on a miracle.

The spectators believed that Felix was definitely not going to escape since he clearly opened up the epic chest that was guarded by the serpent. This meant he killed it using his ultimate ability! That was the only plausible reason in this scenario.

Excited, their eyes shone with anticipation, waiting for him to unveil the strongest ability of his unique bloodline. It was finally time for their patience to be rewarded.

Guesses and small bets as always were hurled around the stadium, trying to figure out the ability nature.

Was it a morphing type like Princess Bird? Or elemental type? Heck, it could even be a mental type. It all depended on the abilities' pool of the beast. The possibilities were limitless!

Unfortunately, they waited and waited, and still, nothing broke those two's stalemate. The only thing that was continuously changing, was the desert on the floor that was about to reach Felix's kneecaps.

"Why was he still not using his hidden card?" Zoe pressed a finger on the upper lip, confused by his stinginess to save up his strongest ability even on this unfavorable condition.

Doubts were slowly sneaking up her mind that Felix wasn't actually an origin purity bloodliner, but was still on the greater purity! Her doubts were thoroughly understandable, as there was simply no other reason besides so.

After all, Felix literally spent the last 6 minutes doing nothing but wasting his energy by useless bomb throws.

If he had any hidden card, he should have used it by now and not hide it like this.

Since he was doing nothing but harm his chances of obtaining more GP from other beasts for absolutely no reason.

The energy was a precious resource in every game that shouldn't be wasted wantonly. Just like in Princess Bird's moronic fight. She wasted at least an extra 40% energy, simply due to her lacking battle experience.

If she used her brain for even a second, she wouldn't have showered the Glacial Tree with feathers and tornadoes recklessly, without understanding the reason for its rejuvenation.

But Zoe knew that Landlord wasn't dumb like Princess Bird to not see this issue as well. After all, he won his first game and was crushing this one as well.

Something only a few hardcore players were able to do. This made her even more confused. "Is he really still on greater purity?" She shook her head and reasoned, "That can't be right. After all, he did kill the serpent. There must be something that we are missing."

The spectators shared the same view as her. They didn't want to believe that Felix was actually still on greater purity, yet outperforming Peak Stage 1 Bloodliners!

The implication was too shocking, as it meant that he was not just a prodigy but a monster!

Although, his unique legendary bloodline took some of his credit that didn't change the fact that he was outshining everyone on the game.

Wasn't Princess Bird the perfect proof? She had a legendary bloodline as well. Plus she was a peak 1st stage bloodliner with a technique!

Nonetheless, she had to spend every drop of her energy just to take down an epic beast that was weaker by an inch in comparison to The Iron Titan.

Zoe fought the urge to fast forward this meaningless wild goose chase and jump straight to the climax of the battle, where Felix slew the serpent.

Curiosity on how he did it was constantly eating her up. But she resisted it and continued watching the fight with the spectators, commentating on every outstanding play by him or the serpent.

The fight might be stale, but it wasn't lacking in aesthetics! as colorful bombs were hurled everywhere, sometimes exploding before they reach the serpent, rising colorful clouds of mist.

Suddenly, the serpent that was slithering in circles around the open space, stopped and turned its head in direction of a shadow on a wall. It sensed a shallow air vibration coming from that place.

However, its worst mistake was focusing on something else in front of Felix!

Poof!

A blue bomb exploded immediately on its head, marking a clear strike. The spectators stared at this sight with eyes wide open, not knowing what the f*ck had just happened?!

How could the stalemate be broken like this?

The Terror Serpent wasn't supposed to make such a rookie mistake! Their minds couldn't fathom the reason it paused its movement and stared at the wall like a retard.

However, the moment Felix spoke out loud, everything clicked on their minds. A chill couldn't help but course through their backs at the thought of Felix's cunning scheme and bold foresight!

"Took you long enough to make a move. Mr. Mania." Felix turned his head and gazed with a shimmering red light in his eyes at the same spot the serpent was focusing on before.

"My patience was truly running dry." He smirked and said, "However, I have to thank you for creating this opening. I was waiting eagerly just for it."

Immediately after, he leaned forward and sprinted towards the serpent that was coiled around itself inside a sphere of sand that kept flickering from time to time, like it wasn't made properly.

One could only wonder what kind of inducement Felix used to force the serpent into this defensive position!
