Chapter 1351 The Dangers of Illusion Domain.

Seeing how stoked Lord Loki was about playing poker with his peers, Felix didn't bother him with his newly unlocked ultimate ability, Illusion Domain.

He exited the consciousness space and went to the training hall in his spaceship, which was as massive as twenty European football stadiums combined.

He used it before as a camping area for the refugees after the rooms were filled to the brim, but after the demons' defeat and the battles becoming fewer and fewer, he sent those refugees back to their homes.

"Let's see, the illusion domain is capable of bringing into light whatever I desire with more than 99.999999% realism." Felix rubbed his chin thoughtfully.

He wasn't really thoughtful about the realism part as he already knew that the UVR couldn't possibly possess 100% realism since it would make it no different than reality.

Though, everyone else thought the opposite since Queen Ai herself kept saying it possessed 100% realism for anyone binding their consciousness with her.

Since no one really cared about this, they went along with it and the UVR was known to have 100% realism.

With the addition of information about the UVR's reality, Felix understood that the remaining 0.000001% was what separated illusion from reality.

"Will my illusion immunity interfere if I tried to use the domain to cheat my way through my training?" Felix questioned himself.

"Well, your illusion immunity allows you to differentiate between illusion and reality instead of canceling any illusion before you, so it might work?" Asna shared her opinion.

"Let's hope so."

Just as Felix wanted to cast an illusion domain with a time difference of a hundred to one like in the Elementals Galaxy, he was stopped by Lord Loki.

'Don't bother wasting your time, it won't work.' He expressed while most of his focus was on the poker table in front of him.

"Why so?" Felix knitted his eyebrows.

"Illusion Domain is as close to reality as it is, but anyone capable of seeing through its illusion won't be affected by anything happening...Ahaa! I got a full house!" Lord Loki cut his explanation midpoint as he exposed his cards and showed the tenants two queens.

"That's a good hand, but don't get too excited." Thor smirked as he exposed his cards, causing Lord Loki's smile to evaporate from his face.

"Royal flush...How?!" Lord Loki's eyelids twitched as he watched all of his chips getting taken by Thor after losing an all-in bet.

"First rule here, is never go all in right from the start as there is always another one with better cards than you." Thor chuckled, enjoying the spoils of the war.

While Thor didn't explicitly say it, he made it clear that cheating was allowed as long as you could get away with it in front of their piercing eyes.

"Now, get lost and help him with your ability."

With no chips at hand and the table was still filled with players, Lord Loki was kicked out of the table.

"Cheating pricks, this isn't over." Lord Loki cursed under his breath, but the thoughts in his mind were completely different, 'It won't be fun to destroy them from the start.'

For now, he placed his focus on Felix and continued on from where he left off.

"As I was saying, seeing through the illusion makes it obsolete, whether it was a normal ability or even an elemental domain." Lord Loki clarified, "Fortunately in our case, there are only three people in the whole universe capable of seeing through my domain, without mentioning the unigins."

"Me, you, and my master." Felix stated.

Lord Loki nodded. "While you can see and interact with the illusion domain just like with the UVR, your body can't be affected by something as significant as changing time difference or such."

"I see..."

Felix understood that illusion immunity was his greatest asset against illusion but at the same time his limitation.

While even primogenitors could sleep for tens of billions of years until their mental health was mostly healed from exhaustion in the illusion world, the same couldn't apply to him.

Felix had honestly expected something like this to happen, but he really didn't want to accept it.

Alas, now that it was confirmed, he could only roll with it.

"How about creating an illusionary wisdom eye and bestowing it upon someone else in the illusion domain?" Felix wanted a confirmation of his previous idea.

"It was doable if you managed to create an exact copy of the mutation, which means you need everything related to the eyes."

"You mean like DNA, structure, and such?"

"Yes." Lord Loki warned as he knew what he planned on doing, "Illusion Domain is a double-edged sword when used on those without immunity. If you just used your imagination to create something and used it on someone else, his mind will perceive it as reality and will interact with it as such. This means you have to create the right conditions for everything to flow as smoothly as in the real world. Otherwise, you will be doing nothing but harming your people."

"That sounds complex." Felix frowned.

"It's supposed to be, illusion domain isn't just a mental fantasy world. If you want that, you can easily create one using another ability." Lord Loki stressed, "There are real stakes in using it and you better be careful."

"Will do, thanks for the heads-up." Felix nodded in appreciation.

This was the reason there was never a significant problem with the UVR even though it was a legit illusion domain and everyone inside of it was prone to drop dead with a mere snap of a finger from Lord Loki.

He had created a universe with similar laws to reality and made Queen Ai supervise it. For example, a person could die in most of UVR's cities and he would be revived again.

The person believed that he would be revived 100% since that was how it was supposed to work and no one could change the rules on a whim.

But in reality? If he died in the illusion domain and his mind believed itself to have died for real, then that would be his fate even if Queen Ai hadn't touched his consciousness!

After all, everyone assumed that they were inside a harmless virtual world and unless Queen Ai killed them, nothing bad could happen to them.

"Looks like I have to spend my time studying my wisdom eyes in all departments to make the perfect copy."

Felix wanted before to just bring Selphie inside the domain and fool her into believing that she possessed the wisdom eyes, but now, he postponed calling her until he ironed down the details.

"Elder, I still have one more question." Felix said with a serious tone.

"What?"

Felix took a second before voicing it. "Now that I possess the illusion domain, is it possible for me to bend the UVR to my desire?"

This question was in Felix's mind ever since he integrated with Lord Loki's bloodline.

It was a serious matter since it implied that he would possess similar control and authority as Lord Loki in the UVR!

"You can, but I advise you to use your own illusion domain in your matters." Lord Loki smiled, "I might have given you permission to use my bloodline and possess my elemental domain, but I never permitted you to mess with my world."

"I understand and I respect that." Felix promised with a solemn tone. "I won't do anything to the UVR."

Felix had no idea why Lord Loki was uptight about this, but he planned on respecting his boundaries.

While Lord Loki seemed like a pushover compared to other stern elemental lords, Felix wasn't foolish to push his buttons and make him switch his character.

'I hope he won't be an obstacle in my plan after getting my domain. It will really upset me to get rid of him after all the entertaining content I have gotten from him.'

While Lord Loki still had the same easy-going smile, his thoughts, on the other hand, were nothing but that...

Chapter 1352 The Miraculous Benefits of Illusion Domain!

Chapter 1352 The Miraculous Benefits of Illusion Domain!

Oblivious to this, Felix stood at the heart of the empty training hall with eyes closed shut as though he was lost in a world entirely his own.

His hands moved in intricate, deliberate gestures, in sync with the rhythm of the wind.

Suddenly, the ground began to shimmer like a pool of water touched by a gentle breeze. A tremor swept across the barren earth as an unseen force began to reshape it.

Felix opened his eyes, and they shone with an otherworldly luminescence, his pupils reflecting a realm of endless possibilities.

His hands swept out, as though pushing against the very fabric of reality, and ripples of iridescent light spread out from him, rapidly enveloping the empty landscape!

This was his domain, the Illusion Domain, where the fabric of reality bent to his will and the laws of the physical world were but mere suggestions!

The desolation gave way to verdant greens as lush forests erupted from the barren ground, trees reaching for the azure sky with leafy arms.

Flowers bloomed, splattering the earth with their vibrant colors, and a river formed, snaking through the emerald wilderness.

Its water was crystal clear, sparkling under the sun, and babbling with a music so soft and sweet it could soothe the weariest of souls.

Then came the creatures, manifestations of Felix's will yet imbued with a life of their own. Majestic deer roamed the forests, birds sang harmonious melodies from the treetops, and fish danced in the river's gentle currents.

This was not merely a paradise, it was a living, breathing ecosystem, every creature and plant contributing to the harmonious balance.

Felix then raised his hands high, and small orbs of light broke off, sprinkling down like golden raindrops.

Where they touched, the essence of life began to spread. Fruit trees bore fruit, bushes sprouted berries, and the scent of fertile earth filled the air.

Felix, at the center of this paradise, watched everything unfold with a satisfied smile. He had created a haven, a paradise in the training hall, crafted not from bricks and mortar, but from his will, his element, and the deepest corners of his imagination.

"If the refugees still remained here, they would have been left absolutely awed." Asna mused, her eyes reflecting the paradise before her.

"As expected of an elemental domain...This feels like the work of a god." Candace commentated with a tone filled with reverence as she walked in the flower fields.

She plucked the ones she liked and brought them near her nose, enjoying their breathtaking fragrance.

Even a void succubus, known for having the best mental defense in the void nation, couldn't separate the illusion from the real.

This made her interact with the environment like it was the real deal, which meant she could bathe in rivers, climb mountains, and even farm vegetables and cook them on a bonfire to eat them.

This might be born from an illusion but its effect were as real as they could be!

Eee Eeee!

Even Nimo was seen rolling around in the grass and climbing trees to hunt down birds in excitement.

Unigins were completely immune to illusions just like Asna, but Nimo wasn't able to see through it since he wasn't the awakened version.

"Is it possible to be affected by something we eat or drink?" Felix wondered to himself as he picked an apple and took a massive bite of it.

As he was chewing it, he could feel the juices and sweetness filling up his mouth, identical to the feeling he envisioned would happen if he ate a perfectly ripe apple.

"Are you talking about whether it settles your hunger and provides nutrition to your body in real life?" Asna questioned.

"Something like that." Felix nodded.

Lord Loki took it upon himself to settle his question. "Just like I explained with wisdom eyes, if it's related to you, the significant effects can't be accepted as reality. The aftermath of eating something is in this bracket. You can eat as much as you want and please your palates, but your body won't benefit from it in any shape or form."

"But, it's different for others?" Felix raised an eyebrow in surprise, "Does that means I can create an illusionary natural treasure and feed it on another person and the supposed effects will be triggered in the real world?!"

"I will answer with this." Lord Loki smiled, "If the conditions are perfectly aligned with reality, then it becomes a reality."

"This..."

Even other tenants were taken aback by this explanation as the implications were just too shocking!

They already knew about the potency of the illusion domain, but none of them expected that it could reach this far!

For example, the wisdom eyes were supposed to alter only the eyes and the analytic power of the brain, which were two abstract effects.

But, to create an illusionary natural treasure, eat it, and actually obtain the same benefits from it as the real deal? That was nothing short but a miracle and one could say, alternating the laws of reality!

"Doesn't this means that the illusion domain is no different than the creation domain as long as the ones in it were affected by the illusions 100%?!" Candace sucked a deep cold breath in shock.

"Elemental Domains aren't considered the greatest abilities a primogenitor could create for no reason." Lord Loki stated causally, "We are touching upon laws and as you all know, laws are the construct of this universe, touching upon them, implies touching upon reality."

In other words, illusion laws were on the opposite side of the coin with reality laws.

If one could touch upon the illusion laws, it was the same as touching upon the reality laws.

This signified possessing the ability to manifest exact replicas of real objects and they would have the same qualities as long as the creator managed to create the conditions as well.

"For example, if I chose the rare fruit, Nectar of Life, which is renowned for its rejuvenating properties, capable of extending one's lifespan when consumed." Felix disclosed with an attentive expression, "I would need to have a detailed understanding of its taste, texture, smell, and even the energy it emits to recreate it through the illusion domain."

"More than that, you have to study, direct experience, or even do a psychic linkage with the person who consumed the fruit to understand how the fruit affects the body." Lord Loki stated, "Once you have this deep understanding, you can use the illusion domain to create the Nectar of Life's replica."

"In another sense, the real challenge lies in making the effects of the illusionary fruit interact with reality. The illusion isn't just an image or a sensation; it tricks reality itself. The process essentially convinces the consumer's body and spirit they have ingested the real Nectar of Life, triggering the same rejuvenating response." Thor interjected.

"Exactly." Lord Loki nodded.

"This is truly fascinating." Felix expressed with an amazed tone as he created the same nectar of life in his palm and scanned it all around.

Right now, he had created just the exterior and if someone ate it, it would do nothing but affect his senses. However, he understood that if he invested some of his time into studying it wholly, he could totally create a farm of said fruit and feed it to whoever he wanted.

In other words, he could literally sole-handily increase the longevity of billions of people by thousands of years if he wanted!!

"Longevity isn't out of interest for me at the moment, but if I managed to recreate similar eggs of dawn behemoths or such natural treasures capable of enhancing strength, mental defenses, etc, I can easily help my friends get much stronger."

Felix understood that Noah, Olivia, and even Selphie were limited in how much they could enhance their strength through conventional ways.

However, there were extremely natural treasures capable of boosting one's strength without caring about said limitations.

Unfortunately, either most of them went extinct or were impossible to rely on for reliability.

For example, even if one found those natural treasures, it might help them get stronger by ten thousand BF or more. But, it would be a one-time miracle, which was nothing on a bigger scale.

But, with the illusion domain involved, such miracles could be turned into normal occurrences!

"I don't know if it will be enough to help them reach a deity level if not ever, but it's better than nothing."

Although this gift wouldn't help out Felix, he wasn't selfish to keep it to himself when he could totally help his friends improve themselves.

"You are thinking too small." Asna shared with an eager tone, "You can create rare ingredients and materials for the rarest and hardest potions to make...Imagine the possibilities!"

Before Felix could react, Lady Sphinx interjected calmly, "Both of you are thinking too small. With illusion domain, you finally achieve one of your main goals."

"Hmm?"

Felix's ears perked up in intrigue.

"You can create an entire new cultivation system for your race and get them to climb the social ladder in the universe at last."

Lady Sphinx dropped a bombshell, leaving Felix and most of the tenants stunned!

Chapter 1353 Conditioning A Natural Evolution.

"That's possible?" Thor inquired with a puzzled expression, having a tough time imagining something as massive as a cultivation system could be created through an illusion domain.

When this subject was brought up, no one seemed attentive any longer about their poker game and gave their attention to Lady Sphinx.

In turn, she manifested a board and a long stick, then she began explaining her theory.

"It might sound bizarre, but it is more than doable. I have always told Felix that the humans' DNA has the key to their evolution, helping them reach higher heights than their unreliable bloodline cultivation system."

"However, when it comes to creating a new cultivation system on a massive scale, it takes a significant amount of time and effort." Lady Sphinx shared, "In this case, it will take at least a couple million years if not more with the right conditioning for the humans to evolve naturally into the desired target."

"So, you are suggesting that Felix put a portion of humans inside an illusion domain and accelerate the time by thousands of times and create the perfect environment and conditions to control their evolution in a specific way?" Asna asked with an eyebrow raised.

"More or less." Lady Sphinx nodded.

"That does feel logical, but who will agree to such an experiment?" Candace wondered, "You will be asking many people to throw their lives in an illusion world for the sake of the evolution of an entire race...With millions of years going by, there was bound to be an unfathomable number of generations being born inside the illusion and have no clue about the real world or their purpose in life."

"It will be really the most messed up experiment."

Felix couldn't help but agree with her analysis, but at the same time, he already saw plenty of solutions to such problems.

"As long as I explain the experiment reasoning and end goal, anyone who volunteered will be treated right in my illusion domain. If no one volunteered, I can always use the life sentence prisons and reform them through mind manipulation." Felix said.

"That seems feasible." Asna supported.

She knew that there were plenty of life-sentence prisoners across the galaxy and none of them would be able to reject the proposal.

Even if Felix hadn't reformed their minds, they would agree to it, since everything was better than staying in a cell for eternity.

"Which path do you suggest will help humans evolve into the best version of themselves?" Felix inquired.

"I suggest we leave that to nature to decide." Lady Sphinx clarified her idea, "All you have to do is introduce multiple evolution paths, relating to other species, such as pandions, werewolves, shadowborns, vampires, devourers, and even some unknown races. Because humans' DNA is versatile and adaptable with anything attached to it, with the right conditioning and breed crossing between those humans, the new generations would possess either an entirely new cultivation system or two cultivations mixed together. Whatever it was, it's better than the bloodline cultivation system."

"I understand." Felix nodded.

The bloodline cultivation system was amazing on an individual level if one had access to primogenitors' bloodlines, but when it came to a wide scale level?

It was as trash as any other manmade cultivation system without the involvement of nature.

Since Felix couldn't really introduce a new cultivation system into the existing humans since their fate was decided from their birth, he could only change the future of the human race with this method.

When he was satisfied with the latest batch of humans and their new cultivation system, he could release them to the real universe on a mission to spread their genes as much as possible...Eventually, all new generations would possess this new cultivation system and from there on, humans would be considered as a higher-ranked race in the social ladder in a natural manner!

"This sounds like it needs plenty of work and time on my part." Felix said, "It's best to focus on this project when I am done with those three bastards first."

"You are thinking too much." Lady Sphinx shook her head. "You can use a clone to supervise the project while you are handling your other businesses without conflict."

"Won't I find problems with energy consumption?" Felix frowned, "This is an elemental domain and I don't have an illusion conversion technique to help me out."

"Illusion domain is the least energy consuming domain out of all you think I am maintaining such an ever-expanding UVR across an entire universe for millions of years now?"

known five." Lord Loki cleared his doubts, "Even if you created an illusion domain spreading across thousands of kilometers, it will barely exhaust 1% of your energy after an entire month. How do you think I am maintaining such an ever-expanding UVR across an entire universe for millions of years now?"

"That's good to hear." Felix was pleasantly surprised by the low energy intake, but he found it quite reasonable.

The void domain consumed a sh*tload of energy since it erased everything touched by it...To have such an unfathomable power, it needed enough fuel.

The same applied to the life domain that was capable of bringing back wandering spirits into their bodies, something that no one was capable of doing in this universe besides the spirits' guardian and the time primogenitor.

As for the creation domain? Everything created was as real as it could be for everyone involved, even the creator.

This kind of creation required much more energy than a domain using illusion.

"With time acceleration, I can make a decade into ten million years inside of it." Felix mentioned with a faint smile, "This will end the experiment faster before I know it."

"I will leave a clone of mine to supervise it too. With your gene manipulation level, I have a feeling you will end up turning everyone into retarded animals by the end of the experiment." Lady Sphinx said calmly.

"..."

Felix wanted to retort but found no words.

He always wanted to learn more about gene manipulation from Lady Sphinx and she promised to teach him after he reached a worthy height in potion concoction.

But with everything going on, he rarely found time for his own potion concoction...Don't even mention adding a new field of study.

In the end, he could only thank her for the help as he knew that it would be much easier with his master's involvement.

Lady Sphinx owed the humans nothing to help them with this, so she was doing this purely out of curiosity and possibly to take advantage of the illusion domain to run one of her own experiments.

Felix had no issues with this at all.

"Candace, contact Malak and tell her to start choosing the subjects." Felix requested.

"On it."

While Felix wasn't planning to start this instant, it was best to begin the preparation as fast as possible.

With the galaxy's current wartorn condition, there would be plenty of people jumping on the opportunity if it meant living in peace with their families without worrying about life necessities.

...

One year later...

Felix could be seen sitting inside a laboratory while having one evil-looking eye, spinning slowly in front of him.

"Is this the final version?" Asna inquired lazily.

She had watched him spend a year of his time, focusing most of his time on perfecting the use of his illusion domain.

Since this ability was going to be one of his trump cards against the darkins, he had to become masterful in using it.

During his training, he focused on recreating the wisdom eyes, a couple of rare powerful natural treasures, and most importantly, setting up the perfect environment for the upcoming experiment.

Natural treasures turned out to be the easiest to recreate out of the bunch while the wisdom eye had given him the most trouble.

"I hope so, I have done everything correctly this time." Felix replied.

"Do you need me to test it again?" Candace offered.

"Much appreciated."

Felix pushed the wisdom eye in the direction of Candace.

The moment the eye was on the same level as her right eye, Felix snapped his fingers and both eyes swapped positions in an instant!

Candace didn't let out a single yelp in pain or discomfort, which was a big progress from the first time they attempted to do this.

"What do you feel?" He asked.

Candace opened only the wisdom eye and looked around her with a tint of wonder.

"I can see many black auras surrounding me." Candace responded.

"This means the evil vision is working." Felix sighed in relief, "At last, we got one part correct."

Felix had created many creatures with evil intent targeting Candace to help with the experiment, and now that the evil vision was proven to work, he was left with only one issue to solve...The monstrous analytic powers of the eye!

Since only Felix and the elves could test it on runes, he didn't bother to carry the test with Candace.

The data would be useless anyway if she used it to analyze a math problem or such.

So, it was best to bring Selphie down and perfect it with her data involved after getting rid of the initial danger.

"Queen, contact Selphie, Olivia, Noah, and Bodidi." Felix requested calmly, "Tell them to get here as fast as possible."

Chapter 1354 Sharing Natural Treasures Akin to Candy.

With Bodidi's assistance, Selphie and the rest had connected with Felix in less than a week.

The moment they met with him, he didn't bother to explain the situation to them to avoid making them overthink when consuming the natural treasures and other goodies he had prepared.

After all, they might not possess illusion immunity. However, it would be difficult for the brain to accept the notion of eating something illusionary and having a natural effect if one knew about it already.

The art of illusion was to stay unknown regardless of the situation.

Since even Selphie had no clue that natural treasures and such could be replicated through the illusion domain, there was no need to tell her to keep the information to herself.

"I have found those natural treasures that could be of great help for all of you to increase your physical strength." Felix shared as he beamed four boxes and placed them in front of his friends.

"Natural treasures?" Olivia asked with a strange look, "You don't want them? Can't you use them to increase your own strength?"

All of them knew about Felix's devourer system as they had spent thousands of years together and there was no point in hiding it from them anymore.

"I have hit a wall, and they will be wasted on me." Felix clarified casually as he opened the boxes for them, "Those natural treasures are capable of increasing physical strength quite significantly and they are appropriate for most races."

When the boxes opened up, none of them seemed to have heard the last sentence as their dazed eyes were left affixed on clusters of Fortiflora Cordyceps...Their mesmerizing colors illuminated the area with an otherworldly glow. Each of them took a moment to drink in sight, their faces reflecting the hypnotic colors of the plants.

The plants' true spectacle lies in their flowers, a dazzling array of bioluminescent hues. The floral orb consisted of an intricate pattern of lines, circles, and spirals, creating an almost hypnotic effect.

The flowers were closed shut at the moment, but Selphie knew that a small fruit the size and color of a blueberry was hidden inside.

"Wow," Bodidi finally broke the silence, his usually playful tone replaced with a touch of reverence. "They're beautiful."

Selphie was next to speak. She reached in, carefully picking up one of the flowers with a look of sheer disbelief, "It's... It's incredible. Felix, where did you get this many?? It's deemed impossible to even find one across the entire universe!"

Felix's eyelids twitched, already knowing that Selphie would be his greatest obstacle as he couldn't dupe the daughter of the nature goddess, one of the few people with the most knowledge about existing or extinct plants.

"Huh?! They are that rare?!" Olivia's eyes widened as she pulled her hand from the box, feeling uncomfortable touching such treasure.

"Rare? This is considered as one of the only triple SSS natural treasures in the universe and it has gone extinct way past the era of the dark ages."

Selphie identified with a tone filled with disbelief, still finding it hard to accept that she was in the presence of hundreds of such a godly treasure!

"This..."

Even the silent and stoic Noah, couldn't help but show emotions on his face at her statement.

"I don't want to hear anything about rejecting my gifts." Felix interjected before they could think too hard about this. "I can't consume them to increase my devourer's mark since it's too much of a waste and they can't be used in any known potion. So, take them and absorb them before they lose their beneficial properties."

"But..."

"I don't want to hear any buts." Felix said with a solemn tone as he walked away, "When I get back, I expect to see at least half the box empty. Selphie will guide you with the procedures to digest them correctly."

Without turning his head even once, Felix walked swiftly outside of the training hall and closed the door behind him, leaving them staring at his back with mixed emotions.

If only they knew that those natural treasures were made out of illusion and it had cost him nothing more than a couple of months of study, their reaction might have been a bit different.

"You heard the boss, let's get digging!" Bodidi was the first one to pick up the flower using telekinesis and placed it near his tiny mouth.

"That's not how you eat it."

Selphie paused the time around him and took the flower in a careful manner. Then, she explained with a fascinated expression, "Each flower possesses a fruit inside of it, the correct way to bring out most of the benefits from this treasure, is to eat the fruit whole and then within each ten seconds interval, eat a single petal continuously until you finish all of them."

"If you did it in this manner, your physical strength will be enhanced significantly depending on your current physical limitation." Selphie shared, "The highest known enhancement though was fifty thousand BF."

The moment Noah heard this, his eyes lit up at the opportunity, believing that he could at least increase his strength by one hundred thousand BF if he consumed all of those treasures.

'You are underestimating your body limitation too much.' Fenrir shut down his dreams, 'Even if you ate the whole four boxes, you should feel grateful if your strength was enhanced by fifty thousand BF.'

'I see...' This did put a damper on Noah's mood, but he was still thrilled with the opportunity.

He knew that the higher he got, the more difficult it would be for him to find such chances and for those treasures to make any difference.

Meanwhile, the same didn't apply to Selphie, Bodidi, and Olivia!

All of them could get the most benefits from the flowers until their bodies become immune to them.

Without further ado, all of them sat down in a circle and began eating them using Selphie's method.

"Is this really a gift or a curse..." Felix clicked his tongue, somewhat envious of his friends' ability to get the best out of his illusion domain.

"Well, this is a fraction of what it takes to reach your level, so let them eat in peace."
Asna mused.

"I know."

Felix might be a bit jealous of not being able to benefit from his illusion domain in the same manner as them, but he wouldn't trade it to be in their position.

It was like trading a position of a god for the sake of being a worshipper to enjoy his blessing. Having the illusion domain allowed him to do more than this.

...

A couple of days later...

Felix returned to the training hall and found out that his friends were all sitting in meditation positions while surrounded by an eerie green aura.

He didn't react much, knowing that it was the last step of finalizing each flower's absorption.

Felix had supervised the entire process to save them in case any inconsistency had occurred during the digestion since he had to study the process for all three different races.

Thankfully, nothing of such happened and all of them were on the verge of completing the entire chests.

"This is quite evolutionary..." Candace noted, "Besides Noah obtaining merely twenty thousand BF increase, and Olivia forty thousand BF, the rest had almost touched the one hundred thousand BF ceiling."

"It's quite expected, both elves' and space worms' physical properties aren't that great, which gave them too much room for improvement." Felix nodded.

"Well, think of the possibilities if you put tens of billions of humans with similar disadvantages and feed them with such treasures." Candace expressed, "You will be helping even the current generations get a solid footing on their own within the alliance!"

Felix's experiment was meant to help the entire human race in the far future by changing their evolutionary path.

This was all good and well, but the humans in this era would still be considered bottom feeders unless Felix decided to intervene and change the rules of the alliance.

Felix would prefer if his race was capable of standing on its own without using him as a crutch for the remainder of his life...After all, he had other important matters to handle and he couldn't always babysit the human race, no matter how much he cared for them.

"Well, helping a small portion to get stronger and assist the entire race to carry its weight in the alliance isn't a bad thing."

Felix approved the plan, knowing that it would finally give him some peace of mind from his race direction and it would cost him nothing much.

"I suggest you do this after handling the darkins." Thor warned, "They aren't idiots, and if they found out about humans getting stupidly strong out of nowhere, they will link it with you."

"Whether they could guess what you did or not, they will be extra wary."

"I know." Felix nodded before adding, "Speaking about them, I think it's about time we have a trial run."

"You will use illusion domain to create their clones?" Asna wondered.

"Yes, and this time, they will have 100% of their strength and all of their abilities in their arsenal...Even ultimate abilities." Felix cracked his knuckles with an icy smile.

Chapter 1355 Undesireable, But Expected Results.

Felix hadn't spent the past year messing about with his illusion domain for nothing.

He was preparing for this moment, where he would be able to create high-quality illusionary copies of his adversities!

The darkins' clones might not be 100% copies of the real deal, but it was going to be pretty close with all the data in his possession.

After all, the Asgardians had fought against them for eons and they were the only ones knowing their fighting style and abilities as good as them.

Felix had no plans of fighting the darkins without having a true taste of their powers first.

"Is it not better to do this in the UVR? With Lord Loki on our side, he can create better copies without complaints." Asna suggested.

If Lord Loki wasn't on their side and he had authority over Queen Ai, there was no way Felix could do this without the darkins' permission.

"I know, but I want to do it on my own." Felix shook his head, "The more I use illusion domain for such complex problems, the better my control gets...Plus, the fight will occur in the real universe, and doing it in a virtual space won't cut it."

While both illusion domains were similar, Felix would always know deep down that he was in the UVR and not the real world.

He wanted the trial run to mimic the real battle as much as possible to give him accurate data.

...

Knowing that his friends still needed to absorb a couple more flowers to finish the chests, Felix teleported into outer space without his spacesuit on.

The moment he became a deity, he didn't need a constant supply of oxygen to keep himself alive as his body became capable of using any kind of energy to replace the same properties of oxygen.

The oxygen's task was quite simple as it helped the cells with the ability to break down food in order to get the energy needed to survive...As long as this task was fulfilled, it didn't matter what source it came from.

In other words, after becoming a deity, the infinite neutral energy in outer space became the new oxygen for his body!

'This should be enough.' Felix commentated after putting a decent distance between him and the Eternal Nautilus.

Then, he waved his hand and the invisible illusion domain expanded until it covered tens of thousands of kilometers in the blink of an eye.

"Who are you starting with?"

"Wendigo."

"Interesting, starting with the hardest one?" Asna raised an eyebrow in surprise.

"I will conclude the trial with all three of them against me, so the order doesn't matter." Felix said calmly, "I have to prepare for all possible scenarios."

Although Felix knew that Lady Sphinx and Fenrir would be backing him up, it was best to be safe than sorry.

Without further ado, Felix focused on manifesting the perfect version of Wendigo, using the provided data.

Even the consciousness created was identical to Wendigo in terms of prowess, intelligence, and personality!

The only difference was memories as Felix couldn't copy something he had no clue about. Though, to give the illusion clone a perfect motivation to kill Felix, he infested his mind with all the sh*t that happened between them, which was enough to fill his heart with hatred.

When Felix was done and Wendigo opened his eyes, he seemed like he was rearing to rip Felix's face off!

Without an ounce of hesitation, Felix retracted his control and watched Wendigo's silhouette that mirrored the infinite obsidian canvas of space make the first move!

Utilizing the Dark Shroud, he enveloped himself in an aura of shadow that blended seamlessly into the space around him, making his figure almost imperceptible!

"I got just the thing for that."

Unfazed, Felix used his Illusion ability to cast a spectrum of light in every direction. The illuminating mirage rippled through the void, revealing fleeting glimpses of Wendigo's position!

Darkness opposite was light and Felix could manipulate the light and all almost elements with his own illusion domain!

Seizing the opportunity, Felix executed his Lightning ability, Thunder's God Ordinance, sending the most powerful bolt of pure plasma toward the Wendigo.

However, Wendigo seemed prepared.

Using his Shadow Warp ability, he manipulated the darkness to transport himself away from the incoming attack, reappearing behind Felix.

Just as he was about to unleash shadow chains and follow it up with a mental attack, Felix summoned concept destruction palms and did nothing but mark darkness element!

With two slaps, the darkness chains were erased and even Wendigo's existence was almost at risk if he didn't pull away to safety!

Realizing that he couldn't get close to Felix without endangering himself and that his darkness abilities were useless against those destruction palms, Wendigo went for his ultimate ability...Eclipse of Consciousness!

'He is using it.' Felix narrowed his eyes in focus as he watched Wendigo shroud the surroundings in impenetrable darkness, severing his connection with all sources of light, and plunging him into an abyss.

If it wasn't for the concept erasure palms protecting him, he would have plunged into it as well.

Still, he didn't feel safe at all as he knew that the real attack had yet to start!

The real attack, however, began in the mind.

Wendigo's cosmic skull appeared high and mighty with his devilish soulless eyes facing Felix.

Without doing anything, he just kept staring at Felix right in his eyes...Felix didn't close them and kept sharing eye contact with him, wanting to test out whether he would come out alive after experiencing it with his enhanced mental defenses.

Soon, Felix began to feel his inner darkness seeping into his mind.

Crack! Crack!...

Mind Fortress and Psychic Shield were blown out simultaneously the moment they attempted to stop this darkness invasion that was born out of him!

'It can't be, my mental barriers and shields aren't enough?!' Black lines appeared on Felix's forehead at the notion of losing the mental warfare!

After he integrated with Lord Loki's bloodline, he had great confidence in his mental defenses, especially when he unlocked the mind fortress passive.

Alas, Wendigo didn't use just any mental attack, but one of the only three mental ultimate attacks created by a primogenitor!

'Sh*t...I can't think straight anymore...'

Soon, darkness clouded his thoughts and impaired his cognitive functions. The attack further exacerbates feelings of despair, loneliness, and paranoia, fracturing the mental resilience of the victim!

Felix wanted to challenge the attack straightforwardly and test himself, and now he was paying the price!

The moment the darkness finished with his mind, it moved to the most sacred entity in the whole body, the Soul!

The soul barrier started to darken slowly but surely. While Felix's mind was in jumbles, he knew that the moment the darkness cover his entire soul barrier, it would be the moment when his soul wouldn't belong to him anymore!

This was Wendigo's most feared ultimate ability...Eclipse of Consciousness.

It was called such since the soul barrier was a sphere and resembled a star...When the consciousness barrier became completely black, it resembled a star under an eclipse.

'Pause.'

Just as the situation seemed to have gotten unfixable even for him, Felix called out in his mind, causing everything happening in the illusion domain to come to a standstill.

"Well, I don't think this is the result you anticipated." Asna mused.

"I really thought I could have blocked it." Felix sighed.

"I don't know what was your source of confidence." Thor shook his head, "You just became a deity and you think you can block an ultimate metal attack, something that even we feared and avoided at all cost?"

Wendigo's ultimate ability was powerful, but it could work only if there was prolonged eye contact with the target after activation.

The Asgardians always avoided this at all costs during their fights with the darkins even if it meant bailing out.

They knew that the moment it worked on them, they would be controlled akin to puppets by Wendigo!

"Dealing with Saurous and Manananggal will be quite straightforward for you, but I strongly suggest that you avoid Wendigo...At least, not until you become an origin bloodliner and receive the greatest powerup to your mental defenses." Jörmungandr advised.

"I understand." Felix nodded with a serious expression.

Although the results of the trial weren't satisfactory, Felix wasn't discouraged one bit.

In fact, his confidence was healthier than ever since he realized that the darkins only had Wendigo's ultimate ability to harm him.

As long as he avoided it, he was still more than capable of making them regret the day they antagonized him!

"Saurous, Next."

Chapter 1356 Revisiting The Forge.

A few more years went by akin to a cool breeze in spring...

The SGAlliance had unpaused their ranking systems and used all the gained SGPoints during the war for each race's contribution and created a new ranking.

This caused the void nation's ranking to skyrocket and become the fourth ruler!

It was expected as they were the busiest in this entire war due to their overbearing void armies.

Meanwhile, the human race benefited from Felix's representation yet again and was pushed to rank fifteen.

Besides the fact he slain the demon king, he was controlling hundreds of millions of void creatures with Nimo to slow down the demonic invasion in the milky way galaxy.

All of those earned points were given to the human race. Olivia and Noah's involvement in the war also played a major role and earned them an immense amount of points, which were worth cheering for.

Alongside those two drastic changes, the remaining ranks remained somewhat stable if the eliminated races weren't counted.

Felix didn't care much about such ranking at the moment, knowing that the human race would return closer to its rightful rank in the next great reset.

As for his friends? Felix had already done his part of the deal and helped Selphie obtain the wisdom eye after a brutal experimental period.

Since the illusion domain's energy was bearable, he created a cozy house for her and left her to study the runic codex in peace.

The results were just as extraordinary as Lady Yggdrasil proclaimed...Selphie had managed to extract two new lesser time spells in less than two years, which was inconceivable!

Felix was more than pleased with her results as he would be getting those new spells for free.

Since he wasn't losing anything, Felix bestowed the wisdom eye upon Olivia, Noah, and Bodidi as well.

It might not be as effective as in runic study, but it did help them in learning new elemental abilities.

Felix also spent those years in preparation for the upcoming clash.

He had fought against the darkins clones multiple times until they became predictable due to the limitation imposed by the data.

"You are more than ready to take those bastards on." Asna encouraged Felix as she watched him plan to run another useless simulation.

"I know that, but I want them dead." Felix narrowed his eyes coldly, "I have to do everything in my power to make sure that happens in our fight."

Not a single primogenitor was killed at the hands of another ever since their birth and Felix understood that if he wanted to make history, he better come strapping in with everything he got.

"Still, you are right." Felix canceled the simulation, "No matter how many times I kill their clones, it wouldn't help me much with the real thing."

Felix had already killed the darkins' clones in many unique ways in his training. While this helped him gain confidence in his ability to slay the real deal, he knew that if he based his training on the darkins, he would be blindsided.

"It's time for the final touches." Felix reached out to his bracelet and dialed a number on it.

After a few rings, the call was picked up and the deafening cacophony of a busy forge echoed in the background.

The roar of the fires, as they licked and gnawed at the raw materials, the rhythmic pounding and grinding of machines shaping the divine metals, and the sibilant whispers of steam.

"Elder Cyclope," he called, his voice slightly raised, straining to be heard over the mechanical beasts roaring and hammering out a rhythm of progress.

"What do you want, boy? Can't you hear I am busy?" Elder Cyclope replied with an impatient tone.

"I am calling to ask if the work on the divine weapon is close to completion." Felix informed him with a solemn tone, "The eventful day is soon approaching and I would like to have my weapon with me."

"Hahaha! I always knew you were destined for great things, but I would have never imagined that you will start hunting for the darkins before a century passed." Elder Cyclope laughed, his booming voice engulfed the forge's noise.

When Elder Cyclope began working on Felix's divine weapon, he could be barely mentioned in the same breath as the top ten strongest fighters in the alliance.

Yet, in less than eighty years in the real world, he was already rearing to begin his vengeance on actual primogenitors!

Even Elder Cyclope couldn't help but be left astonished by his groundbreaking speed.

"I have received great help in the elementals galaxy."

Felix confessed, unwilling to accept such credit as it made him seem like he was blessed by gods instead of spending thousands of years, bleeding, sweating, and dying to reach his current level.

"You think that's not as impressive?" Elder Cyclope chuckled, "It took primogenitors hundreds of millions of years to reach their peak before their advancements either halted or slowed down to a snail's speed. You have reached their level in less than ten thousand years and I doubt this is even your limit."

"To know that one of my few masterpieces is going to be wielded by you sets my heart at peace."

"I'm undeserving of such high honor." Felix replied with a respectful tone.

"Enough of this, if you want to come to check your weapon, accept the link."

Straightforward as an arrow, Elder Cyclope sent Felix the link and hung up the call the moment he felt that the conversation was going to waste his time.

Without delay, Felix logged in to the UVR and pressed the link, causing him to appear in Elder Cyclope's real forge as a holographic figure.

As Felix opened his eyes, the sight that met him was nothing short of awe-inspiring.

Suspended in midair by a pair of formidable, mechanical arms, a magnificent axe seemed to defy the laws of gravity and time!

The divine axe held aloft like a deity on a celestial altar, shimmered with a captivating, otherworldly glow.

The ancestral dragon's golden scales wrapped around the handle shone with a brilliance that seemed to pulse in sync with Felix's heartbeat.

Meanwhile, the root of Lady Yggdrasil, which connected the handle and the head, emanated an aura that was both soothing and intimidating, a testament to the divine wisdom that it bore!

The head of the weapon, sculpted from the rarest Nethersteel, glimmered ominously under the flickering lights of the forge.

The axe blade on one side radiated a dark, chilling promise of destruction, while the hammer on the other projected an unyielding resolve.

The potent juxtaposition of these two forces, creation, and annihilation, was a breathtaking spectacle to behold!

Felix stared at the divine weapon, the weight of what he had accomplished pressing down on him.

The dangerous adventures he had to go through to collect the materials for this divine weapon seemed to play akin to a lost movie in his mind.

Yet, not an ounce of regret was displayed in his eyes that reflected the brilliance of his end reward.

All he could utter in the end was, "It was worth it..."

"I see you have been mesmerized by this masterpiece." Elder Cyclope stood next to Felix and said with a faint smile, "It's been waiting for you to name it for a long time now, how about you give it a go?"

"Really? Is it already finished?" Felix broke out of his daze.

"Not yet, it still needs a few final touches to bring everything together, but feel free to name it." Elder Cyclopes offered, "There aren't going to be any more drastic changes."

"I see...Well, I don't think I can name it now." Felix responded, "My brain is coming out blank and I think I have to try it on first."

"That's not an issue." Elder Cyclope offered, "If you want to test it out, you can come right now."

"For real? Won't it ruin the forging process?" Felix's eyes widened in shock and a bit of excitement.

"The forging process is already over and as well as most of the divine inscriptions." Elder Cyclope smiled, "I always leave a decade or so for testing as I can't give out my work without making sure everything is perfect. You can take care of this if you w..."

"I am on my way!"

Before Elder Cyclopes could finish his sentence, Felix already took off.

Elder Cyclope chuckled and lifted his head to stare at his masterpiece...As he kept staring at it, his laugh died down until only a solemn expression remained.

"Let's hope he will be able to handle you."

Chapter 1357 Only For The Worthy.

To get there even faster, Felix used both Bodidi and Candace's help.

This decreased the journey's period to less than a few hours even when they were billions of light years away from each other.

Whoosh!

After being given permission, Candace opened a void rift inside the forge and Felix exited it with a suppressed eager expression.

He tried his best to play it cool and stay composed, but it wasn't that easy.

Who could blame him? He would finally own a divine weapon and not just any one, but a masterpiece born out of the ashes of Moljin and made with the best materials known in the universe!

"Woah...Is this really a weapon?" Bodidi expressed with a dazed expression as he stared at the divine axe with his head lifted.

"It's not any weapon, it's the greatest weapon I have ever forged." Elder Cyclope appeared out of nowhere with a nude hairy upper chest, covered in sweat.

"Even better than Mjolnir?"

Thor manifested as a hologram with a defensive expression, seemingly offended that his precious weapon had lost the crown of the best-forged divine equipment.

All primogenitors possessed hundreds if not thousands of divine equipment, but only a couple had masterpieces like Mjolnir.

"Don't get upset with me here, I can tell you right now and here that this axe should possess a different grade entirely." Elder Cyclope noted with a tint of pride in his tone, "Because of your kid's unique prowess and seemingly limitless potential, I had taken the liberty to go all out like never before."

"If you really feel this way, then I have to say, I am anticipating the axe's prowess." Thor dropped his dissatisfaction, knowing that Elder Cyclope wasn't boastful.

If he proclaimed that the divine axe was this amazing, then it was bound to turn heads.

"Well, there is quite an issue." Elder Cyclope rubbed his bald scalp with a sheepish look.

"What issue?"

Felix's excitement and eagerness dried up immediately at the sound of this ominous statement.

"Because I went all out and didn't restrict the divine axe's prowess, not anyone can wield it to its fullest potential...Even worse, if you are deemed unworthy, your lifeforce will be used to power up each skill used that belongs to it."

"..."

"..."

"..."

Everyone was left staring at Elder Cyclope speechlessly, having no clue what to say back.

It was understandable to feel this way as Thor didn't sacrifice his criteria to be deemed worthy?"

partner just for the weapon to remain unusable...No need to mention Felix who went through hell to get his hands on those three materials.

Felix took a deep breath and asked. "Elder...May I know what are the criteria to be deemed worthy?"

"That's the thing, I have no clue." Elder Cyclope shrugged his shoulders.

Felix's eyelids twitched, but he kept his emotions under control, not daring to lash out. Fortunately, Thor wasn't as patient as him.

"Old geezer! What the hell is this?" Thor cursed, "What's the point of this weapon being powerful if there is no one to wield it?"

This was the rational reaction for anyone with a bit of intelligence.

Felix would have felt better to know at least the criteria of judgment, so he could work towards winning the divine axe's approval. But, when there were no criteria, this meant that he had to leave it to fate.

There was nothing worse than not being in complete control of his own weapon, especially, when he had to sacrifice his life force each time he used it.

"Take it or leave it, you know I have no refund policy." Elder Cyclope waved his hand casually, taking no responsibility for this problem.

"You better throw in some divine equipment from your vault as compensation!"

Knowing that there was nothing going to change this situation, Thor could only take advantage of it and earn Felix some more divine pieces of equipment.

"Keep dreaming."

Alas, Elder Cyclope might be kind, but he wasn't easy to swindle.

"Tsk, cheapskate." Thor clicked his tongue.

"Master, what's done is done." Felix narrowed his eyes at the magnificent gigantic divine axe and uttered, "The only path forward is to make it recognize me as its master."

The divine axe's smooth silver metal head gleamed the moment Felix finished speaking, seemingly taunting him to give it his best.

"Is it just me or does it feel like it has a consciousness?" Candace tilted her head in confusion.

"It shouldn't...At least, not this soon." Thor shook his head. "This is called divine instinct and most divine equipments have them. It helps with communication with the equipment to activate its inscribed skills."

"It looks like this divine axe's instinct is a tad more demanding than the others."

"Does divine equipment awake their consciousness because of this instinct?" Felix inquired.

"It plays a tiny role in it, but in reality, consciousness awakening can happen only after long exposures with elemental energy and usage." Thor clarified, "My Mjolnir was merely a hundred million years away from having its own consciousness. This was possible only because I was using it in every fight."

"For now, you shouldn't bother yourself with this." Thor said, "If you don't find a way to make this weapon yours, you can forget about any of this."

"I will make it happen." Felix nodded with a serious expression.

Without delay, Felix increased his size until he was three times the divine axe's height. Then, he reached out with his right hand and caught it from the middle of the twisted shimmering milky white root.

The moment Felix made contact with the divine axe, it pulsed with a dormant, yet palpable energy, making him feel like he was holding into a slumbering nightmare, one that could awaken and unleash chaos at any moment.

Whoosh!

The divine inscriptions etched onto the axe, suddenly glimmered as they came into contact with his flesh, causing the entire divine axe to start lighting up akin to a Christmas tree.

"Ugh!"

A beautiful, hypnotic sight...If it wasn't for the fact Felix's life force was being sucked out of him against his will!

Felix could feel it vividly, a subtle leeching at first, like a thirst on a hot day.

The axe was drinking deeply from his lifeforce, each breath drawn from him lighting up another divine inscription on the weapon.

The axe head shimmered like a star-lit night sky, a spectacle that was both ethereal and terrifying.

"Leave it be, Felix!" Asna called out with a hint of worry at how fast Felix's life force was being devoured!

In just a few seconds, he had lost decades of his longevity and it didn't seem to be slowing anytime soon!

"I am trying, but the f*cker won't let go!" Felix cursed as he kept attempting to pull his hand from the divine axe.

Alas, it felt as if it was melded into the weapon's haft, unyielding and inseparable.

The draining persisted, his lifeforce being siphoned away with a cruel inevitability that stirred a wave of rising anger within him.

Felix's eyes blazed with defiance, knowing that he could never tame this monster if he cut off his hand or did anything else to escape from its leashing!

"ENOUGH!"

With a thundering furious shout, ripping from his throat, Felix drew back his free hand, fist clenched tight as granite, and swung at the axe's gleaming silver head!!

BOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOM!!!

His fist collided with the divine metal with a deafening clang that echoed through the celestial forge!

The impact sent a shockwave pulsing out from the point of contact, a raw burst of energy that rippled across the room, shaking the very foundation of the celestial forge!

As hard as a mountain, Elder Cyclope stood through the shockwave while Candace and Bodidi swiftly escaped into different dimensions, knowing that their bodies would get blown out into shreds if they got touched by it!

After the shockwave passed by, the divine inscriptions flared brightly before settling back down, their lights dimming.

The gluing force on his hand went away and his life force was finally spared. Still, Felix didn't quickly retract his hand to safety.

Instead, he doubled down his clutch and brought the divine axe near his icy cold expression.

"I don't mind playing rough as well, so I dare you to keep pulling this sh*t in my presence." He uttered.

The divine axe didn't respond, making it seem like it had gotten tamed...But, Felix could feel that the divine axe was as defiant as him and he had merely proved himself to hold it!

Holding it was one thing and wielding it was another.

'This is really going to be a handful for you.' Asna chuckled.

Chapter 1358 Testing The Divine Axe!

'I don't mind it, we will see who will prevail in the end.' Felix smiled, waving the divine axe around him to have a sense of its weight.

Whoosh! Whoosh!

Even though he was gently waving it around, the air seemed to cry for help as the sharp blade of the axe kept slicing through it without an ounce of resistance.

"Let's take it outside to test it." Elder Cyclope shooed him away, "You will damage my forge like this."

Felix placed the divine axe on his shoulder and requested with an eager tone, "Is it possible to try it on a planet or a star?"

"As long as you pick another solar system, do as you please with it." Elder Cyclope permitted.

The moment he heard this, Felix took off with Bodidi and Candace...Obviously, he took elder Cyclope with them to supervise the test and give a final grade to his work.

...

Two million light years away from the forge, Felix could be seen standing thousands of kilometers away from a small deserted cloudy planet.

The barren expanse of the small, deserted planet stretched out before Felix, a canvas of emptiness punctuated only by the stark loneliness of space.

In his hand, the divine axe, gargantuan and imposing, pulsed with celestial energy.

Felix balanced the tremendous weight of the axe effortlessly on his shoulder.

His eyes, full of steely determination, were locked onto the lifeless sphere in the distance...He had already done his due diligence and found out that not a single ounce of life was on this planet.

It was the same as a pebble near a river, no one would know or care if it went missing.

'Let's do this.'

With a deep breath, he hoisted the axe over his shoulder, its divine inscriptions flickering to life, lighting up the desolate landscape around him!

"Size Manipulation."

Felix used both his ultimate ability and the size manipulation skill on the divine axe to grow into celestial sizes together.

"Woah...This is the first time I see a living person get this big."

Bodidi exclaimed with an astounded tone as he stared at Felix and his axe, becoming as big as Earth or even slightly bigger!

"At last, you can sustain such size for a decent period." Asna commented.

She knew that Thor, Cyclopes, and other primogenitors with size manipulation were required to devour planets and celestial objects as fuel since neutral energy in outer space wasn't potent enough for lasting periods.

Right now, Felix could maintain this form for a reasonable period before his size would get reduced forcefully to adjust to the incoming fuel.

Unfortunately, the divine axe also required a heavy amount of fuel to maintain its freakish size.

The fuel in this scenario was nonother than Felix's life force!

'F*cking hell, I can feel the years getting sucked out of me each second.' Felix got pissed again at the divine axe targeting his life force instead of the elemental energy stored within it.

Alas, no matter how mad he had gotten this time, it didn't seem like the divine axe had any intentions of switching fuel sources.

So, instead of complaining or canceling the test entirely, Felix took a deep breath to calm himself and then hurled the divine axe with everything he got!

The enormous weapon sliced through the vacuum of space like a shooting star, a brilliant comet that marked its path with an ethereal trail!

The abandoned planet seemed to hold its breath as the axe drew nearer, almost as if anticipating the impact.

With a deafening crash that reverberated through the cosmos, the divine axe struck, its silver head cutting into the planet's crust like a hot knife through butter under the stunned eyes of Bodidi and Candace.

"Dear goodness..."

"What the..."

The silent planet was silent no more, as a shockwave of cosmic energy rippled across its surface, the impact splitting the planet cleanly down the middle!

From a distance, Felix watched as the once solid sphere started to slowly separate, creating a monumental chasm that bore testament to the power of the divine axe.

As the dust settled and the echoing rumble of the cataclysm faded away, something remarkable happened.

The divine axe, seemingly unscathed by the colossal destruction it had wrought, began to change its trajectory!

Like a cosmic boomerang, it reversed its course, cutting across the emptiness of space to return to its user!

Felix anticipated this much and outstretched his right hand.

With a sense of inevitability, the divine axe returned to him...It settled into his grasp as if it had never left, as intact as the moment he first held it, its divine inscriptions glowing softly.

"If you weren't such a hungry asshole, I would have kissed you now." Felix said with an irritated look, mixed with satisfaction.

How could he not be satisfied?

He had just sundered an entire planet into two halves from thousands of kilometers without putting much effort into it.

The best part? The divine axe would always return to him as it had the same boomerang skill inscribed on it, which meant he would never be without his weapon in hand!

Felix swiftly canceled the size manipulation skill of the divine axe and returned it to its original size, not wanting to lose out more years for nothing.

'What you have seen right now, is only four skills being used...Three passively, and one actively.' Elder Cyclope shared telepathically. 'Besides Size Manipulation and Boomerang, the other two are Empowered Acceleration and Fine Cut.'

'Seems like they are the improved versions of what I had before.' Felix smiled.

When Elder Cyclope told him to pick the skills he wanted on his divine axe, Felix prioritized those passives even when they sounded too simple and common.

It was the right move as when both those two passives work together, nothing can stop them from cutting through anything!

'I have also added a similar second form to your previous battleaxe as per your request.' Elder Cyclope said, 'Just call duel style and it will be activated.'

'If it's the same as the one I know, there is no need to showcase it.' Thor advised, 'You might have millions of years of lifespan now that you have become a deity, but it doesn't mean you can waste them to fuel meaningless tests.'

'I understand.' Felix nodded in agreement.

Elder Cyclope moved on as well.

'Besides those five requested skills, I took the liberty to inscribe skills relevant to your countless unique powers.' He grinned faintly.

'What do you mean?'

'First off, I added two elemental amplification/empowering skills working in tandem to increase the prowess and even effect of any spell, skill, or ability used.' Elder Cyclope shared with a look of gratification. 'This is a new combination of skills that have never been inscribed on any other divine equipment before.'

'You are telling me that all of my abilities, spells, and even the divine axe's skills can be amplified? How is that even possible?!'

Neither Felix nor the tenants believed Elder Cyclope's bold statement right away as it was just so insane to think about.

Even Lord Shiva and Lord Loki had their interest piqued.

They could understand amplifying skills and abilities, but runes had wands as their medium and there was no way they would be affected by another object, even if it was a divine weapon.

'I know what you are wondering.' Elder Cyclope smiled, 'All I had to do was turn the divine axe into a wand as well to make it work.'

'Lady Yggdrasil's first root!' Felix exclaimed as he eyed the milky white haft.

'It wouldn't have been possible without it.' Elder Cyclope confirmed.

'You really outdid yourself here.' Thor praised.

'I have just been given more freedom in my work.' Elder Cyclope scoffed in annoyance, 'Working with you guys has been a pain in the ass since you need your skills tailored exactly for your element.'

'We didn't hear you complain back then.' Thor's eyelids twitched.

Elder Cyclope ignored him and continued his conversation with Felix, 'If you want to use the amplification on anything, just channel the ability through the divine axe.'

'It's really like a wand.'

Just as Felix picked a time spell and wanted to test the waters with it, Elder Cyclope warned him, 'Be careful, the amplification is limited to the fuel it's given.'

'Sh*t.' Felix dropped the test immediately.

He understood that his divine axe was using lifeforce as fuel and if he dared to use the amplification skills, it would make sure to suck him dry out of centuries if not millenniums until he cut off the source!

'If I want to use this axe to its fullest potential, I really need to tame it and recognize me as its master.' Felix narrowed his eyes coldly, 'Since it responds to confrontation, I can't b*tch out from a mere test.'

'Elder Cyclope, can you tell me one of its active offensive skills?' Felix asked.

If he was going to amplify something, it better be a new skill to test two at once.

'You can try Cosmic Rift.' Elder Cyclope suggested with a wide smile.

Chapter 1359 Cosmic Rift!

'Cosmic Rift?' Felix raised an eyebrow in intrigue.

'It's one of the divine axe's strongest attacks.' Elder Cyclope said, 'Just make sure to channel spatial elemental energy to activate it.'

'Alright.'

Felix didn't ask for more as he wanted to see the attack with his own eyes. The first thing he did was increase his size with the axe yet again to a celestial height.

'I am going to show you that no one else is capable of wielding you as good as me in this entire universe.' Felix uttered indifferently as he eyed the divine axe.

Then, he began channeling the spatial elemental energy into it, causing a portion of divine inscriptions to light up, responding to the call.

As he drew on the fathomless depths of his power, the axe responded in kind; its edge flaring with hues unseen, as if drinking in the very essence of the cosmos.

Just like it sensed his desire to impress it, the divine axe responded by devouring his life force akin to a hungry hippo to power up the cosmic rift attack in addition to its amplification!

Humm! Humm...

A purplish hue began manifesting from the axe's blade while it was vibrating left and right, seemingly building inside of it an unfathomable power that was too tough to contain!

'You think I can't handle you?!' Felix tightened his grip on the axe's handle while his face kept getting whiter and whiter.

'You can do it!' Asna encouraged him instead of stopping him, knowing that Felix could not back down from this confrontation.

'The divine axe is taking in more fuel than it requires and it will reach a point when it will be too much for it.'

Lord Loki mentioned with a look of anticipation as he was seen eating popcorn while sunbathing next to Lord Shiva.

'How much do you think it will absorb before the boy finally gives in?' He turned around and asked his peer.

'He isn't giving in.' Lord Shiva responded expressionlessly, not bothering to even glance in his direction.

'You have this much confidence in him?' Lord Loki chuckled, 'He might have millions of years to live, but it doesn't mean he can afford to have his life force devoured this fiercely.'

Lord Shiva ignored him and glanced only once in Felix's direction. Then, he looked down and continued sunbathing lazily.

He understood that Lord Loki was right and that Felix might even end up dead if he lost too much of his life force at once, but still, he was certain that he wasn't going to give up.

HUMMM!! HUMMMM!!

'I suggest we watch from another dimension.'

Elder Cyclope swiftly joined Bodidi in his pocket dimension after seeing that the divine axe's blade was humming nonstop, sending powerful reverberation all over the place.

While he wasn't worried about them, he sure as hell wanted to not be around in case the divine axe did end up blowing up from within!

'A shame really, going out like this on your first day.' Felix mocked.

He might sound uncaring and unbothered, but his scrawny dull body said otherwise.

If he bothered to count, he would find out that he had lost more than ten thousand years in merely a couple of seconds, something that would freak out anyone else!

Yet, he still had no plans of backing out.

HUMMMM!!!

As everyone's breaths were held either in worry or anticipation at the sight of the divine axe's head seemingly about to explode, Felix felt a sudden gentle sensation running through his fingers.

'Smart choice.' Felix neither mocked nor gloated, he simply narrowed his eyes in the direction of the nearest star.

With a deep voice, he muttered, 'Cosmic Rift.'

And then he swung.

He swung with the weight of galaxies behind his blow.

The axe, an instrument of the cosmos, sang a resounding chord that echoed through the silent, chilling vacuum of space!

The omnipotent force encased within the axe ignited in a prismatic blaze, projecting an unfathomable purplish force gush that split the very fabric of reality!

Reality twisted and distorted as the shockwave tore across the universe, the cosmos seemingly folding upon itself!

A swath of darkness, vast and terrifying, cut through the stars like a gargantuan blade.

The yawning rift, a void as black as the farthest reaches of the universe, bisected the heavens...It spanned more than millions of kilometers, a horrifying testament to the power Felix and the divine axe had summoned hand in hand!

Yet, it wasn't over.

The nearest star, a colossal sphere of fiery plasma, was caught in the torrent of this cosmic calamity.

The star quivered under the force of the axe's power, its photons trembling as the incision approached.

Then, with a deafening silence that resonated through the cosmos, the star was cleaved in twain under the stunned eyes of Asna and the tenants...Even Lord Shiva and Lord Loki had their pupils enlarged at this harrowing but breathtaking sight.

'Oh, dear...'

'This is...'

In that monumental moment, the star began to collapse upon itself. Its halves spiraled into the dark abyss of the rift, a final dance before their end.

The pressure mounted, a cauldron of nuclear reactions going haywire as the equilibrium of the star was shattered.

And then came the supernova!

The star's demise was not silent, nor was it subtle. It erupted in an explosion of light, gamma radiation, and cosmic particles that bathed the universe in a brilliant glow!

It was a death throes of a star, an epitaph written in pure energy.

The cosmos reeled from the force of the Cosmic Rift, space-time shuddering as the echo of the star's death resonated through the universe.

Amidst this colossal display of power, Felix stood with a frozen expression.

His gaze was steady, his grip on the celestial axe unwavering, but his heart was about to leap out of his chest from sheer shock.

Humm...

The divine axe hummed one last time before going silent, seemingly telling Felix and everyone that it wasn't to be trifled with.

"Holy sh*t! Holy sh*t! Is this real life?!" Bodidi exclaimed loudly in disbelief.

Shivers were coursing down his spine at the cries of space after being brutally cut down like this.

"My god...Can even primogenitors cause such damage?" Candace stated while covering her mouth, feeling as agitated as Bodidi.

No one bothered to answer her as everyone else was just as taken back.

It wasn't because of the damage as there were many primogenitors capable of destroying stars, but by the notion it was done, using a divine weapon!

"Elder Cyclope really wasn't joking around when he said that it deserves an entirely new grade for it." Thor proclaimed.

"He sure as hell wasn't." Jörmungandr added with a satisfied smile.

"Felix, you better get out of there." Lady Sphinx warned.

"Yes!"

Felix broke out of his daze at last and swiftly entered the void realm after minimizing his size.

He knew that Lady Sphinx warned him not because of the supernova's incoming explosion force, but because of the cosmic radiation.

He could take on the force with his destruction immunity, but the cosmic radiation would do him great damage when exposed to such a heavy and potent quantity at once.

In a few minutes at best, Felix emerged in a different solar system.

The moment he got out of the void rift, he entered his spaceship and beamed the divine axe in his hands, staring at it with an awed look.

Elder Cyclope appeared next to him from a dimensional portal with Bodidi behind him.

"You better not think this is the normal cosmic rift attack. The only reason the attack reached such destructiveness was due to the amplification/empowering skills being fueled by a massive quantity of life force." He said. "In reality, the normal cosmic rift attack can slice space apart for a hundred thousand kilometers or less using all of its stored elemental energy."

"I know, but it still feels amazing to know that it can reach such heights." Felix said with a wide grin as he caressed the divine axe's handle.

The divine axe seemed to enjoy his touch like they weren't trying to get each other killed just a few moments ago.

"I guess it accepted you after all." Asna mused. "Didn't think you will make it happen so quickly."

"For such a prideful divine weapon, it either respects and accept you from the start or it will always look down on you." Thor smiled, "Felix had earned its respect by not caving in even in the face of death."

Losing life force was manageable for anyone with longevity, but to lose it so fast it could cause one's death, was a different challenge on its own.

Even when Felix looked like a corpse and seemed to be moments away from a meeting with the grim reaper, he fought on.

The divine axe recognized his indomitable will more than anything!

"I think you have earned the right to name it now." Asna narrowed her eyes at him, "You better not be thinking of a stupid name again."

She still dreaded his garbage naming sense to this day after he named the sand guardians.

"Don't worry, I already know what to name it." Felix smirked, as his mind replayed the last scene of him and the axe breaking the cosmos apart.

"From this day onward, you shall be called, The CosmosBreaker." Felix proclaimed with a proud look, not seeing Asna and most of the tenants rolling their eyes at him.

Alas, no matter what they feel about the name, Felix had no plans to change it.

"Now, let's introduce you to my beloved 'friends', the darkins." Felix's smirk turned cold.

Chapter 1360 Imperfect Fix To an Unsolvable Problem.

"You should put a raincheck on that." Elder Cyclope said as he took the weapon from Felix. "I said it still needs some final touches before it's finished."

"Didn't those tests demonstrate its readiness?" Candace wondered.

"It's ready for fights, but it's not ready for it to be fully wielded by him." Elder Cyclope shared, addressing Felix.

"What do you mean?"

"The divine weapon is still vulnerable to destruction particles and since it's one of your main elements, it won't do you good to have a weapon that could be destroyed the moment it was touched by a destruction particle." Elder Cyclope explained.

Felix raised an eyebrow in surprise.

He already knew that there would be some inconvenience in using the weapon side by side with his destruction abilities, but he was prepared to make sure that both of them wouldn't touch each other.

Now, he was being told that there was an actual way to protect the weapon from it. He really found it somewhat unimaginable.

"How is it even possible to make an object immune to destruction element?" Candace asked what was on his mind.

"It's not."

"So..."

"Let me finish." Elder Cyclope paused, "It might be impossible to make a material immune to destruction element, but it is more than doable to give it a peak resistance to destruction particles through a divine inscription."

Before they could ask about the difference, he continued on, "Peak resistance to destruction particles implied that any physical destruction ability will deal the least amount of damage to it. With the divine weapon's powerful self-repairing skill, the damage won't reach a breaking point."

"Though, this affects only physical destruction abilities. If you used concept destruction to mark its material or totality collapse on it, it will be erased as well."

"I might have gone all out to create the greatest divine weapon, but there are some realities in life that can't be changed." Elder Cyclope concluded with a deep sigh.

It was obvious that he really wanted to create an indestructible weapon capable of surviving totality collapse or even void domain, but no matter how good his craft was, he was still using materials subjected to the same laws and rules of the universe.

If even space/time collapsed before total destruction, there was no other material capable of surviving it...At least, not known.

Still, Felix didn't seem too upset about this.

While it might seem bad to have a weapon prone to destruction through void domain and totality collapse, he was already using an ingenious method to protect his items from those abilities.

He had used it before on his AP bracelet when he utilized totality collapse against Lucifer.

It was through the use of Lord Loki's mutation, shapeshifting!

He made small changes to his skin around the AP bracelet to include it inside, making it seem like it was melded with his skin!

Anything melded under Felix's skin receives the protection of his destruction immunity.

This meant that he could easily beam his CosmosBreaker into his spatial ring with the rest of his at-risk objects like the sun disk and then fuse it under his skin for protection.

So, if the CosmosBreaker ended up destroyed even after all of this, he had no one to blame but himself.

"This is already more than I ever asked for." Felix bowed his head in gratitude. "Much appreciated elder, you really are the greatest forger of all times."

"I did for myself more than I did it for you." Elder Cyclope said with a nostalgic look, "Just make sure to use it against the darkins, it sure will feel nice to see my divine pieces of equipment in action again."

"You don't have to worry about that." Felix smiled coldly, "I won't fight them without it."

...

Sometime later...

Candace and Bodidi had taken their leave while Felix decided to hang around inside Elder Cyclope's forge.

He was told that the final divine inscriptions would take Elder Cyclope a year or less to finish. Then, he would be free to test everything about the weapon and even take it with him if he was confident in Elder Cyclope's craft.

"Since we will be heading towards the seven demon realms after the divine weapon's completion, I suggest we meet with your student in the forge." Fenrir proposed to Lady Sphinx.

"I thought so as well." Lady Sphinx nodded.

"Master, since you are coming here, how about we carry on with the void immunity replacement?" Felix mentioned, "I think it's time we go for it."

"Are you sure?" Lady Sphinx asked for confirmation with a solemn tone. "Once your void immunity is gone, you will be introduced into a whole world of pain when affected with void energy."

"I can't pass on the void domain. It's a sacrifice worth taking." Felix confirmed it.

"Alright then."

The only reason Felix was willing to take such a risk was that he owned a void suit, which provided him with void immunity.

If he didn't possess it, he wouldn't dare go for it.

...

The next morning...

Felix could be seen sitting on an uncomfortable metallic chair with an attentive expression. His mesmerizing arctic blue eyes were affixed on Elder Cyclope.

Thud! Thud!...

The Elder's hand moved methodically, almost reverently, each motion precise and deliberate. Sparks of astral power source swirled from his fingers, weaving themselves into divine words, symbols of power that thrummed with the heartbeat of the universe itself.

They etched themselves onto the surface of the axe, each glyph a testament to cosmic authority.

The words, radiant and sacred, began to shine brighter each time he finished them.

Felix watched in awe-struck silence, the enormity of the moment not lost on him. He did not even dare to breathe out loud to not break Elder Cyclope's focus.

'The three celestial languages, It's so fascinating how they can shape the elemental energy, yet we can't even see them.' He said, his gaze lingering on the spectacle before him, tracing the movement of the Elder and the arcane inscription that came alive under his touch.

Felix was told that the universe was made out of three things...Atoms, Laws, and neutral energy.

While laws and atoms were somewhat the same as they signify the rules of the universe, the neutral power source was the unique aspect of the universe.

Its ability to become any elemental energy, which allowed one to recreate the same environments as with laws, made it seem like it was made for the creatures.

'I always feel like neutral energy existence does not add anything to the survivability of the universe.' Felix wondered, 'What's the point of giving birth to energy that doesn't add anything but chaos?'

Based on Felix's understanding, the universe never creates something unless it was a good reason.

In the case of neutral energy? The universe would be the same with or without it...After all, the only ones using it were the creations, and the universe did not seem to give a shit about the parasites on its body.

'What are you trying to say?' Candace played along with him.

'I do not know, I am just speaking my mind.' Felix dropped the subject as he was not too interested in conspiracy theories.

Unbeknownst to him, most of the tenants did not think of it as a conspiracy theory in the slightest...

'Do you think it's possible for me to get my hands on divine codex too?' Felix changed the subject by asking his masters. 'I already have universal and runic codex in me, it sure will be one of a kind to have all three simultaneously.'
