Chapter 1621 Creating The Ultimate Cultivation System! II

Felix knew that achieving this step was 50% of the work and the rest could be easily handled with a wish.

But genetic compatibility wasn't a simple subject...Fortunately, Felix had studied it thoroughly with Lady Sphinx's help during his research period when he was mastering all alchemy fields.

"What are you going to do?" Selphie asked with an intrigued look as she watched him draw blood from the clones.

"Running a process called genetic mapping to highlight similar sequences between races," Felix responded while placing the blood vials inside the reading consoles.

When he pressed 'start', three holographic displays sprang to life, showing a detailed map of Olivia, Noah, and Bodidi's genetic codes.

The strands of DNA twirled and twisted in a mesmerizing dance, revealing the secrets of their being.

Noah and the others recognized their DNA and the heavy difference between them and Bodidi...But, that was the limit of their understanding unlike Felix, who was able to process every piece of information easily through his wisdom eye.

After he finished the reading, he repeated the same process, but this time with a Pandion's DNA.

He had almost all races' DNAs, plus other peculiar items and treasures in his spatial cards, knowing that a day would come when he might use them.

After he initiated the genetic mapping sequence, he requested Queen Ai to highlight specific genes and markers, identifying potential points of compatibility between his friends' DNA and the Pandions' DNA.

When Queen Ai was done, Felix was slightly surprised to see that both races shared a much better compatibility than he assumed...The opposite was for Bodidi's as the compatibility wasn't even in the 1% range.

'It must be due to races originating from mammals.'

As the analysis progressed, Felix took notes, his expression a mix of concentration and interest.

Now, he was looking for commonalities, areas where human DNA might naturally align with the Pandion's ability to create their core at their growth stage.

If he managed to find this exact responsible genome sequence, he would be able to genetically modify the future generation of humans to possess the same ability.

He also noted areas of potential conflict, where human genes might resist or react adversely to the core's integration.

The lab was silent except for the soft hum of machines and the occasional beep of a completed analysis.

'This can't be it...Not this one either...Is it? No...'

Felix worked tirelessly, his mind a whirlwind of thoughts and calculations.

He knew that he could easily reach out to Lady Sphinx and help him out since she had already considered genetically modifying him with a Pandion's genes.

In the end, she chose the devourer's cultivation system, knowing that it would help him the most with his physical strength.

Pandion's core was great, but it would have never given Felix a strength boost of 300K BF total.

As hours slipped into the realm of late night, a particular sequence caught Felix's attention at last.

It was a complex chain of genetic information, but within it, Felix saw the rhythm of potential.

"This is it...It has the details of the process of absorbing, converting, and even storing neutral energy in a way that is both efficient and potent."

This sequence appeared to be the blueprint for how Pandions naturally developed their cores!

"All I see is a bunch of letters...How can you know that?" Bodidi asked with a deep yawn, bored from watching Felix doing nothing but staring at a screen.

"If you considered our bodies as books and those genetic letters to be instructions, then it's not weird to be able to read them like a language and figure out what each sentence meant and did to us," Felix explained it in easier terms.

"I see, If that..."

"Stop bothering him, if you are bored, go out and walk." Olivia chided before Bodidi could add another question.

Bodidi went silent instantly, not wanting to go anywhere in this empty wasteland.

Meanwhile, Felix leaned closer, his fingers deftly navigating the 3D model of the genetic sequence. He isolated the chain, examining each twist and turn with a keen eye.

There it was, a series of genes that, when expressed in a certain way, initiated the formation of a core.

"Now, to the interesting part of the experiment."

Felix cracked his fingers as he prepared for the procedure to modify the genetics of the clones.

His friends' eyes showed a glimmer of anticipation and curiosity as they watched him put the clones inside giant glass pods with a sticky blue liquid.

Felix initiated the modification process, his hands steady as he manipulated the equipment to introduce the sequence into their DNA.

The lab was filled with a low hum as the machinery worked to splice the genetic key into their very essence, aiming to grant them the ability to absorb and convert neutral energy just like the Pandions.

One by one, the monitors showed the progress of the integration.

Felix observed with bated breath, his hope a tangible force in the room.

"Will I succeed in the first attempt?"

Before this thought could take root in his mind, Olivia was the first to have a soft reaction as her body started twitching inside the pod while her heartbeats accelerated significantly!

"What's happening?" Olivia asked, not enjoying the sight of her clone suffering in her place.

"Your body has rejected the modification. It fought off the foreign sequence as it would any invasive entity." Felix answered.

The monitor displayed a series of rapid fluctuations before stabilizing, and the sequence was ultimately expelled from her system.

Olivia's clone returned to her normal state.

Next was Noah.

The integration proceeded further with him, the sequence weaving into his DNA. But then, an unexpected genetic anomaly triggered a cascade failure. The sequence, incompatible with this anomaly, unraveled, leaving Noah's genetic structure untouched by the intended modifications.

"As expected, it's your werewolf's genes getting in the way. Your body has already been genetically modified to almost perfection by my master. It's extremely difficult for you to obtain the core." Felix clarified with an understandable tone.

"I see..." Noah seemed a bit disappointed.

He understood that Felix had chosen them as his test targets not because he knew they wouldn't refuse him, but because he wished for them to have the same core too.

It would be a great boost to their strength and if he finished the entire cultivation system, it would open up new possibilities.

Alas...

"What about me? Did my body succeed?" Bodidi inquired with a slightly excited tone as he observed his clone make no reaction.

"Oh, your clone has died already." Felix shattered his hopes and happiness with a casual tone as he had already expected this much to occur.

"..." Bodidi was exited speechless.

He did notice his clone's heart stop beating, but he believed that it shouldn't be possible for him to die that easily without sounding even a fart in the process.

"Did you know this will happen?"

"Yes."

"Then, why the hell am I even part of this experiment?"

"Can't you tell?" Felix gave him a weird look, "For collecting anomalies if one ever seems to occur."

"You monster..." Bodidi felt an urge to cry but had no tears to spill.

"Is it really necessary? Why does it seem like an attempt to bully him?" Selphie chuckled in amusement.

"As much as I would want it to be that, it's no longer fun to bully him." Felix replied with an easy-going tone, "The first thing Master taught me is to always add an unrelated subject to the experiment with close to zero odds of something good coming out of it."

"Why?" Olivia asked.

"When it comes to genetic manipulation, nothing is set in stone and even my master has almost got me killed once." Felix said with a serious tone, "If the certain isn't certain, then the uncertain might be certain."

In other words, a miracle might have occurred and Bodidi's clone could have not just obtained the powers to create a core and handle it, but go beyond and evolve it somehow to give him other sets of powers!

That's the beauty of genetics and evolution. No one could truly 100% predict the outcome and it was always best to keep one's options open for anything.

But, in this case...

"You are useless now. You can leave and assist Malak and Zosia with the children, I need some of them today." Felix shooed away Bodidi while erasing his clone from existence.

Bodidi could only leave the laboratory while cursing under his breath.

Chapter 1622 Creating The Ultimate Cultivation System! III

When Felix glanced at Noah and saw him giving him a questioning look, clearly asking him if he should take a hike too, Felix shook his head.

"I said your condition makes the situation challenging, not impossible...The same applied to Olivia."

Felix would never shy from a challenge, especially when the success rate was correlated to the rest of the humans.

In other words, if he succeeded in giving his friends the ability to create cores, it would be ten times easier to do the same for children, whose genetics were still pure.

Alas, Felix's confidence in his genetic manipulation ended up falling to the bottom of the barrel after he spent the next twenty hours in a never-ending series of failures...

'The hell...I can understand Noah's being too difficult to integrate, but even Olivia? I have tried everything I have learned.' Felix frowned, 'Is it because they are origin bloodliners? Or is it simply impossible to make such a genetic modification without a core organ from the desired race? What am I missing?'

Felix recalled that Lady Sphinx was planning to integrate a Pandion's heart within him to ensure the genetics' integration for the long run...It was the safest option and also the easiest.

But, Felix didn't want to use such a method since he needed the entire cultivation system to work on humans for the next generations to come.

With another unnatural heart involved, it would take humans millions of years if not more to evolve into possessing two hearts for the sake of the cultivation system.

As for Noah and Olivia? It wasn't even an option anymore to surgically add a different heart or another organ.

After becoming origin bloodliners, their bodies were considered near the perfect genetic state and any additional body part would be rejected brutally.

'It must be the origin realm.'

He considered this part to have a big chance of messing with his plans, but he didn't think it would be this bad.

'I guess there is no other option left but to rely on the power of sins.'

Felix decided to take a shortcut, knowing that it might take him years of research if not more if he stayed stubborn about this.

After all, he would need to run hundreds to thousands of experiments to land at the exact perfect condition for the integration.

While it sounded fun, Felix wasn't in the mood to waste time on this when he had bigger problems awaiting him.

So, without hesitation, Felix called upon the Equal Trade symbol, causing Selphie and the others to raise their eyebrows in surprise at the emerging fox symbol above Felix.

He spoke his wish into the void of his consciousness, 'I crave a new version of the Pandion's genetic sequence responsible over their neutral core. It should be fully compatible with human physiology.'

This was one of Felix's ace cards in case he failed to integrate the pandion's genetics.

Instead of integrating both races, it was best to wish for an alternative genetic sequence that was befitting of humans, but possessed the same powers as the pandion's core!

The only reason he hadn't done this from the start was the price required.

'As expected, the universe understands the immense value of the wish and made sure to rob me clean.' Felix's eyelids twitched as he sensed the rapid disappearance of the void creatures from a distance.

Close to five billion of them were gone and the symbol didn't seem close to stopping. Just as Felix was about to bolster the number of void creatures to be safe, the transaction was completed at last, leaving him with barely a couple billion void creatures.

But it was worth it!

'This is it.'

A new sequence materialized before Felix, a strand of genetic code that shimmered with an otherworldly light.

It was similar to the original Pandion sequence but subtly altered, refined through the greed of sin's power into something new, something uniquely human.

Felix reached out, his hand passing through the holographic representation as he downloaded the data into his lab's systems.

"This should work, hopefully," Felix said as he cloned the new DNA sequence with his envy laws and left the rest of the work to the machines.

Felix watched intently, his eyes fixed on the monitors that displayed the intricate dance of genetic integration.

The clones, still and soulless, were unaware of the profound changes taking place within them.

As the minutes passed, the atmosphere in the lab was one of tense anticipation. Felix monitored every fluctuation, every reaction.

The data began to come in, and slowly, a picture emerged...The sequence was holding; the modifications were taking root without the immediate rejection or complications that had plagued the previous attempt!

The best part? It was working for both Noah and Olivia!

"The integration has succeeded." Felix shared calmly, "The clones should now possess the ability to create their core by absorbing neutral energy."

"Wait? Just like that?" Selphie was startled.

"Didn't you just say a second ago that it's extremely difficult to achieve it? How could our clones haven't received any mutations or such?" Olivia remarked.

Even Noah gave Felix a questioning look.

"Don't bother with the details."

Felix waved his hand carelessly, having no plans to go into detail about his sins' powers...They already dreaded him enough.

"Your clones haven't received mutations since I have created a new genetic sequence that's more geared for humans and almost unrelated to pandions." Felix answered this question though.

"What does that mean?" Olivia was still confused.

"It means humans can have the same powers as pandions without sharing any of their genetic code..." Selphie explained with an astonished look, knowing full well that was something impossible for mortals to achieve.

Even nature couldn't do the same without millions of years of having humans born in the right conditions to evolve in that manner...

It was yet another unexplainable miracle.

"Let's run some tests."

Not wanting to dive into his subject any deeper, Felix brought out the clones from the pods and cleaned them with a snap of a finger.

Then, he ordered them to follow him outside.

Everyone left the laboratory and Felix created a new illusionary area, which was rich with neutral energy and had an accelerated time difference.

Then, he ordered them to start absorbing neutral energy and form their core, following the known steps belonging to the Pandions.

Since no one could copy them, the Pandions' had no fear of sharing their cultivation steps in the open.

"The first step is Core Budding...It can be created only in areas with a high density of neutral energy." Felix shared as he watched a faint glow begin to emanate from the abdomen of each clone.

It was a soft light, yet it held within it the promise of untold power.

The neutral energy, drawn from the surrounding space, was being absorbed into their bodies and funneled toward the point where their new cores were beginning to form.

Noah, Olivia, and Selphie watched with bated breath, their eyes moving between the two clones.

Since time was accelerated, the glow within their clones grew stronger by the second while in reality, the creation of the cores was a delicate process, a balance of absorption, conversion, and containment.

If one was too hasty, he would end up failing and restarting all over again.

As the seconds passed, the glow from their abdomens stabilized, the light dimming to a gentle shimmer.

The core creation was complete!

"First step completed, now to the serious stuff." Felix didn't even smile at this unprecedented achievement, knowing that the true difficulty lay in making the core respond to the elemental affinities!

Something that even Pandions were incapable of doing due to their inability to feel elemental energies!

Chapter 1623 Creating The Ultimate Cultivation System! IV

"Lord Marduk, have you prepared the requested sentence?" Felix inquired.

"Yes." Lord Marduk replied with a solemn tone, "Are you sure about this though? If you went for it, it would be the same as declaring war against the three rulers."

"The war has already been declared before I was born," Felix said coldly.

"I am more worried that you will be giving them a way to control humans." Thor interjected.

"One sentence shouldn't be enough to do that. Plus, by the time the new cultivation system spreads far and affects the majority of humans, one of us will be dead," Felix replied.

Seeing that Felix had already made up his mind to commit to this plan, the tenants remained silent and watched Lord Marduk pass a new sentence written in universal codex language.

He even gave him the pronunciation of it too.

"I don't know if it will succeed or not, but theoretically, it should work." Lord Marduk mentioned, "I have followed the exact principle of the universal codex to create the technique."

"Let's find out."

Felix understood the gravity of this moment...He wasn't just going to create a cultivation system, but he was about to encroach on the three rulers' territory.

Felix walked towards the clones and placed both of his index fingers on their foreheads. Then, he slid them from left to right, leaving behind a small string of black letters.

It was like he inked their foreheads.

Olivia, Selphie, and Noah watched with intrigued looks, having no idea what Felix was doing at the moment.

'Repeat after me.' Felix ordered as he read the sentence with the right pronunciation. The clones repeated word by word mindlessly.

Alas, nothing happened.

'As expected, unless the three rulers gave their blessings, we can't utilize their celestial languages.' Felix wasn't surprised.

He planned to create a technique using the universal codex, which would grant anyone possessing it the technique to convert neutral energy into elemental energy with the high enough affinity!

He knew that was more than a possibility since the citizens in the eternal kingdoms were doing the same thing.

The only difference was that they possessed divine energies and the blessings of the three rulers to use their languages as they saw fit.

But in his case? He had neither, which pushed him to rely on his trusty sins' laws.

'Well, let's hope this works.' With a deep, steadying breath, Felix addressed the symbol, 'I offer void creatures as a sacrifice to activate the universal codex sentence for eternity.'

The symbol responded, its glow intensifying as it acknowledged the significance of the trade.

Felix wasn't sure if the prepared payment was enough for the wish, and to avoid any unfortunate endings, he closed his eyes and used the perfect cloning symbol to remotely multiply the number of void creatures.

In such a scenario, Felix could be said to be somewhat abusing his powers and the universe would have slapped him on the wrist.

But since he wasn't a unigin yet, Felix was able to go wild.

And so he did. He kept creating millions of void creatures each second while using the infinite void energy as fuel.

The tenants watched this scene with wry smiles, feeling like they were watching a glitch in the system live.

After more than ten minutes of nonstop creation of void creatures, until even Felix began to sweat a little, the transaction was finally completed.

The universe had delivered!

A slow smile crept on Felix's lips as he eyed the inscription brighten up and coming to life, swimming across the clones' foreheads akin to a snake.

"To bypass the three rulers' authority, the universe is the overlord of everyone and everything." Thor commentated with an awed tone.

"I am kinda surprised that the price was in the billions range...I assumed it would be more." Candace remarked.

"It's the opposite, it's quite expensive for something that many citizens in the eternal kingdom can also do." Felix replied with a cold tone, "The three celestial languages' origin purpose was to be used like this. It's just that we mortals can't even enjoy such a basic right unless it was gifted to us."

As seen in the heavenly plane, Duke Humphrey was able to utilize a mixture of the three celestial languages, plus the fuel of divine energy from the necklace to create the Blood Array.

This meant it was never something unique to use elemental techniques as they could be easily written and activated by the eternal kingdom's citizens with the right conditions.

Meanwhile, the primogenitors had them written on their bodies already and they had no clue how to even read them...Which honestly was a clear humiliating joke.

"So, now the clones should possess the technique to convert energy into elemental energy?" Candace asked.

"Let's find out."

Felix relayed the orders of the clones telepathically, making them activate the technique by pronouncing the sentence correctly.

The moment they did so, the inscriptions brightened up for a moment before dimming down. Then, the clones began to harness the absorbed neutral energy within their core and began to convert it into either ice or plant energy!

'Success.'

Felix's smile widened a bit as he witnessed this scene occurring internally.

A second later, both clones released massive torrents of green and dark blue mist around them.

"It's really working..."

"Wait...How? What did I miss?"

"..."

When his friends saw this, they were left utterly dumbfounded and stunned.

They were watching Felix work from A to Z and still had absolutely no freaking clue how he managed to make the clones convert energies...Even when they saw him use a universal inscription.

"Felix?"

All three turned to Felix with looks of intense desire, making him understand that they wouldn't leave him alone unless he gave them an explanation.

"The kids will take a bit to arrive, why not."

Felix's mood improved after he succeeded without too many hiccups, which was something he genuinely wasn't used to.

This made him understand just how vital and broken the seven sins' powers and especially, the greed laws in such scenarios.

Without it, he would not be able to create a compatible sequence and he would have spent decades of his time on another research journey.

As for the activation of the inscriptions? Yeah, that was a done case. He had zero chance of achieving it in any other way besides getting the three rulers' blessings or overriding their authority with the paragon's laws.

In other words, Felix didn't take an ounce of credit for any of this.

When he explained the situation to his friends he made it brief and told them it was due to his new godly powers.

A couple of hours later...

In a vast, illusionary tranquil chamber designed for cultivation and growth, one hundred children sat on the ground in a disciplined array of meditation positions.

Here, in this sanctum, the children, each a recipient of Felix's groundbreaking genetic modification, were embarking on a journey to explore the depths of their newly granted abilities.

Felix didn't have to rely on his Equal Trade symbol anymore as his envy laws were enough to take it from there...He used them to clone the genetic sequence and implanted it on each child.

As the children settled into their meditation, a profound silence enveloped the space, broken only by the gentle rhythm of synchronized breathing.

Soon, the air around them began to shimmer with a kaleidoscope of energies.

Some children, naturally adept and quick to adapt, showed rapid progress. Around them, wisps of elemental energy sparkled and danced.

A boy to the left had a faint flicker of flames curling around his fingers, a sign of his affinity with fire, while a girl nearby was surrounded by a gentle breeze, her affinity with air making her seem as if she were at the center of a silent storm!

Others were slower, their bodies and minds carefully adjusting to the new powers within them.

It wasn't that easy since they had been preparing from birth to become a bloodliner and now, they were given a completely different cultivation system.

"Hmm, high chaos affinity and great talent, interesting little boy."

Felix praised with a faint smile as he viewed a green-haired boy at the center of the pack, getting surrounded by disorienting colorful elemental energy that screamed off chaos.

He wasn't the only remarkable child around as some displayed the rare ability to transform neutral energy into not just one, but two types of elemental energies!

These children were the epitomes of talent and potential, their bodies naturally tuning into the dual affinities that set them apart.

One such child had sparks of electricity dancing around one hand while droplets of water orbited the other.

"You brought some talented kids, no wonder it took you a while." Olivia addressed Malak and Zosia, who were watching this scene with dazed expressions.

They had been like this ever since they brought the kids and got modified by Felix.

"Is this really happening...Will our race finally have a genuine cultivation system..." Zosia murmured, her eyes seemed a bit reddened like she couldn't overcome her emotions.

For a serious and strict woman like her, this spoke volumes of just how impacting this historical moment was.

"I will run a couple more tests, but the results seem promising." Felix ordered, "I will be here for the next year, bring me as many kids as you can. The more, the merrier, and don't just choose children of upper echelons. Bring me only those with high affinities regardless of their background."

Zosia swiftly shut down her emotions and replied with a solemn tone, "I will have it handled."

She took this situation with utmost seriousness, knowing that those kids were the future of humanity.

Felix could do nothing to the current humans since they had already gone too deep into the bloodline integration system.

It was much easier to start a new with the next generation.

He knew that he could put the kids in an illusionary world and accelerate the time in it, to expedite the generational evolution, but he dropped the idea.

In his eyes, it was best to let nature take its course.

Whatever happened in the future wouldn't be up to him as he had kept his word and utilized his powers to help his race improve...

'Felix, I have always meant to ask.' Selphie reached out to Felix with a curious expression, 'Won't it help them more if you activated a couple more techniques in them?'

The fact that Felix only had to invest ten billion void creatures or less to activate a technique made her feel like he could invest more into the cultivation system.

It would take some time and effort, but it would make humans much more capable in the future.

Felix smiled wryly at her innocence, knowing that she was seeing things from the perspective of elves.

'There is a reason why the universe fabricated us without a proper cultivation system.' Felix shared, 'Humans possess the strongest desires in the universe and the majority allows those desires to gain control over them. With our insane reproduction speed and potent desires, what do you think would happen if humans possessed the strength to conquer the universe?'

Selphie felt a chill course down her spine...

'They will declare war on the alliance and seek to conquer all territories in the universe.'

She knew, no, she was certain that humans would attempt to do this...Maybe not now, or in the next couple of thousands of years, but it was bound to happen.

The instant humans realize that they possess strength far greater than their peers, they wouldn't waste their time with alliances or such and would seek to take everything for themselves!

It didn't just have to be all humans, just a couple in the leadership rule, and the rest would be forced to follow along regardless of their own beliefs.

That's simply the humans' nature.

'So, for their protection and the universe's protection, it was best to give them just enough to live alongside other races with their heads held high.' Felix shook his head, 'Otherwise, it will be the same as giving them nuclear heads and expecting them to be mature enough not to wave it around.'

Felix uttered that this was for their protection for a reason.

He knew that the alliance wasn't filled with nobodies and if humans dared to launch a war, it wouldn't end in their favor so easily.

After all, there were the watchers, dragons, the metal race, and more of such powerful races capable of holding their grounds.

So, he refused to doom his race by giving them more power than their pride and ego could handle.

This was the sentimental reason, but most importantly, Felix refused to add more techniques because he knew that the three monarchs would gain more control over his race with each additional line of celestial language written on them.

One phrase wasn't enough unless the connection between the eternal kingdom and the universe was opened again.

In other words, it was some form of security for himself too.

Chapter 1624 The Parting Gifts. I

For the next months, as word of the newly developed cultivation system spread like wildfire throughout the territories of the Federation, a tide of excitement and anticipation washed over the populace.

Tales of the one hundred children who had been the first to receive the groundbreaking genetic modification, and their remarkable abilities to absorb and transform neutral energy into elemental power, fueled the imaginations and ambitions of many.

The Federation issued a formal request for more participants, seeking people between the ages of eleven and twenty-one, those who had not yet committed to the traditional bloodline integration system, and those who possessed a natural affinity rating above 75%.

This criteria aimed to ensure the pure growth of the cultivation system, focusing on those most likely to benefit from and contribute to this revolutionary advancement.

For many, this was more than just an opportunity for their children; it was a chance for their entire lineage to rise to prominence, to be part of a pioneering movement that would shape the future.

Thus, parents and guardians looked at their children with new eyes, seeing not just their offspring but the potential heroes and leaders of the coming age.

Investments were made, savings spent, and resources pooled as families prepared to send their eligible children to Earth.

The planet, once a symbol of desolation and destruction, was now the beacon of humanity's next great leap forward.

As the Federation managed the massive influx of applicants, the importance of a controlled and ethical approach to this new power became clear.

Guidelines were established, and mentors were appointed, each tasked with ensuring that the cultivation system was a boon to humanity, not a path to its downfall.

Felix knew that he could have chosen even bloodliners to obtain the new cultivation system since it was established to be working on both Noah and Olivia, but he rejected the notion.

He understood that if he shared that the cultivation system could work on even bloodliners, the planet would be overrun by hundreds of billions of bloodliners from everywhere at once.

So, it was best to leave them assuming that it could work only on unawakened children until he left.

Time went by and before long, the year was about to finish as only a week was left.

"How is it going?" He asked the moment he emerged from a void rift.

Zosia was used to his sudden appearances by now and wasn't too surprised...She gave him a wry smile and said, "They keep coming nonstop by the thousands...We sure give birth like insects."

Felix chuckled and said, "That's our primary strength."

"At this point, I don't see it that way." Zosia sighed, "You are about to leave and people keep sending their kids even after we halted accepting the recruitment. Close to five million children are waiting in the planet's orbit. What do I do about them?"

"You can reverse engineer the genetic sequence and find out how to replicate it artificially." Felix smiled, "You already know the correct pronunciation of the technique and how it's written."

"Are you saying we are allowed to continue the implementation after you leave?" Zosia's eyes widened in surprise.

Since Felix never brought up this subject and she had no idea that he was planning to leave forever, she never bothered to think of going over his head and running the process without his involvement.

"Yes, I will be gone for a long while and this mission will fall on your shoulders." Felix narrowed his eyes seriously, "Just be careful and take it slow, if bloodliners learned that the cultivation system would work for them too, chaos would befall the federation."

"I understand, I will not lose control," Zosia promised with an assertive tone.

Felix went forward and placed his hand over her shoulder then said with a faint smile, "I trust you with the fate of humanity."

Before Zosia could react, Felix broke into harmless particles and disappeared from her office.

Having no time to think too much about his words, Zosia returned straightaway to work, prioritizing reverse engineering the genetic sequence.

...

He used the wrath sins laws to split his body into seven perfect clones, each with the power of sin.

This way, he was able to help as many children as possible across the globe.

The total number was believed to have reached more than one hundred million children in just one year!

So, Felix had really put in the work.

"Are you planning on leaving the next week?" Selphie asked with a soft tone as she sat in a circle with Felix and the others above a cliff that peeked over the ocean.

"I am leaving tomorrow actually," Felix replied.

"So soon?!"

Olivia and the others didn't like the sound of that at all.

"I have to." Felix said with a serene tone as he gazed at the still water of the ocean, "I have kept someone dear to me waiting for a long time."

He didn't need to bring up her name for everyone to realize that he was addressing Asna...Felix had never told them about her in detail or the woes she was facing.

But, everyone was smart enough to figure out that she was in trouble and Felix was seeking to help her out.

The fact that even Felix with his demonstrated godly powers seemed serious about it made them understand that the situation wasn't that simple.

As long as Felix never brought out the subject, none of them dared to pry into his private life and ask him about it.

"Anyhow, I brought you some parting gifts." Felix said, wanting to uplift the mood.

"Gifts! Is it something tasty?" Bodidi was the first to brighten up.

"It's not food, but something you will like a lot." Felix chuckled as he forwarded a piece of paper to him.

"What's this?"

"It's 49% shares of my business empire. I don't know what Mr. Igris is up to, but from last I checked, he has already pushed the empire past the trillion coins mark." Felix chuckled, "He has the remaining 51% shares. You won't need to work a day in your life ever again and can just enjoy free food."

"This...This...This...is my dream."

Tears welled up in Bodidi's eyes as he envisioned himself lying on a bed with spaceworm beauties and a never-ending supply of food.

"I know it is." Felix chuckled, "Just don't overfeed yourself and die."

"I promise you, I won't die," Bodidi replied with an assured tone.

"But, you will get fat."

"That's a given." Bodidi nodded with a deep creepy grin.

Everyone's eyelids twitched.

Felix shook his head and ignored this helpless foodie. He turned to Olivia and gave her a gentle smile.

"Little Oli, I know that your dream was to live in peace with your loved ones, nothing more, nothing else. Unfortunately, that dream proved to be the hardest to achieve even for me." Felix pulled a spatial ring from his finger and pushed it slowly into her index finger. Then, he said, "At the moment, all I can bestow upon you is this garden."

The moment Olivia glanced at the spatial ring's interior, her breath was stolen away from sheer shock and amazement.

It was a pocket dimension nestled within the confines of an expansive spatial ring, stretching for hundreds of kilometers...There, lay a breathtaking garden, a veritable den of the cosmos.

It became a living tapestry of vibrant colors and ethereal fragrances, where the rarest known and unknown natural treasures flourished in harmonious abundance.

Towering trees with luminous leaves whispered ancient secrets, their branches heavy with fruits that shimmered like stars.

Exotic flowers bloomed in a kaleidoscope of colors, their petals as delicate as the fabric of reality, releasing scents that could revive the weary and inspire the despondent.

Meandering pathways, lined with iridescent moss and gemstone pebbles, invited onlookers into deeper exploration, leading them past crystalline streams and tranquil ponds where mythical creatures played.

Here, every plant, every stone, every droplet of dew was a treasure, a marvel of the universe, collected from the farthest reaches of space and time!

"I...I can't accept this...This is too much!"

Olivia swiftly tried to pull away the ring from her finger, but Felix held her hand gently and said, "Your worth to me can't be measured even with a hundred of such gardens. So, please, accept it and tend to it...It will make me happier."

"I..."

Olivia was left at a loss for words as she stared at Felix's eyes...They were as sincere as they could get, which made her tear up a bit, having a strong feeling that this might be the last time she would ever see him.

So, she fought against her shyness and hugged him as tightly as possible while sniffing in silence, not saying a single word.

Felix showed a little smile as he patted her head like the old times, remembering his youthful days with her and how he always pranked and bullied her, yet, she never left him be alone...

She became one of his closest family members and Felix always considered her as his little sister.

So, he became genuine when he remarked that the garden was worth tens of empires combined, but was nowhere close to her worth to him.

After a short while, Olivia let go of Felix and delivered him a head nod while holding onto the ring, seemingly giving him her word that she would take care of it as her life depended on her.

Felix laughed and left her be...He turned to Noah and his chuckle faded away after seeing his serious eager expression.

It became enough to tell him that Noah hadn't changed his mind in the past year from his journey to the spirit realm.

'He is as stubborn as you.'

Fenrir shook his head, clearly, not too pleased with Noah's decision...But, as his master, he respected his choice and would not get in his way.

"Guys, please give me and Noah some privacy." Felix requested.

Chapter 1625 The Parting Gifts. II

Noah eyed Felix with an expression of hopeful anticipation.

"Give me that look after you hear about your journey."

Felix smiled wryly as he beamed a small, intricately crafted device in his hand. It was an elegant creation of silver and crystal, with delicate runes etched into its surface that glowed with a soft, otherworldly light.

"This is a spiritual compass and it's for you. It's not just a tool but a guide, attuned to the spirits of my grandfather and your little sister." He placed the compass gently in Noah's outstretched hands and said, "Once activated, it will lead you to them, no matter where they are. When you press the button in the center, it will switch the direction to the heavenly plane. Don't worry, it will turn into a spiritual object the instant it enters the spirit realm."

"There is such a magical thing?"

Noah murmured in astonishment as his fingers closed around the compass, feeling the cool metal and the pulse of spiritual energy that resonated from within.

"Of course, there isn't. I had invested quite a lot to bring this item into existence," Felix replied.

He wasn't underplaying it one bit...He had invested at least an entire week of void creatures' creation.

Since he could create millions each second, god knows how much he had sacrificed for this device.

Fortunately, he had another clone on duty, which was responsible for creating void creatures nonstop.

Noah didn't know what he meant by that, but still, he looked up at Felix, a mix of gratitude and determination in his gaze. "Thank you, Felix. This... this means everything to me."

Felix nodded, understanding the depth of Noah's desire.

"I am going to put your spirit as close as possible to your little sister, so the instant you enter the spirit realm, you won't struggle much to find her. But, the same won't be said about my grandfather. I can't put you in and out more than once. So, if you are struggling to keep up the search due to your mental health, just ditch my grandfather and press the button." Felix said with a solemn tone.

While Lord Hades wasn't known for breaking the rules, he allowed Felix to do this since he wouldn't be involved personally in the mission.

Felix would be the one putting Noah's spirit in the realm, making sure that his memories were maintained, and even when he reached the heavenly plane and sought to return, Felix would be responsible for that too.

If Felix ever ended up dead or forgot about him, Noah would stay in the heavenly plane for eternity.

Felix had a notion that Noah might remain there to watch over his sister since Lord Hades hadn't permitted him to revive his sister.

With a deep breath, Noah gave Felix a solemn look and requested, "Don't put me near my sister, put me near your grandfather."

"Huh?" Felix was surprised.

"Please, this is the least I can do as a payback for everything you have given me."
Noah said, his voice was filled with conviction.

"Noah, there is no need to feel indebted to me." Felix patted him on the shoulder with a genuine smile, "I have always considered you as a family and this is nothing between us. Just focus on your little sist..."

"No." Noah said with a suppressed tone, interrupting Felix, "I am confident that nothing will stop me from finding my sister even if it's going to take me millions of years...But, I can't say the same about your grandfather. I would hate myself to the bone if I failed to finish the only task you have entrusted to me. So, please, don't argue with me and just make it happen. I know what I am doing."

Whether it was Felix or the tenants, all of them were taken aback by Noah's reaction. They knew that he was a good lad and loyal to those close to him, but still...To go this far while knowing that he was just making the mission a million times harder than it already was.

Not many people had this kind of grit and honor.

At this point, Felix didn't know what to do.

The only reason he brought his grandfather into this matter was to make it easier for Noah to accept his gift, knowing that he was always feeling indebted to him and it ate him alive.

In reality, he just wanted him to meet his sister and spend some time with her in the heavenly plane until he finished his matters in the eternal kingdom.

As for his grandfather? Felix already had plans to revive him with the others at the very end if all things worked out in his favor.

'Do I tell him about this? Seeing the look in his eyes, I doubt it will change anything.'
Felix smiled bitterly.

In the end, he decided to respect Noah's wishes, understanding that he was committed to this no matter what he said.

"Are you ready to do this today? Have you dealt with your private matters?" Felix said with a serious tone.

"Yes, I have told the watchers' king that I am planning to step down from the supreme leader's position, so he could take over me." Noah informed, "He has agreed to this after hearing that it is your wish."

"I see, that works out too." Felix nodded in approval.

Felix would have preferred humans or a void nation to take the position, but humans weren't at that level of strength yet, and he planned to take his void nation with him.

So, it was best to depart it to the watchers, who were feeling heavily indebted to him after knowing that he was the one responsible for their freedom.

"Alright, you can depart and say your goodbyes to your people, meet me here after two hours."

"No need, I have no one but you guys and my master." Noah replied calmly, "I will leave a message to the rest."

"You sure are in a rush." Felix was speechless.

Seeing that Noah was as expressionless as ever, he could only exhale deeply and give him a head nod.

"Alright, let's begin."

Felix snapped his finger and Noah fell asleep instantly. As he was falling to the ground, Felix beamed a medical pod underneath him and removed most of his clothes and even his AP bracelet.

Noah landed in the sticky liquid with the compass held in his chest. Felix got closer to him and placed a finger on his forehead...Then, he used his illusion powers to extract a copy of his memories and put them in a spiritual sphere.

It could be seen with only people possessing spiritual vision or such variations.

'This will be the first time I am testing this symbol, let's see how useful it is.' He summoned a purplish symbol with a bear on it above Noah and uttered, "Out of Body Slumber."

The symbol shimmered for a moment before it cast a dim misty light on Noah...In a few moments, Noah's ethereal spirit came out of his body in a white color.

Unlike other spirits, which had no facial features, Noah's spirit still resembled him greatly! He looked like he was still in a deep sleep, dreaming about god knows what.

"Seven sins laws never fails to amaze me..." Thor remarked with an amazed look.

"They are the most all-rounded laws to possess." Lady Sphinx mentioned, "Sloth and Lust's laws are heavily focused on spiritual and mental aspects. Wrath and Pride laws are focused on battles. Glottuny on energy management. Envy and Greed laws on any other remaining aspect of life."

All of this and Felix had merely scratched the surface of the seven sins laws!

Felix knew that the moment he woke up Noah, his spirit would return to his body...This symbol was meant to be used on himself since he was the only one able to go about the activation condition.

Still, Felix wasn't too bothered as he had still planned for this much.

He reached out to Noah's spirit and pushed the memories' sphere within his mind while utilizing the greed laws to mimic the effect of Elder Kraken's ultimate ability.

After the price was paid, Noah's memories merged with his spirit, which ensured that he wouldn't be a mindless consciousness.

Still, Felix didn't allow him to wake up.

'Next, locating my grandfather's spirit.' Felix took a deep breath and used the greed laws again to wish for his location in the spirit realm.

The moment he was given the location, he established a void portal leading straight to it regardless of the distance between them.

He protected Noah's body and spirit and next emerged in a deserted area of space without a single planet or star nearby.

Next, Felix scanned about him using his spiritual vision...The moment he turned around, his expression froze and his heartbeats accelerated rapidly.

"Grandpa..." He murmured silently as he eyed a green-colored faceless spirit floating in the nothingness of the spirit realm...

Chapter 1626 The Parting Gifts. III (The End)

Amidst the ethereal expanse of the spirit realm, where wisps of consciousness drifted like stars in a vast, silent sea of the spirit realm, Felix found himself face to face with the spirit of his grandfather.

He had no facial features and nothing resembling his grandfather. Yet, the sight struck a deep chord within him, causing a tumult of emotions surging forth.

He knew, no, he was certain that was his one and only grandfather...

As Felix gazed upon him, a profound sense of sadness enveloped his heart.

Memories of laughter, wisdom, and warmth flooded back, a stark contrast to the forlorn figure before him.

Felix's eyes reddened a bit as he reached out, a silent apology forming on his lips for not being there, for all the moments lost and the time they could not reclaim...

The sight of his once strong and guiding grandfather, now a wandering echo in the spirit realm, filled him with a deep, aching longing and distress that clawed at his very soul.

He wanted nothing more but to make a wish and save him from drowning in this endless sea, but his ice-cold calculative mind made him drop such thought immediately.

He understood that the moment he went for it, he would fall off with Lord Hades and this would cause all of his plans to fall apart...

'Just wait a little bit more...Grandpa...I promise you...I will return even if it's the last thing I do.' Felix muttered under his breath, 'I promise...'

With a single blink, Felix got rid of such emotions and carried on with his mission...He used the help of the universe to open a portal to the spirit realm.

When it was opened, he pushed Noah's spirit within it and then closed it shut immediately.

The instant Noah's spirit connection was severed from his body, Felix snapped his finger and deactivated his sloth symbol...Then, he observed Noah silently.

He understood that his symbol wouldn't retract Noah's spirit back to his body now that he was in the spirit realm.

As expected, a few moments later, Noah's eyes opened up to the desolation and infinite darkness of the spirit realm...The only light around him was of Grandfather's Robert and his spirit, shimmering akin to a candle in a pitch-black cave.

Felix and the tenants watched as Noah's usual composed and cold expression got washed in a visceral wave of fear and distress.

The profound isolation and the eerie silence of this realm clawed at his mind, evoking a sense of existential dread that he had never known.

Panic began to set in as he realized his detachment from the physical world, the absence of familiar sights, sounds, and the warmth of human connection.

His heart raced, and his spirit trembled in the face of this vast, unknown void.

The enormity of his situation dawned on him at last...

'I think you should pull him out.' Elder Kraken sighed, 'He is still a child, moved by his emotions, and this mission might consume him alive.'

Many other tenants agreed with his take, understanding that such a mission wasn't easy for even some primogenitors...It took a different kind of Will.

'No, he will pull through.' Fenrir said with a tone filled with undeniable conviction.

Just as the tenants were about to argue with him, Noah's expression turned cold again while eyeing the spirit realm with a tint of disdain.

Like he was challenging it to break him and stop him from reuniting with his little sister.

Without an ounce of hesitation, he caught Felix's grandfather with one hand and used the other to hold the compass in front of him.

Then, he burst through the realm with a godly speed in a single line, disappearing out of Felix's vision in the blink of an eye!

Felix wasn't surprised by his speed as he had already known that nothing could stop spirits from reaching the speed of light and moving even through time in the spirit realm!

After all, there was nothing physical about them to hold their speed and they were traveling in a spiritual dimension.

That's how the Charons traveled across the spirit realm in the first place.

The only reason other spirits couldn't do the same was because they had no consciousness in the first place to make them want to do it...Meanwhile, those inside the heavenly plane were under the limitation of the plane's laws.

Still, this didn't mean that Noah's journey would be finished in a few seconds. It simply meant that he had a chance to succeed in achieving it.

"That's Noah for you." Felix smiled as he canceled his spiritual vision.

He had a feeling that Noah would be the only one capable of achieving this mission before losing his sanity.

After all, it was rare to find such a level of obsession with the protection of one's family.

'Speaking of obsession...I guess it's time.' Felix smiled wryly at what awaited him next.

Sometime later...

On the edge of a towering cliff, with the vast expanse of the world stretching out before them, Felix and Selphie sat side by side, their legs dangling into the abyss below.

The sky was painted with the brilliant hues of dusk, casting a soft, sad light over the scene.

A gentle breeze whispered around them, carrying with it the faint scent of the wildflowers that bloomed along the cliffside.

Selphie had a sorrowful smile on her face...She was smart enough to understand what was going on in Felix's mind.

So, she tried to make it easier for him.

"Felix, you don't have to worry about me. I made up my choice a long time ago and I never regretted it for even a moment." She said with a soft tone.

"..." Felix turned to Selphie, his eyes holding a depth of emotion that was rarely seen. "How can I not worry? You are one of my closest and dearest friends...It pains me to know that you won't live your life to the fullest because of me..."

"Selphie," He continued, his voice low and sincere, "I've always known, felt, and deeply appreciated the genuine love you've held for me. Your kindness, your support, it's been a light in my darkest times."

Selphie turned to face him, her eyes searching his, a silent question lingering in their depths.

Felix carried on, the words flowing from a place of honesty and pain. "I'm truly sorry, Selphie. I'm sorry that I can't give you what you truly deserve...The love and companionship of someone who loves you as deeply and genuinely as you love them."

"You don't have to...You don't have to be sorry, I never wanted you to be sorry or love me back." Selphie held her dress tightly, tears threatening to flood down her cheeks, "I just wanted to be by your side...Nothing more, nothing else."

"But, that's unfair to you...You deserve someone who can share their life with you, someone who can give you their whole heart. And while I have seven hearts, they all belong to Asna. They always have. I can't, and I won't fool you with false promises or half-hearted affection. It wouldn't be fair to you."

Selphie listened, her expression a mix of sadness and understanding.

She had always known, somewhere deep down, that Felix's heart was taken forever, but hearing it, so plainly and earnestly, brought a sharp clarity to her feelings...

"Selphie, you are extraordinary, and you will find someone who can love you the way you deserve to be loved. So, please, I beg you, let me free you..."

Felix turned back to her and placed a finger near her forehead...The tip was shimmering with pink light, a mark of using the laws of lust.

Selphie neither moved away nor yelled at him...She merely gave him a sweet smile, a silent tear, falling down her cheek, and murmured, "I don't know what that means, but I never uttered I was a prisoner. So, do as you see fit, I can't stop you but just know this...I will always love you, now, and forever."

Felix's finger trembled near her forehead, having strong difficulty going on with his decision and Selphie's words weren't making it any easier.

"As long as your race's quirk is in place, you will never have the option to let go since you don't understand such a concept in the first place."

"Then, get rid of it." Selphie uttered with a gentle tone, "I will prove to you, that my love has not been affected and will never be..."

Felix stared profoundly into her loving watery eyes, seeing a different kind of conviction than that of Noah's...His trembling finger stopped and the color of his finger's tip got brighter.

Then, he touched her forehead, making her close her eyes in acceptance of whichever decision Felix had made.

"You are free to love whoever now, and if you still decide to continue loving me, it's not up to me to change your mind. I have uttered and done enough." Felix caressed her cheek for a moment before pulling his hand away, "Goodbye, Selphie...May fate reunite us again."

When Selphie opened her eyes, she found that Felix was nowhere to be seen, leaving behind floating particles carried away by the ocean's breeze.

Selphie neither cried nor uttered her goodbyes as she gazed at the disappearing particles.

Her heart was broken, but not shattered as Felix had decided to respect her wishes and remove only the quirk aspect of her race, not manipulate her emotions of him.

This implied that she finally had the decision to either genuinely continue to love him even after all of this or just give up and accept the reality before her.

In either case, she would be responsible 100% for her decision and this was all Felix ever longed from her.

Selphie stood up and dusted her dress, then walked away, her back facing the serene ocean, having the opposite representation of her current emotional state...

As she was walking away, she gazed into the sky and uttered one last time with a tint of hopefulness in her eyes, "See you later, my love..."

Chapter 1627 Breakthrough To The Origin Realm/The Ascention. I

"Thank you for being gentle with her..."

Lady Yggdrasil said with an appreciative tone as she gazed at Felix, who was sitting across from her at the central table within his consciousness space.

Felix had already reached out to Lady Yggdrasil and Cyclope, letting them know that they were more than welcome to be part of his journey to the eternal kingdom.

Both of them agreed at once as this wasn't an opportunity to be missed.

While Lady Yggdrasil was coming along for sightseeing and research purposes, Cyclope's goal was to find a way to improve his forging craft it was possible.

When Felix showed him what happened to his masterpiece The Cosmosbreaker, he instantly felt like his pride as the greatest forger in the universe shattered.

He realized that he was not worthy of such a title if his greatest achievement was broken as easily as any other trash.

"I never had any intentions to hurt her." Felix sighed, "If only I had this possibility way before her emotions' developed to this stage, the situation might have been much easier to remedy."

"There is no point in dwelling over this anymore." Thor said calmly, "You have done the right thing and it's time to focus on the bigger picture."

Felix knew that he was right...He couldn't have his concentration wasted on anything else besides the eternal kingdom from this moment on.

Now that he had dealt with his friends and even helped his race improve their lives, it was time to focus on himself.

The first thing he did was return to the heart of the void realm, wanting to check on Nimo.

He noticed that he still needed more time than anticipated to hatch...So, he added a few more days, which translated to tens of thousands of years in his illusion domain.

Next, he took off to the void nation's territory and situated himself in his throne chamber.

He waved his hand once and six perfect clones manifested in front of him after a red symbol appeared above his head.

Those weren't just normal clones, they possessed a powerful consciousness similar to Felix as they were born out of a portion of his soul...So, each one was just as powerful and capable as Felix.

The only limitation they possessed was the fact they couldn't utilize any laws besides the one under them...However, they could be affected by all symbols regardless of their laws.

Because of this, Felix had to recall them since he couldn't utilize all laws simultaneously with them being separated.

After they merged with him again, Felix felt his soul being enriched and reaching its peak strength again.

"Should I continue increasing my strength or is it just not worth it anymore?" Felix said as he tapped his finger on the armrest.

In the past year, he wasn't just helping his friends and his race...He also abused the laws for his benefit.

The first thing he did was use his perfect cloning symbol on the rare minerals in his possession to create an unfathomable number of resources for his dragon cultivation system.

Then, he sent his gluttony form clone to the elemental galaxy and devoured those elemental minerals by the tens of thousands!

Because he possessed the gluttony sin laws, the devouring process and digestion system were at their peak forms without needing any kind of external help!

So, he never slept even a moment as the clone kept devouring thousands worth of minerals each second tirelessly.

Due to the time difference, one year here was a century there.

Yet, it was more than enough for Felix to reach the fiftieth dragon mark, which translated to a pure strength increase of one million BF in total!!

This was more marks reached than the ancestral dragon himself!

Yet, the ancestral dragon had reached the primogenitors' level in terms of strength, which was understandable, when considering that dragons were born with an innate foundational strength without even using their cultivation system.

For the ancestral dragon, he probably was able to reach 500k+ BF through pure maturity without a single mark.

"After hitting the fortieth mark, the progress has slowed down immensely as I require a hundred billion of rare minerals to push past one mark." Felix spoke to himself, "Now that I am at the fiftieth, I need more than a hundred trillion worth of elemental minerals to complete one mark...It's no longer sustainable when crossing each mark doubles down the resources needed."

Even though Felix had all the time in the world, he wasn't interested in spending eons of effort and pain for the sake of a single 20k BF boost.

It wasn't worth it anymore, especially when he was about to surpass twenty million BF at once, the instant he ascended to a unigin.

"Looks like I have reached the universe's fullest potential and it can no longer sustain my growth." Felix chuckled, never expecting in his life to say something as outrageous as this.

But, he was right...There was close to nothing the universe could give him at the moment to improve himself.

In other words.

"It's time to ascend."

The moment he said this, Candace and the rest of the councilmen entered the throne chamber and positioned themselves at the corners...They had solemn expressions mixed in with a bit of anticipation.

Felix had requested their attendance in case of some kind of an emergency...Whether they could help him or not was debatable, but it was better to have them near than not.

Felix stood up from his throne and walked to the center of the chamber while undressing himself in a slow and dignified manner.

Immediately after reaching the center, he was left in his boxers, which were made out of void energy.

The room, vast and opulently adorned, seemed to hold its breath, the very air charged with the anticipation of the momentous and historical event about to unfold.

"All I have to do is launch the breakthrough process to the origin realm and the universe will take it from there," Felix murmured as he had his eyes closed shut, doing one last round of mental preparation.

In reality, he was prepared thousands of years ago and if he wanted, he could have been an origin bloodliner any second.

So, the moment his hearts were settled and his mind was a peace, his will, an unyielding force, ignited the process!

Internally, a fierce battle commenced, a war between the overwhelming 99% of Lord Loki's bloodline and the defiant 1% of his human lineage!

Felix's human side, though vastly outnumbered, was fueled by a relentless desire to prevail, to consume and assimilate the powerful bloodline that had been a part of him for so long!

The stakes were clear and absolute: success meant a breakthrough into the Origin realm, and failure meant death.

Yet, even so without Lord Loki's assistance, Felix was demolishing his bloodline, making his 1% human bloodline seem like the predator!

"Jeez...He has been waiting for this instant for too long to unleash this kind of overwhelming destruction on my poor bloodline." Lord Loki's eyelids twitched.

"Haha, what did you expect? All humans dream is to become an origin bloodliner and Felix was no different."

Thor chuckled as he watched Felix's human bloodline increase from 1% to 30% almost instantly.

There was no such entity as walls like the last time as Felix had reached his peak state in every realms, spiritual, physical, mental, and whatnot.

Nothing was stopping this breakthrough, not even so the universe!

As the struggle intensified, Felix's body began to undergo some profound mutations.

His skin rippled, his veins glowed with an inner light, and the air around him vibrated with the force of the conflicting bloodlines.

The chamber itself seemed to respond, the walls pulsing with energy as if witnessing the birth of a new era!

It was like the universe was seeking to find the best evolution path for Felix, a being, who reached the peak in its territory without even so reaching his peak potential first.

When it dug deeper, the universe recognized the presence of the Paragon of Sins' core at last, a power that resonated with the very fabric of creation.

This discovery seemed to have changed everything.

In a cosmic intervention, the universe wove the core into the process naturally, realizing that the only rightful path before him was to become a unigin and more specifically, the new Paragon!

As the three rulers expected, the fact that there was a void in Lilith's place was more than enough for the universe to consider Felix as the best candidate for the new position.

Hence,Felix's normal origin breakthrough was transformed into an ascension, a never-before-seen before awe-inspiring phenomenon!!

WHOOOOOSH!!!!

The throne chamber was packed with a blinding light and raging winds as The Paragon of Sins' core was forced into assimilation with Felix by the universe itself.

Nothing could go against the universe's authority, not even so Lilith could stop this process from finishing anymore!

Because it was the universe's own will, the union was surprisingly painless...The agony of such processes was usually because of going against nature or the universe's will, like the bloodline integration system.

If it was a natural process, humans wouldn't feel a single entity since they wouldn't know even so when it happened.

As the core integrated with Felix, his body became the canvas for a series of profound transformations.

The once prominent horn that had marked his heritage fell away, signifying the shedding of his old self.

His dark red hair, a symbol of his vitality and demonization, turned a luminous white and began to proliferate, cascading down his back in a silken river that stretched tens of meters behind him...

It was as if his very essence was being rewritten, each strand of hair a testament to his newfound purity and strength.

"Surprising path of evolution...I thought he would get more demonic and bestial." J? rmungandr commentated.

The rest of the tenants shared the same sentiment, knowing that the paragon of sins' core would dominate the mutations' path since the rest of the bloodlines couldn't resist its authority.

Yet, it turned out they have spoken a bit too soon...

Chapter 1628 Breakthrough To The Origin Realm/The Ascension. II

The paragon's core seemed to work in harmony with the emerging mutations, bending and shaping them to align with the powers of the Paragon of Sins.

As the assimilation reached its zenith, a breathtaking spectacle began to unfold.

From Felix's back, seven magnificent and massive tails emerged, each one a marvel of creation!

"Argh!!"

This time, Felix felt the pain hit the very essence of his soul, making him grunt out loud.

These were not ordinary tails but majestic draconian appendages, each head adorned with a Sin symbol on its forehead, an emblem of the power it represented!

The faces of the tails bore a resemblance to the animals associated with each sin, from the serpentine visage of envy to the lion-like majesty of pride!

Whoosh!! Whoosh!! Whoosh!!...

They moved with a life of their own as they slid through the air freely until they reached the ceiling.

Without an ounce of resistance, the seven dragoniod heads smashed through the ceiling and continued growing until everyone in the void nation was able to see them.

The moment everyone's attention was affixed to them, the seven dragons released a thunderous primal roar...It sounded so deep and shook the very foundations of the void nation!

Citizens far and wide clutched their ears in agony, the roar piercing their minds and souls, compelling them to kneel in involuntary reverence and awe!

The sky itself seemed to tremble at the presence of these magnificent creatures, each head arching back and releasing a roar that was both a challenge to the cosmos and a defiant claim of their newfound place in the universe!

"How heavenly...Each of those tails feels like they possess the strength to rule the universe..."

"Seven Headed Dragoniod Hydra...This is...This is beyond a mutation..."

"It's expected." Lady Sphinx remarked with a solemn tone, "The origin realm signified the birth of a new race with the origin being a human. In Felix's case, it seems like his dragon's DNA, and seven hearts mutation were powerful enough to get involved heavily in shaping his evolution."

Both the runic heart and devourer's heart hadn't made an appearance since they weren't as genetically dominating as the dragon's heart and Elder Kraken's mutation.

As for Lord Loki and the rest of the primogenitors' bloodlines? Some made it and some didn't.

Jurmigander's and Thor's serpentine bodies were taken and used to make the dragons' long bodies, making them resemble eastern dragons.

The scales must be related to Lord Loki's and Carbuncle due to their eathreal appearance and reflective crystallized nature.

Lord Shiva's infamous crack mutation didn't make it as neither Felix nor the dragons possessed them...Nothing was taken off Lady Sphinx or Lord Khoas as well, at least appearance-wise.

As for Felix? His body hadn't gone through any other drastic changes besides the tattoo on his chest.

They were replaced by a new set of grand, intricate designs that adorned his arms and chest.

These new tattoos were symbolic representations of the seven sins, each exquisitely detailed and imbued with a sense of depth and movement that made them seem almost alive!

On his right arm, Wrath was depicted as a fierce dragon, its scales crackling with lightning. Envy curled like a fluid serpent on his left arm, its skin a tapestry of shifting water patterns.

Sloth was represented on his upper right chest by a thick bear, its form exuding an overbearing aura.

Pride dominated the center of his chest, a majestic, roaring lion surrounded by a tumultuous storm, symbolizing its powerful and destructive nature.

Lust, depicted on his lower left chest, was an enchanting goat, its form wrapped in ethereal, illusory veils.

Greed was shown on his right forearm as a glittering, covetous fox...Last but not least, Gluttony, on his left forearm, appeared as a ravenous boar, its maw wide in insatiable hunger.

Each tattoo was a masterpiece, a fusion of celestial art and power that marked Felix's body as a canvas of his newfound dominion over these primordial forces!

Besides those tattoos, Felix's humane body remained free of any kind of mutation...No skin color change, no extra limbs, no scales, no extra eyes, nothing. Just a pure human body resembling any unawakened person.

Just as the ascension was coming to an end as no other mutations manifested and the paragon's core was 99% assimilated into Felix, an extraordinary and somewhat dreadful phenomenon unfolded.

Cling! Cling! Cling!...

From the vast, star-studded expanse of the heavens, celestial golden chains, shimmering with an otherworldly light, descended from the cosmos, reaching down toward Felix and his magnificent seven dragon tails out of nowhere!

The chains moved with a clear purpose as if guided by the will of the universe!

They were majestic and awe-inspiring, yet there was an undeniable force within them, a power that even beings of Felix's stature could not defy.

As the chains approached, the dragon tails, sensing a challenge to their newfound freedom, began to thrash and roar in defiance!

Lightning crackled, water swirled, and poison seethed in resistance, but the celestial chains were unyielding.

With a precision that belied their size, the chains ensnared each tail, wrapping around them in an intricate pattern of containment!

"It's the universe's shackles. It sure doesn't mess around."

Thor uttered with a stern tone as he watched the tails fight back with all their might, their elemental powers lashing out in a desperate bid for freedom.

'Argh!!!'

Felix himself, feeling the encroachment of these heavenly bindings, exerted his formidable strength against them, his body surging with the raw energy of the sins and the elements.

Even when he knew what was about to come, his will was still incapable of accepting getting shackled by anything.

Alas...Despite their resistance, the chains held firm, their grip tightening as they bound Felix and his draconic extensions.

In the end, as suddenly as they had appeared, the chains dissolved into golden motes of light, disappearing back into the heavens, leaving Felix and the tails free once again.

However, the message was clear and irrevocable.

Despite his ascension and immense power, Felix was now part of the cosmic order, bound by the laws and will of the universe.

If he dared abuse his powers, the same chains would befall him and this time, the experience wouldn't be just uncomfortable, but an agonizing hell!

While Felix was still feeling dread at the notion of his every action being judged and sanctioned by the universe, another person was on cloud nine.

"Those pesky shackles have been gotten off me at last, what a hassle."

In Asna's core, Lilith could be seen sitting on her throne as she watched the fading celestial golden chains with a faint cold smirk.

They turned into golden motes and faded out of existence, freeing her at last of her duties as the guardian of the void and seven sins.

As Lord Hades said, there couldn't be two guardians of the same laws under the universe's payroll.

What did this mean to Lilith? Would she lose her powers and gifts too? Or she wouldn't be affected in the slightest...Only she knows.

Back to Felix...

After the shackles disappeared, the rise was marked as finished and Felix had become the new Paragon of Sins and Guardian of The Seven Desires and Void Laws!

For such a historical and defining moment in the annals of the cosmos, the universe itself seemed to accredit his ascension.

Across the myriad dimensions, from the ethereal planes of the spirit domain to the mysterious depths of the shadow realm, from the majestic expanse of the eternal kingdom to the enigmatic quantum realm, and even within the sprawling void realm and the virtual landscapes of the UVR, a singular, thunderous clap resounded.

RUUUUUUUUUUMMMMMBLE!!!!

The sound was immense, reverberating through every corner of existence, bypassing the barriers between realms and dimensions!!

On the mortal planes, the clap's impact was more pronounced. People from all walks of life, engaged in their daily routines, were startled as the sound filled their ears.

In cities and villages alike, the clap caused momentary chaos. Vehicles screeched to a halt, pedestrians stumbled, and everyday activities were thrown into disarray.

Some accidents occurred, minor yet jarring, as the inhabitants of these realms processed the unexpected and overwhelming phenomenon.

Selphie, Olivia, Bodidi, Malak, Zosia, and the rest of Felix's close ones all figured that the clap was related to him as he was the sole person spamming them nonstop like he had them on command.

All they could do was pray for his well-being and wish him good luck in his future endeavors.

Meanwhile, in the spirit realm, ethereal creatures paused, their forms rippling with the shockwave of the sound.

Noah even paused his journey midway and glanced behind his back with a look of pride on his face...Then, he turned around and carried on with his search without saying much.

As for Carbuncle? He was caught tending his garden with his wife by the thunderclap, making him glance upward with a wide grin.

"Give them hell, little one."

"Honey? What was that?"

"Don't worry about it." Carbuncle chuckled, "It was nothing but the announcement of one birth and the death of many."

Meanwhile, Lord Hades' expression was as unmoving as ever...He poured himself a cup of tea in his throne chamber and took a small sip as he gazed into the sky as well.

'It's about to get hectic up there.'

Just like he had anticipated it, the unigin dwelling in the eternal kingdom had their usual poise disrupted by the sheer force of the clap.

High above in his palace of thunder and lightning, Ruler Zeus paused in his celestial duties.

His eyes, usually crackling with electric energy, turned contemplatively towards the distant horizon of the universe...A sense of anticipation, a rare feeling for a being as ancient and powerful as he, settled over him.

In another corner of the city light and darkness, Apollo ceased his harmonious strumming on a lyre made of starlight...His face, usually alight with the joy of creation and beauty, was now marked by cheerfulness and eagerness.

He gazed upwards, his golden eyes reflecting the vastness of space.

Elsewhere, Eris, the unigin of Chaos and Order, stood surrounded by her ethereal library, the knowledge of ages swirling around her.

She looked up from her ancient texts, her penetrating gaze piercing through the veils of reality, sensing the shift that was taking place...But soon, she gazed down, unbothered.

Hephaestus, Demeter, Artemis, Poseidon, and more such powerful god-like creatures had their unique reaction to the thunderous clap.

From their various domains, they each felt the ripple of change emanating from the rise of a new power in the cosmos.

Then, as if connected by an invisible thread of understanding, they all spoke in unison, their voices a chorus that transcended the boundaries of their realm.

"He is coming..."

They uttered, their words echoing through the infinite divine expanse of the Eternal Kingdom.

This phrase, simple yet laden with meaning, marked the beginning of the end...

Chapter 1629 Breakthrough To The Origin Realm/The Ascension. III (The end)

As the tumultuous events of Felix's ascension had finished, the grand chamber, once a tempest of raw power and elemental fury, started to settle into a state of tranquility.

The seven majestic draconic heads ceased their roaring and writhing...An ethereal calm descended upon them as if acknowledging the completion of their purpose in this momentous transformation.

Gradually, the dragons began to dissolve, not into nothingness, but into countless motes of light.

These particles of light, delicate and serene, started to drift towards Felix, who remained at the center of the chamber, his form now still in the aftermath of the ascension.

As the motes of light approached him, they were drawn to the tattoos on his arms and chest, the inked symbols of the seven sins.

One by one, the particles merged with the tattoos, infusing them with the powers and attributes of the draconic manifestations.

The tattoos, which had been vibrant and dynamic throughout the ascension process, began to transform.

They turned dimmer, their luminescent and ethereal qualities fading away, leaving behind ink that appeared black and normal as if they were regular tattoos.

This sight caught everyone by surprise, even Felix.

"Are they really part of my body or are they mere extensions of the seven sins coming to life?" Felix wondered out loud as he stretched his shoulders, causing his joints to release explosive shockwaves instead of noisy cracks.

When he stood up, he gave a full scan of his body and area, realizing that besides the tattoos and the long white hair, nothing much changed for him.

He was as human as ever with fair skin, nice clean sets of nails, no cracks in his skin, and no weird changes done to his eyes or other parts.

This caused a slow pleased smile to spread across his face, making him feel like he was back in control over his entire bloodline, something he hadn't felt for a very, very long time.

"Ah, the origin realm sure does feel like being born anew," Felix murmured.

"Congratulations, little one."

"Congratulations!"

"I didn't think the ascension would go this easily without any complications."

"It's normal, his body had already reached its peak potential and it wanted nothing off him but to be unleashed...With the universe's approval over the ascension, nothing could stop the process from concluding." Lady Sphinx said.

The tenants celebrated Felix's breakthrough with varied looks of satisfaction and delight, sensing like they were in the presence of a newborn godhood.

"My King! You have finally achieved your greatness, it's an honor to witness this moment with those two unworthy eyes."

Off the stunned councilmen around, The Ruiner was the first to break off his daze and kneel before Felix with great fervor and a sense of reverence.

Candace and the rest followed along and knelt, feeling such an otherworldly authoritative aura surrendering Felix akin to a royal cape, making their hearts unable to settle down.

"Thank you for your eternal support." Felix nodded with an appreciative look, "Give me some moment to adjust, and I will see if it's possible to help you upgrade your powers again."

Felix had already tried to bestow new symbols to the void nation citizens, hoping to increase their strength and usefulness in the future.

Alas, nothing he did succeeded in achieving it.

Not even the Equal Trade symbol worked as the universe kept taking the payment without showing any positive results like his level wasn't yet at the correct stage to bestow his own powers on others.

It was expected since he was giving off powers of Laws...This wasn't something to be shared with anybody due to the chaos it could cause.

This was the reason Lilith was punished by creating the void race.

"Do not waste your time on us, we are satisfied with just being under your rulership and guidance," Arthur uttered with a solemn tone.

"He has a point." Candace smiled, "We aren't too bothered with upgrading our strength anymore as long as we can be part of your journey."

The rest of the councilmen nodded in support, letting Felix understand that he had no reason to feel like he was indebted to them.

"I will do what I can do, don't overthink it." Felix excused them with a hand wave, "Now, head back to your duties and go assure the void citizens, they must have seen the dragoniod heads."

Without too many questions, the councilmen bowed one last moment and left him to his own devices.

"Now." Felix's gaze got colder as he sat returned down and switched to his consciousness wisp inside his mind.

The moment the tenants saw the bloodthirsty look in his eyes, they knew immediately what he had in mind.

Felix neither tried to learn about his new strength nor explore his powers.

The first thing he did was appear before Lilith, who was floating on the pool above an inflatable duck, and uttered with a bone-chilling tone, "What's your defense now?"

Lilith lifted her sunglasses slowly and squinted in his direction like she was having trouble seeing him due to the direct sunlight.

"Darling, is that you? White hair suits you the most, it brings your skin tone incredibly well." She praised him with a charming smile, unbothered by his bloodthirsty.

"You won't answer?" Felix turned his returned on her and uttered coldly, "Let's see if you will continue playing dumb."

He swiftly put his mind into entering Asna's core and his consciousness manifested on its surface like he was entering his own house.

What came before him was the real Lilith on her overbearing throne. Her previous core had disappeared entirely, resulting the space appearing empty.

No one was surprised by this as for Felix to be turned into a unigin, the core had to assimilate with him 100% and be his own...Otherwise, he would motionless be merely using the sins' powers but not be a true unigin like the rest.

Right now, he could feel the core settling down peacefully in his pitch-black subconsciousness and he could move it anywhere he desired.

But, his mind wasn't on this matter at the moment.

He lifted his head and gazed directly into Lilith's seductive glittering eyes...Before he could say anything, Lilith chuckled and said, "Boy, unless you stopped caring about your little wife's core, you should reconsider those terrible thoughts in your mind."

Felix narrowed his eyes in seriousness, knowing that Lilith always had a guarantee to ensure her safety after his ascension.

"Are you implying that you have the power to destroy her core?" He asked, his voice icier than the glaciers in winter.

"The moment you gave me access to her core, it's within my powers to do whatever I want to it." Lilith smiled, "Unigin's core is even more vital than mortals' heart. Gaining access to it is the same as holding a mortal's heart in your bare hands. Any sudden moment and opse, it turns into a fountain of blood."

"Is that what you want to happen to your precious' heart?" She asked, her charming smile was unchanging, but her eyes emitted an unspoken level of threat.

Felix knew that she wasn't screwing around with him and the moment he showed an ounce of aggression in her direction, Asna's core might not exist again...

"Of course, unigins can't truly be killed." Lilith chuckled again, changing the tone of the atmosphere, "But, are you willing to wait for her birth again, which might take a dozen billion years if you were lucky?"

Felix tightened his fists in silence, his heart fuelled with anger and hatred, but there was nowhere to vent them.

He understood that Lilith had him caught by the balls and she knew that he would never do anything to jeopardize Asna's core.

"This isn't over...If I can't stop you, Asna will." Felix turned around as he left one last bone-chilling remark, "The day I rescue her is the day you will perish, mark my word."

With that, his body broke into particles and his focus returned to his main consciousness in the throne chamber.

Felix opened his eyes and gazed at the sky, then he murmured, "I am coming Asna, please wait for a little while..."

Chapter 1630 The Seven Draconic Tailed Hydra!

Suddenly, Felix knitted his eyebrows in discomfort after his newly awakened senses, now acutely attuned to the slightest disturbances in the cosmos, picked up on the subtle presence of observers.

He felt more than a dozen pairs of eyes fixed on him from a distance, their gaze heavy with scrutiny and curiosity.

Slowly lifting his head, his eyes narrowed as he scanned the horizon.

The realization dawned coldly upon him; these were no ordinary onlookers...They were the unigins and maybe even the three rulers within the eternal kingdom!

'What a creepy feeling...' Felix's expression turned for the worst.

He already knew that the entire universe was under their piercing eyes. Now, that he was sensing them, it made him feel violated.

In response, Felix's expression hardened, and with a thought, he summoned the full breadth of his spiritual aura.

Whoosh!! Whoosh!!!...

It unfurled around him like a tempest, creating an invisible, impenetrable barrier that cloaked him from their probing eyes!

This barrier was more than a shield; it was a statement of his newfound sovereignty and a clear message that he was no longer a mere subject of their observation, but a power in his own right, beyond their uninvited scrutiny.

The air around him crackled with the intensity of his aura and the observers' attempts to break through it.

Alas, it was impossible now that Felix's spiritual pressure was that of a genuine unigin, rivaling their own.

"Don't be so impatient." Felix uttered with an indifferent tone, "I will be joining you soon enough."

The moment Felix said this, his spiritual pressure aura calmed down and the invisible barrier settled down neatly around him.

"It's not a smart idea to challenge them." Thor advised with a serious tone, "You don't know who can be your allies there and it's best to be open-minded about it. After all, you need as much help as possible to take down the three rulers."

"Master, you are wrong about one thing." Felix narrowed his eyes dangerously as he walked towards the throne, dragging behind him the long river of luminous white hair. The instant he sat down, he uttered coldly, "They are the ones who shouldn't challenge me as I am coming for every single one of them."

Felix vowed to destroy the entire eternal kingdom, the precious baby of the three rulers...Anyone who gets in his path would be treated as his enemy regardless of their identity.

"Are you sure about this take?" J?rmungandr asked.

"I have been walking on eggshells for a long time now. I have no interest in playing nice to buy anyone to my side."

"Luckily, you don't need to overthink this." Lilith suddenly interjected with a causal tone, "The three rulers will most definitely entice the unigins to attack you and retrieve Asna's core. So, no one there would want to be your friend anyway and will jump you the moment you step inside the eternal kingdom."

"..." Felix was left speechless.

While he was acting tough and unbothered, he wouldn't mind having some unigins in his corner to facilitate the rescue mission.

But now? He understood that was nothing but a pipe dream.

Realizing that his journey in the eternal kingdom would be packed with action from his first day, Felix understood that he couldn't rush his entry without some preparations.

The first thing he needed to do was get used to his new strength and powers.

He began by focusing on his physical strength.

Centering himself, Felix channeled his energy into his muscles, feeling the raw power coursing through his body as he sat on his throne.

In less than a moment, he opened his eyes with a hint of surprise in them.

"My strength is equal to a staggering 29 million Bloodline Force...That's wild!"

He couldn't maintain his composure as he tightened his fist until he felt the air molecules heat up and break apart like he embedding them with force ten times more powerful than nuclear fusion!

In his hand alone, he could feel like he held the power to blow entire galaxies into smithereens!

"29 million BF is enough to consider you a hundred times more powerful than a primogenitor." Lord Shiva commented with a faint frigid smile, "Who would have belief that spineless child from before will obtain this kind of untapped power."

"Can't you praise like normal people?" Thor's eyelids twitched.

Felix wasn't too bothered as he was used to Lord Shiva's asshole nature. He smiled a little and said, "The remaining 9 million BF must be related to my origin breakthrough."

The tenants agreed as they knew that Unigin considered in his adult form possessed a minimum of 20 million BF as a foundation.

"You have broken through to the origin realm after surpassing 4 million BF. It wasn't too much of a surprise." Lady Sphinx uttered with a calm tone, "Unfortunately, you can't keep it whole."

"Did you have to remind me now?" Felix smiled wryly.

He understood that if he dared to get rid of anything related to the three rulers' elements in his system, his power would be affected negatively.

After all, he couldn't weaken his current perfect genetic evolution and not lose some of his strength.

But, it had to happen as those elemental manipulations and abilities were like time bombs in his system.

For now, Felix continued his testings...He turned his attention to his mental energy capacity, elemental tank, mental defense, reaction speed, etc.

As Felix concluded his tests, a sense of awe at his capabilities washed over him. Every aspect of his power had been enhanced to a level that could only be described as divine!

His strength, mental energy, elemental control, mental defenses, and reaction speed – all had been elevated to extraordinary heights, solidifying his status as a True Unigin!

After he was done with those basic tests, Felix moved on to the main dish, the core of the evolution, and the biggest change he had experienced in his life...The Seven Draconic Tails.

"I have no idea where did they go, but let's summon them."

With a focused intention, he called forth the seven draconic tails.

Immediately after, his seven symbols tattoos brightened up and the seven draconic tails emerged from his back, magnificent and awe-inspiring, their presence dominating the space around him!

This time, the draconic tails remained small, matching Felix's current size.

"How peculiar...It feels like each one of them has its mind, but at the same time, I can control every tiny action they do." Felix murmured with an astounded tone as he observed the draconic tails with a keen eye, noting the distinct features that set each apart.

Their personalities and appearance matched their sin so well, that it was apparent even so to ignorant people.

The lion's shaped draconic head had a frigid and regal air to him. He was keeping his head elevated above his brothers and sister in a straight line, seemingly implying that his pride couldn't allow him to exist on the same level as anyone.

The dragon's shaped head had a furious and easily irritable expression, gazing left and right, appearing like he was seeking to pick a fight without anyone that irked him just a little.

The fox's shaped draconic head had a sly smile on his face as he kept slithering in the air around Felix, resembling a scammy merchant wanting to rip him off.

The serpent-shaped draconic head had a scheming look on its face as it kept hissing with its long tongue.

The Goat's shaped draconic head had a feminine and seductive look to her...Her pink eyes were scanning the area around, appearing like she was hunting for her next prey.

The Boar's draconic head had the biggest mouth of them all and it didn't possess a single tooth, like chewing food was a waste of its time. He gazed at Felix with a hungry look, creeping the f*ck out of him.

'Does he want to eat me?'

Felix shook the weird feeling and moved to the last draconic head. Its features were that of a lazy bear, as he had drowsy gaze and his head was leaning against the other draconic heads for support like he couldn't maintain his weight.

Felix's eyelids twitched as he watched the wrathful draconic head bite him the instant he entered his comfort space...Yet, the sloth draconic head couldn't care less and kept leaning against him.

"Why does it feel like I have inherited seven troublesome children?"

Felix didn't know what to think of this situation. Not in his wildest dreams did he expect his perfect evolution to be this.

"Heads up."

Felix ordered and the seven draconic heads instantly switched their entire attitude to a frigid and serious one while remaining in a single position. Even the sloth's draconic head seemed like he wasn't asleep for a second.

"Maybe, this isn't so bad." Felix smiled in satisfaction at their obedience. "Now, let's see what you are capable of."

The moment Felix uttered this, each draconic head had unleashed their elemental abilities simultaneously, a display of their collective might and their mastery over them!

The draconic lion roared fiercely as it summoned a colossal bolt of lightning from its horn. The draconic serpent unleashed a torrential wave around them. The draconic goat created multiple illusionary manifestations of itself.

The draconic fox manifested a wall of crystalline barriers that emerged from the ground. The draconic boar released a dense cloud of poisonous gas. The wrathful dragon released a torrent of destruction mist from its mouth. Lastly, the draconic bear created a void sphere above his head.

The field around Felix had transformed into a dynamic theater of elemental forces, leaving him and the tenants with an astounded look...They knew that this was nothing but a mere demonstration of their elemental control and they could have gone harder if they desired!

"Seven Elements, Seven Sin Laws, Seven Draconic Heads." Lady Sphinx murmured, "No wonder you evolved into a Hydra as it is the only evolutionary path available to contain all of those powers."
