

Supremacy 1661

Chapter 1661 The Second Ascension. II

In his eyes, the entire universe operated on balance and order to the point, even the unigins were under duty chains to keep them in check.

Yet, here he was, watching as Felix, a human, proceeded to his second ascension and the second bestowal of unigin's divine gifts!

"The universe does care about balance more than anything," Lilith responded with a causal tone while licking a pink lollipop seductively, "While it has no consciousness to reason that Felix shouldn't possess two cores just because he has the candidacy attributes, it will weaken the gifts provided during the ascension to maintain its balance."

"You mean like the bestowed strength and such?" Thor asked with great difficulty, like he couldn't stomach the thought of talking to Lilith.

"Yep." Lilith nodded, "He obtained twenty-five million BF before and I am certain this time, he will probably obtain half of it or even less...The same will happen to other gifts."

The tenants seemed to understand and agree with her take as they had their own dealings with the universe's way of doing things.

Just like anything it created, the balance was at its helm...Dragons were powerful, but low in numbers and cursed with uncontrollable pride.

Humans were born with a massive talent, but no cultivation system, no superhuman strength, or mental fortitude powerful enough to move objects.

All they had was their intelligence, strong adaptability, and cockroach-like reproduction system sprinkled with strong desires to own everything.

Elves had reproduction problems and were too trusting...Slimes were near unkillable with their rejuvenation powers, but their strength was utterly useless.

The same theory could be applied to any and every race born in this universe.

In the same manner, it was impossible to allow a person to obtain two or multiple unigin cores without changing anything about the enhancements provided.

Otherwise, by the fifth ascension, Felix would be at one hundred million BF without using a single drop of celestial energy to empower himself.

"It's still more than worth it. His new laws won't be touched and they are the real reward."

Lord Loki remarked as he watched Felix grunt while enduring the transformation, his body resonating with the raw power of the ascension.

ROOOOOAAAR!!!

The wrathful hydra tail began its metamorphosis at last, each scale cracking and turning into ashen magma...Lava dripped down its surface, glowing with an intense heat that mirrored the volcanic environment of the base!

"The hydra tail... it's evolving!" Candace observed aloud, a tone of awe in her voice.

The tail's horns ignited with blue flames, casting a brilliant light that danced around the room.

The flames formed a scorching aura around the tail, a fiery spectacle that symbolized the fusion of Felix's essence with Hephaestus' core.

As the ascension reached its climax, Felix felt a deep connection with the universe, a silent acknowledgment of his transformation.

The room was filled with the light of the transformation, casting long shadows against the rocky walls. The lava rivers and magma pools seemed to respond to Felix's ascension, their glow intensifying as if in recognition of the monumental event taking place.

Finally, the transformation was complete.

Felix opened his eyes, now imbued with a newfound power and presence...The wrathful hydra tail and the dragon's heart had become integral parts of his being, transformed into embodiments of celestial might.

Felix stood up, feeling the weight and potential of his new form even when his appearance hadn't changed...It was like the hydra tail was the only one going through the ascension.

RUUUUMMBLE!!!

Just as he wanted to comment on the transformation, a sudden universal thunderclap echoed through the cosmos, a sonic manifestation of the monumental event!

Its reverberations were felt across the entirety of the universe, touching every realm and being within it!

"It's official now..." Lady Sphinx remarked with a serious tone, "Hephaestus is dead and will no longer return."

This was the same thought that went through everyone involved. Before, even after Felix got rid of Hephaestus' soul, he still had the chance to return in the far future if Felix ever lost control over his core.

That's why Hephaestus said he would return and he should remember him, confident that no matter what Felix did, he would always return.

But now? Felix was considered officially by the universe as the new Guardian of Fire and Magma.

In other words, if the core was lost and Felix's soul was gone, he would be the one returning in the far future!

"Well, this won't sit well with the other unigins," Felix remarked with a faint cold smirk, understanding that they were smart enough to figure out the truth on their own.

Such a universal realm across Thunderclap resounded only for such scenarios connected to unigins and at this moment, there weren't many options to choose from.

As he expected, the instant the thunderclap landed in the unigins' ears, every one of them frowned their eyebrows and gazed into the distance with a tint of puzzlement in their eyes.

After a few moments of brainstorming on the source of the thunderclap, their hearts skipped a beat after realizing that only one option could explain the timing.

"Impossible...That's just impossible?!"

"Second ascension?! Was this his reason for targeting Hephaestus' core?! It can't be."

"The universe will never allow such a blatant break of its order...Never!"

No one dared to believe their assumption even if it was the only feasible outcome...Without hesitation, they reached out to the three rulers and requested their confirmation, knowing that Felix should be on their radar.

The three rulers neither seemed impressed nor surprised by the whole matter...They merely reported back with an indifferent tone, "He has ascended again."

It was like they already knew Felix was going for it and would succeed in pulling it off.

"..."

"..."

After Athena, Zeus, and the rest received their confirmation, they sat on their thrones in utter silence.

Even with a confirmation, it was still too difficult for them to accept it.

A unigin with control over eight types of laws was already too strong in their eyes and now he was geared up with the laws of fire, magma, plasma, and anything connected to heat?

How could they acknowledge it?

"If he still can continue with multiple ascensions somehow, then, he will be coming for us...Not for our celestial energy but for our cores." Aeolus gulped a mouthful in dread, having a slight feeling of being a prey creeping up on him.

This was the first time he ever sensed like his life was in danger since no one could kill unigins even if their souls were erased. But this? This was different.

He made the universe consider him as the second replacement without giving it the chance to even consider reviving the dead unigin!

In another sense, it would lead them to a true death and none of them had ever considered about it before or were ready mentally to acknowledge such a damning fate!

'Change of plans.' Athena reached out to all unigins at once and uttered with a cold tone, 'This is a matter of life and death now. We are in the presence of not an invader but a unigin slayer...Use everything to find him and take him out before he grows stronger than our reach. Poseidon, Apollo, this is also connected to your life and I refuse to have you stay it out.'

'I ain't planning on doing that.' Poseidon replied coldly.

After finding out that Hephaestus was dead for real and his laws stolen, Poseidon realized that Felix might prioritize returning his territory from him.

He had no intention of waiting until he showed up before his front step.

'I will search for him too.' Apollo interjected with a serious tone.

While he really wanted to find Felix, he didn't mention that it was for the other reason...His peers were satisfied with his involvement, knowing that the search would be much easier with him.

'One day, we have to locate him in less than a day.' Athena finished the discussion with a cold statement, 'He needs to be caught before he can get used to Hephaestus' laws.'

Chapter 1662 Awakening The Sleeping Beauty.

Meanwhile, in distant areas of the universe, Felix's friends, including Selphie, Olivia, Noah, and Carbuncle, paused in their activities as the thunderclap reached them...Their expressions shifted to one of awe and realization.

'He must be kicking ass up there.' Noah commentated with a little smirk before he continued on his eternal search, still nowhere close to reaching his little sister's spirit.

'Felix...I hope you are okay...'

Selphie and Olivia shared a bit of concern as they knew that the thunderclap could represent an achievement or an announcement...If Felix had fallen, they were certain the universe would announce it.

It sure announced something and that was the death of Hephaestus.

The rest of the people continued with their daily lives after a few minutes of wonderment, already used to such thunderclaps by now, it became part of their lives.

Back in the cave under the active volcano, Felix could be seen addressing his people.

"Due to certain circumstances, we are obliged to pack up again and leave this area." Felix announced with a solemn tone, "This time, we will need to be constantly on the move. Thus, we will ride on the world eaters and start journeying across the outer space of the wasteland nonstop."

Felix thought he could stay here for a day or two before they changed locations, but after he succeeded in the ascension, he knew that was no longer an option.

He was certain that the unigins would find their base in less than a couple of hours if they put their entire mind into it.

At least, if they were on the move, it would be much easier to react and escape than being stuck under a volcano.

Candace and the others had nothing to complain about and started packing up again.

After they finished, everyone moved up to the top of a symbiote and Felix commanded it to head up, away from the surface of the eternal kingdom.

This would minimize all chances for unigins to locate them as most of their reach was limited in the eternal kingdom.

After all, Artemis, Demeter, Aeolus, Zeus, and even Athena didn't have their related laws in outer space to send scouts and such.

After half a day of nonstop searching for Felix and his people across the entire surface area of the eternal kingdom's wasteland, all the unigins lifted their heads and gazed into the sky with an irked expressions.

"He is planning to slow down the game and stay on the low," Zeus expressed coldly, not too pleased with this result.

"I would have done the same in his position." Athena sighed, "He has taken advantage of us underestimating him to take down Hephaestus and steal his powers. Now, he knows we are in this for real and wouldn't come down unless he was confident in his preparation to take down at least two of us at once."

She was correct!

Felix's next plan was to lay low in outer space and get stronger by mastering his old and new laws before daring to target another unigin.

His fight with Hephaestus and talk with Eris made him understand that he needed to evolve his game at all costs if he wanted to keep going forward.

Otherwise, even if he had multiple laws, he would still fail to defeat another unigin who had control over a single law...Mastery and battle experience mattered way too much in those fights.

Especially, when the same strategy to farm up celestial energy in the celestial city wasn't going to work again.

"Don't give up on the search." Athena said with stern tone.

Although she understood it was a long shot they would be able to locate Felix ever again, it was better to keep trying than not.

Meanwhile, in the serene expanse of an ethereal realm, where time seemed to stand still, Asna lay in a state of deep slumber, her form enveloped in a gentle, luminescent glow.

She was the epitome of divine grace, her appearance exceeding the mere concept of beauty.

Asna's hair flowed around her like a cascade of liquid flames, shimmering with each subtle movement, reflecting the soft light that bathed her resting place.

Her skin glowed with an inner radiance, hinting at the immense power that lay dormant within her.

The universal thunderclap, its reverberations were powerful enough, they managed to awaken Asna from her slumber.

The moment the sound touched her, the serene glow that surrounded her intensified, as if responding to the call of the cosmos.

Asna's eyelids fluttered open, revealing eyes that held the depth of the universe within them. They sparkled with a myriad of colors, each shift of her gaze akin to witnessing the birth and death of stars.

As she rose from her resting state, the ethereal realm around her seemed to brighten, the very air charged with the anticipation of her awakening.

"He is here..."

Awareness flooded into Asna's consciousness, her thoughts immediately turning to Felix. A complex array of emotions played across her divine features—surprise, concern, but above all, an undying affection for the lover who dared to traverse the path of the celestials for her sake.

The reason of her emergence from slumber was twofold: the thunderous announcement of Felix's second ascension and the presence of her core now within the Eternal Kingdom.

She was forced into slumber in the first place because the eternal kingdom wasn't linked with the rest of the universe. But now? She could feel her core a little.

Asna stood, her form radiant and majestic, a goddess in every sense of the word.

"Felix," she whispered, her voice carrying a melody that could soothe the fiercest storms. "Where are you?"

She tried her best to access out to Felix, but to no avail. She came to realize that the celestial pocket dimension was also sealed from the eternal kingdom. This made her able to feel her core's presence, but not control it, send a message through it or anything of the sort.

While she couldn't communicate with him, Felix was able to feel her presence through her core the instant she opened her eyes.

It was like her core came slightly alive.

This sudden awareness struck Felix with the force of a comet, leaving him shocked, excited, and overwhelmed with a torrent of emotions.

His heart surged with a mixture of joy and longing, the sensation of Asna's presence igniting hope and desire he had kept carefully guarded.

Without hesitation, Felix reached out, calling into the vast expanse of the universe,

"Asna!" His voice, laden with emotion, sought to bridge the cosmic distances between them, to touch her, to confirm that the connection was real.

But his call met only the silence of the celestial realm, his words dissipating into the void without reaching Asna...

In that moment of poignant longing, Lilith remarked with a nonchalant tone, "Stop squandering your breath. She can't hear you, not as long as she persist in the celestial pocket dimension."

"It must be sealed too..." Felix sighed, the initial shock of Asna's faint presence giving way to a mix of frustration and resignation.

The reality of Lilith's words settled over him like a cold shroud. Despite the incredible journey he had undertaken, the barriers between him and Asna remained formidable.

"At least, you can feel her presence now." Thor comforted, "You know that she is awake and well."

Felix nodded with a faint bitter smile and a hand placed on his heart, feeling like Asna was with him again, watching over him like always.

For now, that was enough to keep him at peace...

Chapter 1663 The Celestial Ceremony.

Felix didn't even consider seeking a way to help Asna leave the celestial realm as he knew that was a near impossibility.

The three rulers were always inside the realm, guarding the universe's heart, and Felix had no plans to put himself in their hands so soon.

Still, he tried to find other ways at least to communicate with her and see how was she doing.

"Just drop it, as long as the celestial realm is sealed, nothing will work," Lilith advised.

"..." Felix remained silent.

He already knew that the seals would make any plan or method fail miserably.

That's why he chose the only time when it was widely known that the celestial realm remained open for a decent period.

"You are thinking about doing something during the Celestial Ceremony?" Lilith raised an eyebrow in surprise, "How bold, you truly don't fear death."

Everyone showed the same reaction as Lilith, giving Felix startled looks.

"Isn't that where all citizens of the eternal kingdom gather? Including the unigins and three rulers?" Thor sucked a deep breath, "How are you planning to make a move during it?"

Everyone knew that the Celestial Ceremony was one of the most important events in the eternal kingdom.

It was the only time when the three rulers accepted all the collected celestial energy from their territories and traded it off for a percentage of their divinities.

It was held every century for the sake of collecting a decent portion before trading it off.

This was also where new mortals were blessed by the three rulers with some divinities for their achievements unrelated to their gods.

Yet, the most played-out and significant event was the Celestial Dual. It was the only legal and approved method by everyone for the unigins to steal celestial energy from their peers without touching their territories.

It was through a direct challenge between unigins, where both parties needed to agree.

The winner was rewarded with the decided portion of the other. Most unigins participated on it only for entertainment purposes between them since they wouldn't need to worry about their territories while in battle.

Under the attendance of the three rulers, most unigins behaved themselves.

"I don't aware yet, but I know there must be a way to manipulate the ceremony to our advantage." Felix replied with narrowed eyes.

In Felix's mind, the unigins and the three rulers would never postpone the ceremony due to him.

While this would provide him a chance to prepare ahead and take advantage, it also meant that all of them were confident he wouldn't be able to harm them in any fashion. Even if he decided to pay a visit to their territories to steal celestial energy.

In other words...

"The three rulers are going to be guarding all the unigins territories in case one of them decided to be funny." Felix shared, "This means the three rulers wouldn't hesitate to strike me, no matter how much celestial energy was going to cost them."

"It's way riskier than going to the ceremony." Thor stressed on his point, "At least during the ceremony, they might not bother to make a move while everyone was around."

Everyone believed the same, knowing that it was better to ride this wave of nonchalance from the three rulers than poke them.

"I will ponder of something." Felix murmured the last part, "I have to check on her...I have to."

A couple of months later...

In the vast, silent expanse of outer space, where the darkness is punctuated only by the distant twinkle of stars and the infinite piece of land, Felix could be seen sitting on the top of the world eater raccoon's head. He allowed Nimo to practice his laws through playing with the behemoths, and he wasn't pulling his hands.

"I guess we are somewhat further now to create a real star." Felix to himself as he glanced at the far away eternal kingdom.

He spent the past months fooling around with fire, magma, plasma, and anything else heat related. While he had enjoyed himself, he had yet to create a star without worrying about nothing.

After all, with the unigins' senses, it would take only one of them to be gazing at the sky to realize the addition of a new star.

At least, now, he had the chance to teleport away if he got caught.

Without hesitation, Felix extended his hands, palms facing outward.

His focus was intense, a concentration so profound it seemed to bend the very fabric of space around him. The energy from Hephaestus' core coursed through him, a turbulent river of divine fiery power that he was only now beginning to understand and harness.

He envisioned the star, not just as a celestial body, but as a symbol of life, warmth, and the light that guided through darkness.

Slowly, Felix began to gather the cosmic dust and gas floating aimlessly around him, using his will to compress them into a dense sphere.

The materials coalesced under his command, drawn together by the invisible force of his intent.

As the mass grew, so too did the pressure within it, a mounting force seeking release!

The heart of the nascent star began to glow faintly, the first spark of life within its core!

Felix's eyes shone with reflected light, witnessing the birth of something magnificent from the raw materials of the cosmos.

It was like he had the power not to just destroy, but create, add something of real value to the universe's system.

"Now," he whispered, injecting a surge of Hephaestus' fiery essence into the heart of the sphere.

The reaction was immediate and explosive!

The core ignited, a brilliant flash of light that pierced the surrounding darkness, marking the birth of a new star!

Candace and the rest of the void citizens watched in awe as the star blazed to life, its light steady and strong.

As he floated there, basking in the light of his creation, Felix felt a deep connection to the cosmos, an understanding that he was part of something much greater.

The experience was transformative, reshaping his perception of his place in the universe and the path that lay before him.

'If I ascended six more times and obtained the powers to rule over dozens of laws, will my existence be closer to the universe?' He muttered in his mind as he watched the source of life burning before him.

'Will that be enough to bring down the three rulers?' As Felix asked, expecting no one to answer him, he couldn't help but focus on Lilith.

Then, he closed his eyes and took a deep breath before snapping them open with a different type of look.

That breath was his pride, his dignity, his face, all for the sake of his loved one.

"I desire to know how strong are the rulers compared to the unigins." Felix asked.

"Ohohoho, what do we have here?" Lilith lowered her sunglasses, showing an amusing look.

This was the first time Felix went out of his way to query her something directly after what she did to him and his masters.

She always answered some of his questions, but only through interjections.

"Can you just answer?" Felix got irritated swiftly.

"You can't expect me not to enjoy this." Lilith chuckled, "The great Felix seeking my help and wisdom."

"I understood this was a dumb id..."

"Relax, can't I tease you for a bit?"

Seeing that Felix's expression was still not amused, Lilith could only sigh and say out loud, "Fine, you desire to know? I will inform you."

Everyone's ears perked up in intrigue while their expression showed an untold amount of seriousness.

The three rulers' strength and powers were always up to debate compared to the unigins.

It was finally the time where they would put a number on it.

"Hmmm, long story short." Lilith shared casually, "They can be as strong as their celestial reservoir, growing infinitely more powerful than anything imaginable."

"Infinitely?"

"Yes, infinitely."

Chapter 1664 Not So Innocent.

Uncaring about everyone's stunned expressions, Lilith continued, her gaze piercing into the distance, "The three rulers, possess a strength that is not static. Their power has the potential to grow infinitely, bound only by the amount of celestial energy they can access and harness. This is all you should know to understand that those beings are close to untouchable if they decide to go all out."

Felix absorbed her words, the implications slowly dawning on him...The cosmic battle for power was not just about the might one started with but the ability to accumulate and expand that might.

At this moment, he came to realize that the three rulers should never be thought of from the same perspective as unigins.

Any being with the ability to grow infinitely implied that his existence was at the apex...For him to even be named in the same breath as them, he needed to join that apex first.

Lilith saw the realization dawn on Felix's face and nodded, affirming his understanding. "Yes. Your ascensions, your battles, even the star you've just created, they are all part of a larger tapestry of power. Unfortunately, the rulers have positioned themselves at the nexus of celestial energy, drawing upon it to fuel their endless growth. Even I don't know their current level."

"I see..."

Felix nodded, a new determination kindling within him.

Understanding the true nature of the rulers' strength didn't make him lose his confidence, but provided him with a new lens through which to view his journey and the challenges ahead.

When it came to Asna, he would never get discouraged by anything as he was going to save her no matter what it took...That's a promise he had to keep.

"Knowing this changes everything...It's not enough to match their current strength, you must find a way to surpass their growth potential." Lady Sphinx commented calmly.

In other words, when it came to the three rulers, there was no such thing as surpassing an amount of bloodline force to be able to defeat them.

Their strength had already overcome this stage and for Felix to reach the same platform as them, he had to escape from such limitations as well.

"Having the ability to ascend multiple times is currently the only available option to achieve this 'state'." Felix shared his thoughts, "I believe that if I reached the seventh ascension, the universe might consider putting me in the same breath as the three rulers since my social status would not be on the same level as other unigins."

He believed that the universe might separate him from the rest of the unigins since his status would be much higher than theirs, knowing that the universe was all about balance..

"It would be nice if it happens, but one can only hope," Thor replied.

"Asna being a celestial herself, might also possess the same infinite growth potential." Elder Kraken suggested, "I believe if you found a way to save her and return her core, she will be the true danger to the three rulers as long as she awakens."

"What's your thoughts on this?" Felix glanced at Lilith, wanting to add her into their conversations willingly, to extract information.

"I would agree." Lilith chuckled, "If your little girlfriend were to awaken, she would be the bane of the three rulers and their plan."

Before anyone could react to this surprising, but somewhat expected piece of news, she continued, "Too bad, the celestial energy required for her awakening is on a different level."

"How bad? If compared to the amount I stole? Thousand times?" Felix narrowed his eyes.

Lilith merely pointed a finger upward as a response.

"Ten thousand times?"

The finger was still up.

"Hundred thousand times?"

"I don't have time for this." Lilith's eyelids twitched and replied, "It's beyond a century billion."

"..."

"..."

The moment Felix and the tenants heard this, they were left staring at each other in utter stupefaction!

They expected her to be an energy-devouring monster but beyond a hundred billion times what he stole? That was simply unimaginable!

"Why does she need so much?" Felix sucked a deep breath, "I knew unigins devour tons of energy to rouse their full strength, but still..."

If this was what everyone needed to awaken, then, the universe would have not a single awakened unigin roaming around.

"Your girlfriend is a special breed." Lilith uttered with a slightly envious tone, "She is kind of a mixed creature with attributes of celestials and unigins. She can harness, absorb, and control celestial energy, but at the same time, she has compatibility with all laws and elements, plus possesses the ability to awaken like unigins. Mind you, the three rulers can't awaken."

When she was put like this, everyone noticed that Asna somewhat neither was a celestial nor a unigin...She was both and none.

None in the sense that she had yet to rouse and establish her genuine powers and capabilities while at the same time, she had yet to create her own divinity.

The celestial white flames were something standardized among the three rulers too.

In other words, she had yet to explore an inch of her true strength.

"Is this why she was sealed?" Felix's pupil narrowed in focus after it dawned on him that Asna's presence was a direct hurdle for the three rulers' master plan!

"It's one of the main reasons." Lilith confirmed it, "There is no way the three rulers can allow her to rouse when she is going to exhaust all the resources they had painstakingly collected for eons."

"As expected." Felix's expression got cold, "This means unless the three rulers succeeded in their plan, Asna was bound to be either imprisoned or banished away from celestial energy sources for the rest of her life."

"Yep." Lilith added oil to the fire with a sinister smile, "Also, the majority of the unigins agreed to her exile when they heard that celestial energy would be dried up from the land for the next eons if she were ever to awaken."

"Why do you think none of them are sympathetic to her imprisonment even when it happened twice?"

"In their eyes, she is even more risky than the three rulers."

The more she spoke, the more Felix's body temperature rose until he felt like he could melt anything nearby...Even his eyes started to turn red with liquified lava gathered near the tips akin to tears.

"Hooh, little one, relax, relax." Thor remarked while cleaning the sweat on his forehead.

"Awww...It burns!" Candace yelped in pain and swiftly teleported away.

"Easy there, Felix." Fenrir used his ice manipulation to cool down the temperature a bit.

"Oh...My bad."

When Felix heard everyone and saw the sudden change in atmosphere, he swiftly regained control over his body temperature.

As he lowered it back to normal, his anger was still there, but this time, he didn't let it meddle with his temperature...This was one of the many subtle changes that occurred after his second ascension.

"I guess they weren't so innocent after all," Felix remarked with a cold tone as he envisioned the sh*tty treatment Asna had to go through in her childhood.

As a unigin born twenty million years ago, she was considered the youngest of them all, and instead of guiding her and treating her as their little princess, they banished and locked her up all alone.

While Felix knew better not to believe anything Lilith had said, he wasn't dumb enough to believe that the unigins had their hands off this.

Even if they didn't actively participate, the fact that none of them stood up for Asna, was enough of an excuse to not feel an ounce of remorse in hunting them down.

"Give me their names, it will make my decision for my next targets much easier." Felix inquired with a cold tone.

Chapter 1665 Exploring The True Potential of Seven The Sins Laws. I

After Felix received the names of the unigins, he ignored the ones unreachable by him at his current level and aimed his guns at the familiar ones.

"Poseidon, Zeus, Athena, Aeolus, Hephaestus, and Demeter." He repeated with a tint of coldness in his voice.

"Interesting, only Apollo and Artemis have rejected the proposition," Thor remarked.

"It's not that interesting." Lilith replied lazily, "Apollo has slept through the decision while Artemis is a known softie and couldn't put the little one through that."

"It doesn't matter, let's start with those five and if they dared to stop in my path, I wouldn't mind adding them to the list," Felix remarked.

"You make it sound like you already have the other five in the bag." Lord Shiva humbled him with an indifferent tone, "Do you have a plan in mind to take one of them at least?"

"No, not yet," Felix replied with a deep frown.

He wanted to both establish a connection with Asna and take down a unigin or two. But both situations required some serious planning and at the moment, he didn't have much.

He could see a small line to achieve both missions during the Celestial Ceremony, but at the same time, he couldn't pull it.

In the end, he placed the planning in the back of his mind and focused on improving his strength and foundation first.

Without the necessary strength, even if he had the plan ready, he wouldn't have what it took to pull it off.

Now, that he had somehow gotten 'closer' with Lilith during their last conversation, he had less of a struggle to request her assistance in mastering the true potential of his sins' laws.

Lilith merely showed a faint smirk, like she had expected him to cave in eventually.

Although she knew that his vengeful thoughts towards her hadn't changed, she wasn't too bothered by it.

"Come down here." She said.

Upon entering Asna's core, Felix noticed Lilith sitting on the floor. Her robe was slightly raised, revealing some of her inner thighs.

Felix walked forward and sat across from each other...The atmosphere was heavy with anticipation, as Lilith prepared to delve into the depths of the sins laws.

"Felix," Lilith began, her voice low and imbued with a gravity that demanded attention, unlike her usual playfulness, "You have only begun to scratch the surface of the sins laws' true potential...These laws are not just tools for battle; they are a reflection of the deepest, most primal aspects of existence itself."

Lilith leaned forward, ensuring Felix grasped the significance of her words. "The true terror of the sins laws lies in their ability to manipulate and control the very essence of desire."

Felix and the tenants couldn't help but nod their heads in agreement with solemn looks. The notion of the seven sins laws being restricted by some symbols' effects didn't sit well with them.

In their minds, the ruler of the seven sins should rule anyone and anything with a tint of desire in their system.

For example, the three rulers weren't pure desireless beings...They sought their freedom and would do anything to make it happen. That alone should speak volumes of their intense emotions related to this issue and how Felix should have the possibility to manipulate it to his advantage.

However, he had gone through all the unlocked symbols after he ascended, and there was nothing there that was powerful enough to work on them.

Lilith's gaze held Felix's, ensuring he comprehended the weight of her next words.

"You have ascended into the paragon of sins, but in reality, you became a mere starter unigin with basic understanding and access to your powers. You think the 25 million BF, some inner enhancement, and those unlocked symbols are everything?"

"Not even close. Unigins are just like any other being with powers...The universe bestows the tools and we are left to use them within its allowed confinement." Lilith remarked calmly, "We also invent, learn, master, fail, and sometimes succeed in utilizing our laws."

"In your case, you haven't inherited anything I have achieved in my peak, you merely inherited the standardized basics of my laws, and the same must have happened during your second ascension." She chuckled, "You might have created a star, but try to condense a thousand of them at once and see what happens."

In other words, even if he had defeated Hephaestus and obtained his powers, there was no way he was going to show the same level of prowess as Hephaestus in terms of utilizing the fire laws.

He would battle to even condense a couple of stars without having them explode in his face on the first attempt.

"I have always assumed this. Being a unigin means having the freedom to control the laws as you please, and I have yet to experience this with my laws." Felix nodded in understanding, "It's good I have a confirmation at last."

"If you are implying the freedom to manipulate sins just like void energy, fire, or such, then you will be gravely disappointed." Lilith shook her head, "Seven sins are bound by symbols and that's their limitation imposed on them by the universe. You can not manipulate the desires of beings in your realm or above directly without symbols...Just like Eris' limitation is the order and chaos tome."

Before Felix could feel disappointed to hear this, Lilith continued, "However, you have the potential to create new sin symbols, each embodying an aspect effect of sin not yet explored."

"New symbols? How?" Felix leaned forward, intrigued.

The concept of crafting a new sin symbol was both daunting and electrifying.

"It's a feat that requires a profound understanding of desire and its manifestations."

"To create a new symbol, you must first conceptualize a sin that embodies a unique aspect of desire. It's not about replicating what already exists but discovering new depths to the sins that govern our actions...You can even capitalize on your desires to create symbols."

She paused, making sure that Felix comprehended the seriousness of her words before continuing.

"Let's consider an example, a symbol I have long since created called the Reflective Mirror Symbol. This symbol draws upon my desire to turn one's enemies' strengths against them, a reflection of my envy, yet distinct in its application."

Felix absorbed her explanation, the gears turning in his mind as he envisioned the symbol's potential.

"The Reflective Mirror Symbol," Lilith elaborated, "Creates a mirror that does more than merely reflect. It captures any ability directed towards it and reflects a copy. It can even create a copy for the user's utilization."

"For real?!"

"That's too good!"

"Any ability?! Can he copy abilities related to Eris and other upper celestial unigins?"

This symbol alone was enough to blow everyone's minds off...All of them comprehended the significance of being able to copy other unigins' abilities.

While they knew some conditions must be fulfilled for the symbol to work, having a possibility was better than none.

"So, the process of creation involves not just the power, but the intent, the desire behind the symbol?"

"Exactly," Lilith affirmed. "It's about embodying a concept so deeply that it materializes into a symbol. You must ponder on the essence of the new sin, focusing your desires and energies until they coalesce into a symbol."

She leaned back, giving Felix a moment to digest the information. "This can be simple and difficult depending on your intelligence since it requires introspection and a deep dive into the nature of sin and desire. But with your unique journey and experiences, you are in a prime position to explore this path."

Felix sat in contemplation, the idea of creating new symbols sparked a myriad of possibilities. However, he comprehended that this couldn't be all.

Creating new symbols was great and all, but Lilith couldn't have antagonized the entire kingdom with just some new symbols.

There must be something else, something more terrifying.

"You must be wondering if there is anything else." Lilith chuckled after reading him like a book.

Felix gave a head nod with a solemn expression. "Well, is there?"

"How about this? If you manage to create a new symbol in the next year, I will tell you what's next." Lilith smiled as she offered him a challenge.

"Fine by me."

Felix agreed to it without much complaint...He stood up and turned around, planning to take a hike.

He already had plans to focus wholeheartedly on finding out more about those new symbols, plus exploring his new heat-related laws...A year was enough time to work on them.

Alas, if only Lilith wasn't too much of a playful succubus...

"By the way, you aren't allowed to create symbols I have already invented." She giggled as she eyed Felix's shoulders tense from the back after he heard her ludicrous statement.

Slowly and deliberately, Felix turned his head until his twitching face was in front of Lilith's. Then, he asked with a forced smile, "You joking, right?"

"Nope."

Chapter 1666 Exploring The True Potential of Seven The Sins Laws. II

A couple of days later...Inside a castle made out of the world eater's symbiotic skin, Felix could be seen sitting on the floor of his throne chamber.

He had his eyes closed, delving deep into the concept of greed, contemplating its multifaceted nature.

He recognized greed as a force that drove beings to amass power, wealth, and resources beyond their needs, often at the expense of others. Yet, he also considered greed's potential to inspire ambition, motivation, and the pursuit of excellence.

"The duality of greed," Felix murmured, "it's a source of destruction, yet also a catalyst for growth and achievement."

This dichotomy, the destructive and constructive faces of greed, became the foundation of his meditations in the past days.

Hours passed as Felix remained in deep contemplation, his mind weaving through the intricate tapestry of desire that greed represented.

Slowly, an idea began to crystallize, an insight into how greed could be harnessed in a new, controlled manner.

"I'll call it the Avarice Amplifier Symbol," Felix decided, his voice echoing softly in the throne chamber.

The symbol he envisioned would embody the dual nature of greed, enhancing the user's abilities by amplifying their desire for power!

However, this amplification would come with a caveat; it would require the user to consciously balance their ambition with the risk of being consumed by their greed.

In a sense, it was a perfect symbol, with the right limitations to allow the universe to permit its existence.

After all, without the universe's approval, new symbols couldn't be added.

"The symbol won't only boost my strength, speed, or capabilities in proportion to my greed but also test my ability to manage the intensified desires it invoked," Felix remarked.

In other words, the greater the user's ambition, the more significant the enhancement, but succumbing to greed's destructive aspect could lead to a loss of control, making the symbol a double-edged sword.

With the concept fully formed in his mind, Felix began the intricate process of manifesting the symbol...He was already taught the process by Lilith.

He extended his hands, focusing his energy and intent on the space before him.

Slowly, a glowing greed fox sigil began to take shape, its lines and curves swirling into existence, embodying the essence of greed's potential and peril.

As the Avarice Amplifier Symbol solidified, Felix felt a surge of satisfaction.

He had not only created a new sin symbol but also encapsulated a fundamental truth of existence within it, the balance between ambition and restraint, the fine line between achieving greatness and falling into ruin!

"You did it?" Thor raised an eyebrow in surprise, "Wasn't it a bit too easy?"

"It was never hard in the first place." Lady Sphinx replied calmly, "All he needs is a logical concept that utilizes his laws' and the universe's approval. With those two conditions, a new symbol would come to life."

"Ignore him, he is just used to how difficult it was for us to create every single damn ability." J?rmungandr chuckled with a bitter look.

The difference was indeed a bit too much, but it was understandable...Unigins operated in a different field than primogenitors when it came to manipulation.

How could the owners of laws be taught anything or struggle to learn or master something? As long as the conditions were fulfilled for the creation of their abilities, they would come to life.

Nothing more, nothing less...

"Good symbol, unfortunately, I have already invented a replica, which I call, Insatiable Infusion Symbol," Lilith called out lazily.

"Tsk." Felix clicked his tongue in annoyance.

He already anticipated that Lilith would have created the same symbol since it wasn't really that complex or unique.

Still, he dreaded the thought of her creating every possible and known symbol in existence, making it an impossible mission to invent something new.

Ka-thumb!!

Suddenly, with a wide smile, Nimo kicked open the door to the throne chamber.

"Daddy! I want play!"

"Little god, you can't disturb the lord's work!"

The Ruiner came chasing after Nimo with an exhausted expression like he would rather deal with an army of ten thousand royal dragons than handle Nimo.

"It's alright, Ruiner," Felix said with a faint smile as he caught Nimo in his embrace.

"My apologies, my lord, I have tried my best to teach him combat, but he refuses to stay still in one place." The Ruiner sighed, "You already know we can't force him or resist his commands."

"Why were you making trouble?" Felix gave Nimo a scolding look.

Felix had assigned The Ruiner to teach Nimo early after he realized that he was growing a bit too fast and was losing control over his strength.

Just yesterday, he beat up two void citizens to a pulp after they were assigned as play dates.

Yet, because Nimo was considered born out of his soul, he also possessed god-like domination over the void citizens, which he abused to get out of his classes.

"I want play with you..." Nimo said with a sorrowful soft voice.

"Is that so?" Felix's tone softened a bit.

If he wasn't in the process of recovering his soul to its peak, he would have created a clone and used it to spend some quality time with Nimo while he was working on other matters.

But, he couldn't do this for quite a while and Felix didn't want to shut himself from Nimo, knowing that no one could handle him but him.

'I can do both.'

"Alright, let's play." Felix ordered, "Ruiner, you may leave."

The Ruiner bowed his head and took off swiftly like he was scared Felix would change his mind.

"Nimo, ready yourself," Felix instructed as he threw Nimo away from him, his voice firm yet encouraging.

Nimo did a backflip and landed on the ground, resembling a miniature version of Felix with his curious eyes and determined stance.

"Ready, Daddy!"

He nodded vigorously, his tiny fists raised in readiness.

Whoosh!! Whoosh!!

As they began to move, Felix's movements were deliberate, each strike and maneuver designed to test Nimo's reflexes and adaptability.

Nimo, for his part, was eager, trying to mimic Felix's techniques with varying degrees of success, his youthful exuberance making up for his lack of finesse.

Still, between the exchanges, Felix's mind wandered to the new symbol he had created.

Thud!! Boom!! Thud!!

Right now, each block and counter he executed was mirrored by thoughts on how the symbol's power could be both an incredible asset and a formidable challenge to its wielder.

Felix decided to use it as a learning lesson for Nimo as he wanted to shape his personality the opposite of Lilith's.

"Nimo, greed can drive us to surpass our limits," Felix mused aloud, "but unchecked, it can also lead us to our downfall."

Nimo, panting slightly from the effort, paused to consider Felix's words.

"Like fighting?" He asked, tilting his head in confusion. "You know when push and when hold back?"

Felix smiled, impressed by Nimo's quick grasp of the concept.

"Exactly," He replied, launching a gentle offensive that Nimo managed to dodge with surprising agility. "In combat and inside wielding the sins, balance is key. You must always be aware of your desires, channeling them to empower you without letting them take control."

As the spar continued, Felix subtly incorporated a varying intensity of his attacks to simulate Nimo's growth.

He found out before that Nimo was capable of utilizing both the seven sins laws plus void laws as long as he was taught how.

In this spar, Felix tried his best to teach him the new symbol he had created, by either incorporating the concept or utilizing it in front of him.

Nimo, absorbing every lesson, started to understand not merely the physical aspects of combat but too the deeper implications of wielding power responsibly.

After multiple attempts, even when he was extremely young plus barely capable of proper speech, Nimo managed to learn the Avarice Amplifier Symbol and use it inside combat!

Chapter 1667 Exploring The True Potential of Seven The Sins Laws. III

"That's the one."

Felix praised as he watched a fox-like green aura surrounding Nimo while the symbol itself was manifested above his head.

"Show me what you got!"

Whoosh! Whoosh!!

As they commenced their spar, Felix could sense a change in Nimo. The boy's usual calculated approach was replaced by a more aggressive and reckless style.

With each successful block and counter, Nimo's confidence surged, fueled by the symbol's power!

His eyes, a vivid shade of green, betrayed the influence of the Avarice Amplifier Symbol, its power enhancing his physical capabilities in real-time, reflecting his growing desire for strength and victory!

Nimo's attacks became faster, stronger, and more unpredictable. The air around him seemed to crackle with raw energy, each strike carrying the weight of his burgeoning greed for power!

'Interesting, the enhancement was extraordinary, but the influence on the mind is too much.'

Felix, observing the transformation, recognized the signs of the symbol's darker influence.

Nimo's technique was devolving into something wild, uncontrolled, and barbaric, far removed from the disciplined approach he had been taught.

Thuud!!!

Felix parried another wildly thrown punch, stepping back to gauge Nimo's condition.

"Nimo, focus!" He called out, attempting to break through the haze of greed clouding his judgment.

"Fol Victolly!!!!"

But Nimo seemed lost to the symbol's allure, his attacks growing more frenzied with each passing moment...Even his speech was hindered greatly.

With a swift motion, Felix disengaged, putting some distance between them.

"Nimo, stop!" He commanded, his voice imbued with enough force to momentarily break through Nimo's frenzied state. "Look at yourself. This isn't what I have just taught you."

Nimo paused, his breathing heavy, as the green in his eyes began to fade.

The realization of his loss of control dawned on him, the wildness in his gaze giving way to confusion and then to shame.

He looked down at his hands, as if seeing them for the first time, the symbol's glow dimming with his waning aggression.

"Sorry, daddy! I sorry..."

The notion of disappointing his father brought tears to his eyes.

Felix wiped his tears and said with a gentle tone, "The Avarice Amplifier Symbol is a powerful tool, but it demands respect and restraint. Greed, unchecked, can lead to ruin. Today, you learned that power must be wielded with wisdom, not just desire...This applies to everything."

Nimo nodded, the lesson etched deeply in his mind.

"I... I didn't realize. sorry,"

Felix smiled faintly, recognizing the value in the lesson learned. "It's alright, this is part of your journey. Understanding your desires and learning to master them is as important as any physical training."

For Felix, this was a reminder of his responsibility as a mentor and a father, guiding Nimo not just towards physical prowess but towards becoming a balanced and wise wielder of the sins laws.

He acknowledged that the seven sins laws were capable of ruining someone's personality, leading him down a horrible path if misused.

He was an adult when he ascended and still found it difficult to control his desires sometimes...Don't even mention a child with a blank slate.

Thus, Felix didn't hold back in his teachings.

Sometime later...

"You did well today, Nimo," Felix said, pride evident in his voice.

"Daddy most powerful!" Nimo beamed, his respect for his father deepening after each spar.

"I still have to get much stronger to save your mother." Felix said as he touched him on the head, "So, go spend some time with Candace until I am done with work."

"I help Daddy save Mommy!" Nimo proclaimed with his fangs protruding in anger.

"You already helped me enough today."

Felix meant every word as he had managed to deepen his understanding of the creation of new symbols through their spar.

After some other reassuring words, Nimo took off with a wide smile and a glimmer of excitement in his eyes, seeking to show Candace and the rest what he learned.

"Phew, children sure are a handful." Felix chuckled to himself as he returned to his seated position.

"Avarice Amplifier seemed to have enhanced Nimo's strength by 20% or even 30% before he started losing control." Lady Sphinx analyzed, "You might receive a much bigger enhancement."

"Let's test it out."

As Felix activated the symbol, a vibrant, fox-like aura enveloped him, its ethereal tails swirling around his form like flames.

He could feel the surge of strength coursing through his veins, each muscle fiber tensing with newfound vigor.

His senses sharpened, the world around him coming into focus with unprecedented clarity. The power was intoxicating, seductive in its intensity!

+10%...+20%...+30%...+40%...+50%!

With every passing second, Felix felt the boost in his strength, agility, and elemental prowess climbing, reaching a staggering +50% all-rounded enhancement!

But with this ascension came a barrage of greedy thoughts, whispering promises of endless power and urging him to seek more, always more. Why stop here? Imagine what you could achieve with even greater strength... You could reshape the world, bend it to your will... No one could stand against you...

Those thoughts assaulted him nonstop, causing Felix to struggle to maintain his focus, the symbol's influence tugging at the edges of his mind, tempting him to succumb to the greed that powered it.

He could feel the fox-like aura pulsing, its glow intensifying with his growing desires.

Gritting his teeth, Felix fought against the tide of greed, reminding himself of the symbol's true cost.

He knew that yielding to these desires would only lead to his downfall, ensnaring him in a cycle of insatiable hunger for power that could never be satisfied!

'Enough is enough!'

With a Herculean effort, Felix reined in the greedy thoughts, the fox-

like aura beginning to dissipate as he regained control.

Huff huff...

Breathing heavily, he took a moment to reflect on the experience.

"It's indeed a potent symbol, but wielding it required an unimaginable level of discipline and mental fortitude.." Felix commented while wiping his sweaty forehead.

"It seems like 40% to 50% is your current limitation." Lady Sphinx remarked.

"If utilized with his other enhancement symbols, like I am Supreme, Rampage, and such, the boost will be much deadlier," Thor added.

"I doubt it." Felix shook his head, "Don't forget that my other enhancing symbols require conditions and have their limitations. I can't defend I am supreme symbol if I am fighting against my thoughts and the rampage symbol already messes with my mind a bit through rage. I can't add greed too in a critical battle that requires complete concentration."

In other words, Felix acknowledged that if he went and decided to stack up all the enhancement symbols at once, the side effects would also stack up and might ruin his battle.

"If only there was a way to combine the symbols into a much more potent symbol to limit the drawbacks," Felix murmured.

Upon saying this, his gaze quickly shifted towards Lilith. He observed a faint smile on her lips, which she quickly concealed.

"You...Is this the next level you were talking about?" Felix asked with an eager look.

He had already tried to combine and merge symbols before through willing it, but the symbols refused to budge. He gave up on the thought, believing that it might be impossible.

But now? Knowing that Lilith verified there was a next level of sins manipulation, he had to revisit this idea.

Alas, Lilith merely shrugged her shoulders as a response, "Beats me."

Felix's eyelids twitched...He understood that Lilith had no intentions of helping him explore the next level of manipulation unless he succeeded in the challenge.

At least, he was now confident that merging symbols was a viable option.

"Let's continue with the creation of the symbols." Felix held his chin thoughtfully, "What's next? Should I try to merge the heat-based sins with a sin? I might be able to create a whole new symbol."

Chapter 1668 Exploring The True Potential of Seven The Sins Laws. IV

Felix discerned that the only way for him to create a new symbol was to think out of the box and utilize assets that Lilith had no access to.

Otherwise, even if he spent the next million years developing one symbol after another, he would never be able to invent something new.

Lilith had billions of years to develop symbols while he had only a decade...It wasn't happening.

"Since Hephaestus's core was merged with the wrathful hydra dragon head, then I believe there must be a path to merge those laws in a symbol." Lady Sphinx supported Felix's theory.

"They are quite compatible with each other." Elder Kraken nodded.

Felix also recognized the compatibility between those laws and decided to start simple and explore them.

"Fire essence."

Felix's focus was absolute as he called forth the essence of fire, feeling the scorching blue flames swirl around him, a dance of potential destruction waiting for direction.

Then, he invoked a Wrath Symbol dubbed Dragon's Fury, causing a manifestation of a massive crimson dragon to emerge above him.

This dragon was utilized as an offensive attack instead of boosting Felix's strength. Felix wanted to use it multiple times in his previous battles, but, there were always better options.

"Are you planning to merge the dragon with fire essence?" Thor inquired.

"Yes."

Felix extended his hands, palms up, as the ethereal blue fire danced between his fingers, casting a surreal glow over his determined features.

"Fuse..."

With a whispered incantation, Felix released the essence towards the dragon.

The air around them tensed, charged with anticipation, as the blue flames met the dragon's crimson form.

For a moment, time seemed to stand still, the world holding its breath as the fusion commenced.

The transformation was instantaneous and awe-inspiring!

The dragon's scales took on a new luster, a vibrant display of reds and blues mingling to invent a spectacle of living flame.

Roaarr!!

With a mighty roar, the creature unleashed a torrent of fire from its maw, a blaze that illuminated the darkness of space.

Yet, as the flames died down, a look of dissatisfaction crossed Felix's face.

The dragon, for all its newfound power and the spectacle of its fire, did not meet his expectations.

It was a creature of flame, yes, capable of spewing fire that could melt stone and scorch the earth, but to Felix, it lacked... more.

It was merely a beast of fire, not the embodiment of the elemental fury and profound depth he had envisioned.

"I wanted more than just fire," Felix murmured to himself, his voice barely audible over the crackling of residual flames. "I seek a dragon capable of feeding off both wrath and fire in tandem, allowing it to transcend its original form. This... this is just a dragon with fire."

"Then, you have to create a new symbol from scratch with those two laws as its foundation." Lady Sphinx suggested.

"It's the only way I see forward." Felix nodded in agreement.

While the dragon and his fire were merged, it was on a surface level, like $1+1=2$...What Felix desired and aimed to achieve was more than that.

'How do I achieve it though? Should I use the same conceptualization process?' Felix tapped his finger on his chin thoughtfully.

At the moment, he could only rely on the same method he used to create his new symbol.

He dove into the depths of his mind and began pondering on the essence of wrath and fire, feeling their fiery pulse within the core of his being.

'Wrath is more than just anger; it is a forceful call to action, a powerful response to injustice and injury that demands release...Meanwhile, fire has a dual nature of creation and destruction. It is the reflection of life itself, capable of nurturing warmth and devastating conflagration...It is uncontrollable, wild, and a symbol of passion and change.'

'The merging of wrath sin and fire law into a single concept is predicated on their shared attributes of power, transformation, and unrestrained energy.' Felix continued brainstorming, 'Both concepts deal with the idea of an uncontrollable force that, once unleashed, follows its nature toward a climactic release. Wrath, with its focus on emotional energy and desire for action, aligns perfectly with fire's capacity for physical transformation and its role as a catalyst for change.'

The more Felix familiarized himself with the commonalities between the two laws, the easier it became for him to visualize a concept that would encompass them both.

As he kept diving into his thoughts, Felix managed to come up with a logical concept amidst the sea of theories...It wasn't related to dragons or such, but at the moment, he only wanted to invent a new symbol, regardless of its effect.

'What if there was a symbol that's capable of receiving amplification of emotional energy, where my anger would feed the flames, granting them strength beyond measure?'

'Thus, the angrier I get, the more potent the flames become, embodying the idea that wrath, when directed, can serve as a powerful motivator and weapon.' Felix reasoned.

He soon shared his thoughts with the tenants and all of them seemed to agree with his take.

"Anger used to amplify fire-based attacks...Interesting." Ancestral Dragon Imyr remarked, "It's more or less close to our innate ability of which we turn our anger into strength. But, this will be exclusively focused on heat-based laws."

"It's even better, I can make the symbol simultaneously transform the heat resulting from my anger to feed into it." Felix added, "This will provide me with a incessant supply of rage."

"You mean like an infinite cycle of anger/heat reproduction?" Thor raised an eyebrow in surprise, "If this works, then you will be provided with incessant fuel to empower your heat-based attacks."

"Let's see if the universe approves of the concept."

With a determined breath, Felix reached out to the wrath and fire energies that danced at the edge of his consciousness.

Then, he visualized a wrath-based empty symbol...It had only borders and the dragon in the middle. The inscriptions weren't there yet.

Next, he started feeding both energies into the symbol while simultaneously using the concept in his mind to guide the universe into the symbol creation.

It was like he was telling the universe what he wanted from the symbol, its powers, its drawbacks, its duration, etc.

The universe was the cook, using the provided ingredients to see if it was possible for a decent dish to emerge or not.

With held breath, Felix waited for the universe's judgment...After a split second that seemed like an eternity, the universe responded at last.

With a beam of light that only Felix could see, inscriptions began to manifest near the borders of the symbol and spread out until they touched the central crimson dragon.

"It worked." Felix shared with a pleased smile as he brought the sigil to life before everyone.

"Wow, it's quite different."

The tenants had looks of surprise as they gazed at the new symbol.

The crimson dragon was now wearing a scruff of flames while half of the inscriptions were written with liquid fire.

It also glowed with intense heat, which created heat waves around it, causing the dragon to seem alive from a distance.

It was like the universe had recognized the uniqueness of the symbol and gave it the appropriate appearance!

"Weird...The universe hasn't clapped like always." Candace murmured as she glanced above her head.

When she brought up this matter, everyone realized that a thunderclap was the usual whenever Felix did something for the first time with massive implications. Merging two separated rules into one symbol warranted a reaction in their eyes.

Unless...

Everyone swiftly turned to gaze at Lilith with stunned expressions.

"You, have you already created a symbol by merging void rules with sin laws?" Felix asked what was in everyone's minds.

"Maybe? I don't recall." Lilith replied lazily while stretching her beautiful legs before them, "A leg massage might help me recollect."

Chapter 1669 Exploring The True Potential of Seven The Sins Laws. V

Felix and the others ignored her teasing and engaged in a discussion, knowing that her reaction was enough of an agreement.

"I thought only Felix could merge laws for symbols since his wrathful hydra tail possessed both laws?" Candace wondered.

"Following your reasoning, this also gives Lilith and Felix the ability to combine void laws with sin laws since they own both of them." Lady Sphinx said, "Hydra tails made it somewhat easier for the merge to happen, I give you that."

Felix and the rest nodded in understanding...In their eyes, it would be illogical for him to possess the merging capabilities, but not Lilith, even though she also commanded two separate laws.

"What can void law get us if merged with sins laws?" J?rmungandr asked.

Everyone dove deeper into their thoughts, seeking to find some sort of compatibility between the laws to invent a reasonable concept.

After a few moments, Fenrir was the first to propose, "Maybe something like combining gluttony's excessive consumption with the void's ability to swallow everything into nothingness? It could manifest as a maw that devours all in its path, never satisfied, reflecting gluttony's endless appetite and the void's capacity to contain infinitely."

It was like instead of creating an ability that could either absorb or disintegrate, he would combine both aspects into a symbol that could devour all matter and disintegrate it!

"Hmmm, sounds reasonable enough." Felix asked, "Should I give it a try?"

"Why not?"

Now that Felix had succeeded in combining fire law with wrath law, he felt more comfortable with the thought of messing around with other variations.

Plus, it wasn't like he had anything to lose...If the universe didn't approve of the symbol's existence, he would not get punished or harmed.

With a deep, focused breath, Felix closed his eyes, his mind reaching out to the elemental energies and sin laws he intended to weave together.

He envisioned the essence of Gluttony, as not merely the desire for excessive consumption but a deeper, more primal hunger that could never be satisfied, always seeking, always wanting more.

Then, he summoned the concept of the Void, an endless expanse of nothingness capable of swallowing worlds, leaving behind a silence as profound as it was absolute.

In the space of his mind, Felix brought these two forces together, imagining a symbol that could embody both the relentless hunger of Gluttony and the erasing power of the Void.

He saw a maw, vast and insatiable, a gateway to oblivion where all things, once consumed, ceased to exist, their essence absorbed into the endless emptiness.

As the concept of Gluttony's Maw took shape in his mind, Felix reached out with his will, offering this new fusion of laws to the universe for approval.

It was a moment of profound vulnerability, a submission to the cosmos's judgment, acknowledging that for all his power, he was but a part of a greater whole.

The universe responded.

A symbol materialized before him, complex and ever-shifting, its lines and curves inscribing the laws of Gluttony and Void into existence!

The symbol glowed with a hungry light, its presence both a promise and a warning: here was a power that could consume worlds but at the risk of being consumed by the very hunger it wielded!

Felix opened his eyes, gazing upon Gluttony's Maw with a mixture of awe and satisfaction.

"This is fun...I can do this all day." He commented with a wide grin.

He felt like he was playing a game instead of training.

If there was one thing he hated the most about his elemental manipulations was the amount of repetitive training he had to do for the sake of learning a single ability.

It was too much hard work for something unigins and the celestials could achieve with a mere snap of a finger. It wasn't fair in the slightest.

Now, he was enjoying the process of 'training' as all he needed to do was brainstorm a reasonable concept and let the universe take the wheel, allowing him more time to train on utilizing the symbols and assimilate them into his fighting style.

"Not bad, what will you call them?" Lilith asked with a faint smile.

"Let's keep it simple, Gluttony's Maw and Infernal Wrath." Felix decided.

"I thought you would call them All Devouring Pig and In Heat symbols...Looks like your naming sense has improved a bit." Thor chuckled with the others.

"My naming sense wasn't that bad." Felix's eyelids twitched, "You are reaching."

"Are we though?" Candace giggled while covering her mouth, "Try to recall."

Felix was forced to revisit those memories and realize that without Asna to set him straight, he would have ruined Nimo's life and many others with the worst names known in existence.

"Cough, anyways, I think it's time to try those symbols."

Felix swiftly dipped from the conversation and his throne chamber, emerging above the world eater's massive head.

'Let's start with Infernal Wrath.'

With a deep breath, Felix extended his hand, palm facing the nothingness, as he summoned the nascent symbol into existence.

The air around him shimmered with heat, a prelude to the fusion of elemental fury and emotional tempest that was about to be unleashed.

As the symbol appeared, Felix felt a connection to the forces it represented. It was a blend of his wrath and the boundless energy of fire, intertwining in a complex pattern, glowing with intense crimson light.

'I have to get angry first.'

Activating the Inferno Wrath Symbol required not just a mere thought, but an invocation of his deepest reserves of anger and determination.

Felix focused on the injustices he had faced, the battles fought, and the challenges overcome.

With each memory, the symbol pulsed brighter, its energy syncing with the rising tide of his emotions.

As the fusion of wrath and fire took hold, Felix's body became the epicenter of a palpable surge of power!

The symbol's effect was immediate and electrifying.

His veins thrummed with enhanced strength, his senses heightened to an unparalleled degree.

Then, with a force of will that bordered on the primal, he channeled this burgeoning power into the creation of a star core!

The process, typically slow and demanding, was accelerated under the influence of the Inferno Wrath Symbol!

Above his outstretched hand, particles of energy began to coalesce, drawing together with a speed and intensity that Felix had never before achieved.

The space crackled and sparked as the emerging star core took shape, a radiant orb of pulsing energy that bathed the vacuum of space in a harsh, unnatural light!

"I can feel it...Its intensity is nowhere the same as the last one." Felix remarked as he was having difficulty maintaining the core's stability.

It was difficult to control as it fed off his anger, growing more powerful without him doing anything.

This was not just any star core; it was a concentrated nexus of raw cosmic power, a miniature sun that could fuel life or bring about devastation.

It was no toy!

Since Felix was still a rookie in utilizing Hepheastus' laws and had no one to teach him the proper ways to deal with such primal force, he realized that it would blow in his face if he didn't cancel it!

While it wouldn't do anything to him, the same couldn't be said about his people. Yet, Felix had no intentions of canceling it.

He showed an excited grin as he pulled back his hand and released a punch, his fist connecting with the star core with accuracy and force that belied the vacuum's quiet!

The impact sent aftershocks rippling through the void, a display of power that bent the very fabric of existence around it!

The star core, subjected to Felix's might, was hurled into the distance, trailing a comet's tail of energy.

It tumbled end over end, a captive to the momentum of Felix's strike, moving further and further away into the dark expanse!

Then, the star's core exploded, creating a supernova with the intensity of ten stars combined!!!

Brilliant light flooded space, casting shadows where light had never before existed.

"How do you feel?" Lady Sphinx asked as she watched the supernova continue expanding rapidly.

"Cold and hot, constantly," Felix replied with a deep frown.

He could sense his temperature rising and falling rapidly after his initial anger was consumed to fuel the star's creation.

It was like the symbol was forcefully trying to create more fuel by using Felix's body temperature to transfer it into usable anger.

The feeling wasn't pleasant in the slightest since his own emotions and body temperature were being messed up unnaturally.

This made Felix realize that he might have messed up big time!

"The devil is in the details." Lilith chuckled.

Chapter 1670 Exploring The True Potential of Seven The Sins Laws. VI

The moment Felix heard her comment, he canceled the symbol. His emotions and body temperature returned to normal again.

"You mean to tell me that bad-quality symbols can be created? Symbols that affect the user negatively more than positively?" Felix frowned.

"Just because you have a reasonable concept and the universe has approved it, it doesn't mean that the symbol will be great," Lilith remarked lazily, "You have to focus on the details the most since the universe follows the symbol's creation based on what you provided it down to the letter."

"I see..."

Felix assumed that the universe would iron out the rest of the concept during the symbol's creation, but he couldn't be more wrong.

"The universe is like a programming software that requires as much data as possible to create the desired symbol without too many drawbacks." Lady Sphinx said.

"Indeed." Felix nodded, "The Infernal Wrath symbol doesn't care about how it achieves the infinite reproduction of heat/anger and this caused me great discomfort. I should have been more precise in how I wanted it to occur, when it should stop, its intensity, and the list goes on."

"Is it possible to modify it or you must create a new one from scratch?" Thor wondered.

Everyone turned to Lilith.

"You can't modify it." Lilith replied casually, "To create a new one, you must erase the old one first."

When Felix heard this, he closed his eyes and willed for the Infernal Wrath symbol to be removed from his arsenal. The symbol soon disintegrated into particles and disappeared from his mind.

Then, he started a new creation process and this time he made sure to add as many details as possible to ensure a much greater quality.

In a few moments, a new similar but more dignified symbol manifested before Felix. Everyone could recognize the difference instantly as the new symbol had more inscriptions written on it until they seemed clamped up.

Then, he tested it out again and this time Felix felt like he could control the intensity of the transfer between heat and anger.

This was such a massive quality-of-life change, that he no longer felt uncomfortable and could focus more on utilizing the newly created fuel in his heat-based attacks.

"This is much better than before." Felix said with a satisfied tone, "I should test Gluttony's Maw too and see what's lacking in it."

Felix went and tested the symbol...He soon realized that it had its faults too that could be solved. He erased it and created a new improved one.

This kind of modification was possible only for small details, not major drawbacks, such as the penalties in Clash of Pride, I am Supreme, etc.

Unfortunately, those penalties were one of Felix's current hurdles in his growth as he knew that no matter how great a symbol was, it would be near impossible to use a dozen of them at the same time without suffering from their side effects.

This was one of the many reasons he could not utilize many other symbols during his battles.

Thus, he understood that his current priority wasn't even to create new symbols, but to find a way to either get rid of the penalties or at least reduce their intensity.

Fortunately, there was a method.

"I have succeeded in creating a new symbol that you couldn't have invented," Felix said calmly as he showed a small manifestation of the Infernal Wrath symbol before Lilith. "So? What's next?"

"So hasty." Lilith yawned in annoyance as she lay near the pool akin to a dead fish, "Can't we leave it for tomorrow or something?"

Felix remained staring at her with an unfazed expression, making her comprehend that he wanted to know now.

"Fiiiiine, get down here." She permitted as she rolled her eyes in vexation.

Felix sent his consciousness to Asna's core and went straight to sit in front of Lilith, who was already awaiting him with an annoyed look.

"Don't bother me again after this," Lilith warned.

"Fine by me," Felix replied with a tint of eagerness in his voice.

"Above symbols is something I call, Sin-Symbolic Techniques. Combining symbols into a singular, more potent form is the essence of creating Sin-Symbolic Techniques," She began, her eyes gleaming with the wisdom of eons. "It's not merely about stacking effects; it's an art. You must weave them together, ensuring harmony among the symbols to amplify their strengths and mitigate their weaknesses."

'Sin-Symbolic Techniques...This is it! This is the good stuff!'

Felix listened intently, his mind racing with possibilities.

The idea of merging symbols to create techniques of unparalleled power was tantalizing, promising a new horizon in his mastery over the sins and laws he had come to command.

He understood that if it was possible to combine seven symbols from seven different sins and even add other laws into the mix, a monstrosity of ability would be brought to life!

This was the true power of the seven sins and only now could Felix see a way for Lilith to rival Eris and other upper celestial unigins!

"To illustrate," Lilith continued, conjuring a spiritual projection between them to aid the explanation. "Consider the Veil of Pride Technique. It's a masterful blend of the Indomitable Will Symbol and Hunger Symbol. On their own, each symbol has its strengths and vulnerabilities."

The projection morphed, showing two symbols spiraling toward each other, their lines and curves dancing in a predestined embrace.

"When merged," She said, watching Felix's reaction, "They create a technique that not only protects the user with a cloak of self-esteem but also feeds on the user's achievements. This cloak becomes stronger with every accomplishment, turning the user's very successes into a bastion against attacks."

Felix watched, fascinated as the symbols combined into a single, intricate symbol that radiated a harmonious energy.

Now, the colors of orange and gold had blended...A unique beast was formed by merging the body of a boar with the head, mane, and tail of a lion!

At first glance, anyone can discern that this was the upgrade as it was bigger and had a dissimilar atmosphere compared to regular symbols.

"But how do you control the drawbacks? Those two merged symbols might not have strong drawbacks like some other symbols, but still." Felix asked with a focused look.

He knew that the Indomitable Will symbol had the drawback of not being able to be utilized for a long period if it was summoned and the user's prideful belief in his invincibility was lacking.

As for Hunger Symbol? The energy absorption offered a temporary increase in power that needed to be constantly fueled with energy to maintain it.

So, it was impossible to get stronger through it unless he was constantly on the move.

While those drawbacks were harmless compared to other severe penalties, they were still annoying to deal with.

"That's where the beauty of Sin-Symbolic Techniques lies," Lilith explained with a faint smile, "By combining these symbols, you create a balance. The insatiable hunger of gluttony is tempered by the achievements that fuel pride's protection. Meanwhile, the potential arrogance of pride is grounded by the tangible necessity to achieve more, to feed the gluttonous aspect. The technique turns potential vices into a source of strength, with each aspect keeping the other in check."

"In essence," Lilith concluded, "you're not merely stacking powers. You're weaving them together into a coherent, self-sustaining cycle. The key is balance, understanding how the sins interact, complement, and regulate each other."

"It makes sense now."

Felix and the rest of the tenants were left with raised eyebrows in astonishment and astonishment at the masterful method Lilith came up with to get rid of the drawbacks.

It might seem simple, but it was anything but that.

They understood that to find out such an intricate balance between those symbols required an intense level of understanding and insight about the aspects of sins and desires.

That's why Lilith said that understanding said desires was the key to becoming the paragon of sins, not by ascension, but by achievements!

"If you commenced on this, your path to greatness will be hindered only by your intelligence and level of understanding." Lilith excused him with a wave, "Now, beat it."
