

Supremacy 1841

Chapter 1841 A New Vision. I

"What's the matter?" Lady Sphinx inquired after noticing Elder Kraken's sudden change in demeanor.

"It's Felix's soul. Somehow, its recovery speed has been doubled."

Elder Kraken informed everyone while he was using his senses to compare the change in Felix's soul barrier.

"Double? Are you serious?"

With such a significant boost, all the tenants could spot the difference in speed the moment they extended their senses outside of Asna's core.

"It's true...How?"

What came into their sight was Felix's peculiar pebble-like soul barrier crossing past the 80% mark in almost no time!

"I have no clue..." Elder Kraken uttered with a solemn tone, not pleased with such a change, "I am afraid this might imply outsiders' interference."

Everyone's expressions turned grim at the sound of that.

"Isn't this good for us?" Candace tilted her head in confusion.

"Who do you think possesses the capabilities to accelerate soul recovery in this universe?"

The moment Candace heard this, chills coursed down her spine after being reminded that not even Elder Kraken was capable of helping a unigin accelerate his soul recovery.

In other words, only celestials could pull it off, which implied only one conclusion.

"Noo...It can't be." Candace covered her mouth in dread, "He can't have been caught..."

"It's too soon to jump to such conclusions." Lady Sphinx frowned as she gazed at the sky, "If he was caught by the three rulers, they should have got rid of us first."

"Yes, we are a mere pest in their eyes," Thor confirmed with a cold tone.

The rest of the primogenitors seemed to agree even though no one was pleased with such a take.

In their eyes, regardless of what the three rulers decided to do with Felix after catching him in such a vulnerable state, there was no point in leaving them alive.

"It must be something else, let's hope it's on our side..." Lady Yggdrasil wished softly.

No matter how hard the tenants would have guessed, they would never arrive at the truth.

The truth was pretty shocking as the Quantaar was accelerating Felix's soul recovery by feeding the Stone of Reality with its own life force!!

It was literally killing itself for the sake of helping Felix be reborn.

An entity Felix interacted with only once when he stepped into Quantaar City and joined the Vibrational Hub...Yet, here it was, showing an immense loyalty to sacrifice itself for his sake like he was its most important treasure.

While the tenants had no way of finding out, it was a different story for the slumbering Felix...

Within Felix's dreams...

Felix could be seen sitting in an empty desolate grass field with many holographic boards in front of him. He seemed to be studying and plotting new ways to take down the three rulers.

As the personification of the sloth law, even when his wisp merged with his soul and he was forced into unconsciousness, he still had control to do whatever he wanted in his dream world.

He decided to use his time here to study and prepare for the biggest conflict of his life. Alas, it seemed like he was absolutely stumped.

"Those monsters have no weakness...As long as they stay in the eternal kingdom near the source of celestial energy, I can't defeat them." Felix sighed.

He wasn't known for believing in the impossible, but he truly could not find a way to deal with them.

He knew that celestial energy was the key to defeating them, but how could he obtain it when the source was monopolized by them? Even Asna's awakening required an immense amount of celestial energy to happen, which meant she needed to be near the source or at least in the eternal kingdom.

"If she got revived and I dared to bring her to the kingdom, they would finish us off before we could take our first step in." Felix massaged his eyelids in helplessness.

Just as he was about to erase everything he wrote on the boards, his eyes thinned out after noticing that the sky of his dreamrealm was being changed on its own!

"Hmmm? What's going on?" Felix stood up with a deep furrow as he stared at his dream world collapsing into a colorful void, where only himself was left floating in nothingness.

"Is this the quantum realm?"

Felix would recognize those colors and this atmosphere anywhere he went as it was unique to the quantum realm.

This intrigued him quite a bit, assuming that maybe the stone of reality was trying to show him another vision.

Without warning, the space in front of Felix started deforming and reshaping until billions of colossal bat-like creatures were born.

Felix failed to recognize them since he had never seen the Quantaar before, but anyone else participating in the war outside would be left utterly stunned.

Just one Quantaar was monstrous enough it pushed Apollo and his army around like it was nothing...Yet, there were billions of them hurdled up, their singular massive eye gazing around in child-like curiosity.

When they noticed Felix, their gaze were left affixed on him, making him feel an undeniable amount of worship and love in them...It was like they were staring at their god, their father, and their everything.

"Why are they staring at me like this?" Felix murmured for a moment before glancing at himself.

To his shock and horror, he found his body to have turned transparent with the seven heavenly cores in it, resembling the featureless consciousness of the universe he had seen before!

However, his head still remained the same with his features on for some reason.

"Am I viewing a vision from the memories of the universe's consciousness?"

Before he could analyze the situation more, he waved his arm once and the billions of Quantaars spread their wings wide and took off in different directions, seemingly traveling with a glorious purpose in mind.

What a purpose it was as Felix watched with his own stunned eyes as those bat-like creatures began to absorb the ambient quantum energy that filled the air, and then used their vibrational control to mold and shape this raw power into something new!

'Am I witnessing the birth of the quantum realm?'

With eyes wide and mind opened to all possibilities, he continued spectating those magnificent behemoths beating their giant wings, releasing waves of vibrations through the colorful void.

Each wave was responsible for the birth of realities where there had been none. Environments emerged, each more diverse and intricate than the last. Lush and breathtaking bizarre worlds sprang up.

Quantum mazes, colossal pieces of peculiar landscapes, endless forests, reversed waterfalls, and more of such unimaginable environments.

But their creation did not stop with mere environments...Life, in its most peculiar and fantastical forms, began to populate these newly formed realities.

Strange and alien lifeforms appeared, some Felix had never seen before, and some he recognized immediately...One of these beings was the Nullvoiders!

Felix soon realized that the first batch of Nullvoiders appeared affixed in their position, facing him. They were nothing but a swirl of anti-matter encased in a void shell, yet he was certain that they seemed to be staring at him.

'Don't tell me...Are those the same that chased me and Apollo back then?' Felix's lips parted in disbelief, remembering his first day in the Quantum Realm.

The Nullvoiders chased after them, but more specifically after him. Apollo assumed that they sensed an abnormal type of energy from Felix, but after seeing this?

Felix came to a whole different theory!

Chapter 1842 A New Vision. II

"Am I still in my dream or was my consciousness transported into the consciousness of the universe?" Felix felt his heart skip a beat at such a revelation.

He knew there was a massive difference between viewing a vision in a dream and being transported back in time to witness matters happening right before his eyes.

He was somewhat certain about this theory because his current facial features were the same ones he entered the quantum realm with.

Thus, if by some holy chance, by some incredible coincidence, he met the same batch of Voidnullers in the past and they remembered his aura or energy until the day they crossed paths!

But, this made him question why did they attack him so vigorously. Didn't they recognize him as their creator?

The answer came sooner than he expected.

He watched speechlessly as the universe consciousness extended his palm at the Nullvoiders and attacked them with a blast of white energy.

Without an ounce of hesitation, the agitated Nullvoiders charged in his direction, seeking retaliation. Alas, with a snap of a finger, the universe's consciousness disappeared.

When Felix opened his eyes again, he found himself staring at the featureless entity from a distance through a peculiar lens.

Yet, he still managed to see a playful smile emerge on the featureless entity before it faded into obscurity.

"Did I just see myself preparing a prank for myself in the future?"

That smile was more than enough to make Felix realize that his old self had set up a playful deadly prank, knowing exactly that he would meet up with the same batch of Nullvoiders!

The Nullvoiders were known to hold grudges for eternity, which explained their aggressiveness, seeking their vengeance for god knows how many eons!

"I am starting to think it's really me..."

Felix was left with a wry smile, not in his wildest dreams did he expect to be pranked by himself in the past...But soon, the fun of the joke was lost and he was left with a crippling realization.

'My old self seems to know my entire future...No, his entire future.' He frowned, 'So, what's driving him to do all of this? With his omnipotence, nothing seems able to force him to do anything.'

Felix recognized that he was coming back to the same answerless speculation he had with the tenants. So, he shook his head and buried those thoughts back, focusing on what was happening in front.

A lot was going on as Felix was now spectating through the eye of a Quantaar!

"Why did the vision switch my target? Why was this exact creature chosen from the billions I saw?"

Felix showed a spark of interest as he journeyed with the Quantaar, watching it continue to populate the infinite Quantum Realm with bizarre realities and lifeforms.

As it kept doing it, time started to accelerate, turning Felix's vision into mere strings of lights. A few moments later, time returned to normal and the magnificent behemoth seemed to have finally grown tired.

It chose a random empty place and transformed itself into a massive floating piece of landscape.

When this happened, Felix narrowed his eyes with a questioning look, seemingly already connecting some of the dots.

'Is this what I think it is?'

He had some doubts and kept them to himself, waiting for confirmation. As he continued watching, his doubts started clearing up bit by bit.

He saw the birth and the arrival of many new lifeforms on its magnificent habitable surface, considering it as their new home.

The Quantaar allowed them to reside on top of it as it was feeding off their frequencies to sustain itself and keep its life force from dying out.

The final nail in the coffin was when Felix witnessed the birth of the first Vibronoxian!

He saw it with his own eyes a white mystical core born from the most concentrated vibrational area on top of the Quantaar.

The moment one was born, many others followed along and created a small community through communication with vibrations.

Unlike most lifeforms, they seemed to possess incredible intelligence as it didn't take them long before they started using language and questioning their reality.

While this entire process happened in the blink of an eye before Felix, it took god knows how much time for them to evolve.

'The first days of the Vibronoxian Empire's creation...Why am I spectating such a vision? Why were the Quantaars created and ordered to populate the quantum realm? What happened to the rest?'

Many questions roamed Felix's mind as this vision helped him shed light on the true origin of the quantum realm, but also constructed him more confused than ever.

'Was all of this planned as well for the sake of reviving the consciousness of the universe?'

This answer made the most sense since it represented the exact same situation in the matter universe.

The only difference was that the three rulers did the dirty work by following the prophecy tablet's instructions while in the Quantum realm, the universe himself did it.

When he recalled that the quantum realm was older than the matter universe, it constructed him realize that this Quantaar was born before the three rulers themselves!

'What an ancient slumbering monster...How powerful can it be?' Felix didn't need to witness the Quantaar in action to believe in its supremacy.

For such an ancient entity responsible for the population of the entire quantum realm, he knew that its powers should rival even a unigin...As long as the battlefield was in the quantum realm.

As for what happened to the rest of the Quantaars? Felix received his answer in scenes flashing past his eyes, showing him each one and its death.

All of them burned their life force until the last drop for the glorious purpose of populating the Quantum realm.

Only one refused to do the same...Felix observed through its senses how the Vibronoxians grew into a strong nation and even found out about its existence and constructed a deal with it.

Protection from the quantum realm's dangers for the sake of a constant stream of frequencies, the more unique they were, the better for the Quantaar.

After this contract was made, Quantix Prime was born into royalty and took over the leadership of the nation.

Felix observed how Quantix Prime opened his nation to the public, welcoming all with open arms for no other reason than to feed their unique frequencies to the Quantaar.

By doing this, the Quantaar City remained a powerful stronghold for all other intelligence lifeforms, benefiting from each other.

Of course, the Vibronoxian Empire also developed at a faster rate with everyone's assistance, growing in territories and as a civilization like no other nation.

Thus, when those same races went on to create their nations after they grew strong enough under the Quantaar's blessings, the Vibronoxians permitted them to.

But, they never expected the Chaosians to bite the hand that fed them and began seeking to conquer the massive territories of the Vibronoxian Empire.

This was what formed a long-lasting feud between them.

But, Felix couldn't care less about any of this as he was still trying his best to find out the reason for the Quantaar to use such means to prolong its life.

'Why are you desiring life this much?' Felix murmured to himself, 'Why are you forcing yourself to stay awake even when you concluded your mission?'

'Why are you refusing to take rest...'

"Huh?"

Chapter 1843 Burning Through Its Lifeforce.

Felix could understand the vision collapsing after its conclusion, but it shouldn't have brought down the dreamworld with it.

That's because it implied the end of his dream and slumber, which shouldn't be possible when he still needed plenty of time before his soul recovered.

'Something must have happened on the outside.' Felix showed a solemn look as he helped accelerate the dreamworld's destruction.

When he opened his eyes, he was stunned to find himself not in Asna's core, but within a massive pebble-like celestial shimmering barrier...Even the consciousness ocean underneath was glimmering with a hint of golden luster.

"Is this my new soul...It can't be." Felix mumbled as he gazed around in a daze, feeling like he had entered the holy grounds.

Felix had this reaction only once when he first entered Asna's core.

When his eyes landed on the ceiling, he found that the soul barrier was still incomplete...The very top of the pebble-like dome required just a bit more to connect the entire barrier.

This made Felix realize that the rebirth phase wasn't finished yet, which explained why his personality was still the same.

But, Felix paid no attention to this at the moment. He swiftly hopped to Asna's core and joined the tenants, finding them also losing their marbles trying to explain what was happening to him.

"Felix!" Candace exclaimed out loud immediately after seeing him.

Felix gave her a slight nod and went to sit with the tenants at the central table, his expression as serious and confused as it could be.

"Based on your expression, it seems like you have no idea what happened too." Lady Sphinx disclosed calmly, skipping greetings.

"I don't know if it's related or not, but I saw a new vision related to the birth of the quantum realm and the Quantaar, the Vibronoxians' guardian." Felix shared.

"A new vision?" Thor raised an eyebrow in surprise, his reaction shared by the rest.

"See for yourselves."

Felix flicked his finger and shared a summarized version of what he witnessed in the dreamland.

When the tenants watched what occurred, their reaction and arising questions were more or less the same as Felix's.

However, before they could discuss them, all of them switched their gazes to the sky. Their senses, which were blocked completely by the cocoon, suddenly felt like they could slither through the blockage.

It was like finding a tiny hole in a wall to peek from.

Everyone glanced at each other for a split second, and then swiftly sent their combined senses through the cocoon, desiring to know what was going on outside at last.

When their senses pierced through the other side, expecting to find themselves in either Commander Bia's possession or hidden somewhere.

Not in their wildest dreams would they have predicted the shocking scene painted before their eyes.

Millions of misty strings attached to the cocoon while it was inside a massive dark bat-like creature, its skin moving disgustingly akin to millions of little bags squishing at once.

"What...the...hell...is...this..."

Thor's reaction was shared by all, none of them seemed to have figured out what was happening immediately.

Felix, on the other hand, picked up on a familiar feeling like he had been here before. When his eyes scanned the entire creature, it finally hit him.

His heart skipped a beat while his eyes widened to the limit as dots started connecting in his mind akin to fireworks going off.

While the time spent in the vision might have passed quickly, Felix had felt and gone through everything the Quantaar had experienced.

When Felix saw those misty strings rushing to the cocoon and being absorbed by the stone of reality, he understood exactly what the Quantaar was doing.

'Quantaar...Is that you?' Felix spoke through vibrations, his voice carried a tint of emotions in it.

The moment it heard his voice, the Quantaar released a soft vibrational noise that made absolutely no sense in Felix's mind. He couldn't decipher what he was trying to communicate, but he could sense the emotions in it.

It was of happiness, reverence, and a pet-like joy.

"What's going on Fel..."

Felix interrupted Candace with an extended palm and continued sending vibrational messages to Quantaar, asking him about the situation.

Quantaar answered him by opening a small hole through Apollo's dark army that swarmed it entirely, creating a wall thicker than the tallest skyscraper in the realm.

The moment Felix picked up on the slight breach, he released his weakened senses through it. The first thing that came into his eyes was Apollo, standing proud with a cold expression. Then, the three unigins awaiting at a decent distance, already using their peak divine forms, awaiting the best opportunity to intervene.

Last but not least, the Vibronoxian and Chronowalker's armies were situated at a distance, dealing with their own fair share of dark creatures.

His senses might be weak, but he managed to scan every face across the entire battlefield, making him recognize familiar faces.

Thus, when he saw Athena, Aeolus, and Artemis, he realized that the three rulers must have found out what happened in the tower somehow and sent them to retrieve his cores.

At the same time, the unigins all picked up on Felix's gaze washing over them, making them narrow their eyes in focus instantly.

"He is in there, and he is awake." Athena uttered with a solemn tone.

"Aaaaa, I don't like this, I don't like this at all." Artemis already started getting cold feet, truly terrified by Felix.

"His consciousness is awake, but the rebirth process hasn't concluded yet." Aeolus shared, his voice just as serious, "We have to get through this monster before it concludes."

The three unigins glanced at each other once and swiftly joined in by removing the divine field and using powerful attacks to break through the Quantaar's barrier.

Boom! Boom!...

Apollo accepted their assistance in silence, as he had no interest in allowing Felix's rebirth without first putting him under his mercy. The last time he trusted him, he refused to awaken his dormant wisp.

With their combined forces, it did seem like it had accelerated the Quantaar's barrier destruction; weaknesses and didn't succeed attempts to repel the attacks were more recurring.

When Felix saw this, even when he didn't have the full picture yet, he knew that the Quantaar wasn't going to make it for long.

It might falter before his soul completed, which would leave him exposed to the wolves!

'Sh*t, what can I do?'

Felix had no time to even seek out the tenant's assistance, focusing his entire attention on finding a solution.

Alas, even with his incredible wits and foresight, he failed to come up with anything...That last 1% might seem like not much, but it was everything.

The moment it was completed, it signified the birth of a new soul and the body would follow along.

While Felix was contemplating with clear agitation for answers, the Quantaar seemed to have observed on his disturbed emotions by sensing the frequencies.

The Quantaar focused on calming him with a soothing tune despite the fact it was the one being beaten up and down.

'Quantaar...You.'

The tune did calm Felix's emotions, but at the same time left him stunned.

Without explaining itself, the Quantaar suddenly started burning through its life force and energy like there was no end to its reserve.

Both resources were sent to the cocoon, doubling the number of the misty strings instantly and causing the stone of reality to start shimmering as bright as the moon in a clear night sky!

When Felix noticed his soul barrier picking up on its pace again, edging closer and closer to establishing the connection, he sensed his heart tighten up immediately.

He wasn't dumb, with all the information in his possession, he recognized that the Quantaar was keeping itself alive at all costs for the sake of this very moment.

While the rest of its species died after fulfilling their sole purpose, it kept waiting for him, waiting for the day, when he would need that same life force to save him.

Felix didn't know if it was a duty given to it by the universe's consciousness, or if it was surviving for the sake of helping him one last time, helping its creator.

Whatever it was, Felix tightened his fists tightly as he watched his soul converge at last under the soothing tune that had never stopped playing...

But alas, the music had to stop eventually, and when it did, the last remaining drop of Quantaar's life force was devoured by the stone of reality.

Outside, the ancient Quantaar that had lived ever since the dawn of time, creator of an entire realm, father to many quantum natives, and a protector to the Vibronoxian empire, had fallen at last. Devoured by the dark creatures like it was nothing but another meal to them...

The moment its corpse disintegrated, the dark creatures rushed to envelop the gleaming white cocoon, like moths fluttering to the sun...

Chapter 1844 The White Pillar.

Quantix Prime's stunned eyes were affixed on what used to be his old friend, his guardian, and the symbol of his empire.

Vibra, Krell, Timeon, Dankin, and the rest of the troops stopped whatever they were doing, their expressions were of utter horror and disbelief after witnessing the fall of the quantum realm's god.

Alas, life wasn't a musical play...

The dark creatures didn't give them a single moment to process their emotions as they continued their aggressive assault.

Only this time, it seemed to work much better as with the death of the Quantaar, everyone lost the vibrational barriers on them.

"Arghhh!"..."SQUAD 87 NEEDS BACK UP!"..."WE ARE BEING OVERWHELMED!"...

A symphony of cries and shouts filled the battlefield as everyone seemed to be struggling to survive against the infinite numbers of the dark army.

"RETREAT AS ONE!" Quantix Prime ordered at once, his expression was covered in an untold level of hatred and violence as he gazed at the foreigners' gang.

But, as a responsible leader, he knew it wasn't the time for his emotions to get the best of him.

With the shocking death of their protector, he knew that the war was already lost and there wasn't much they could do about it.

Meanwhile, Apollo and the other three unigins couldn't care less about the war.

The moment the Quantaar fell apart and exposed the cocoon, they immediately made their move to claim it!

'Quickly! The bastard has the first-move advantage!'

Aeolus shouted telepathically as he rushed straight inside the bulk of the dark army, using his divine blade to open up a path forcefully. Athena and Artemis blocked the sides and covered his back, which made it possible to pierce through the army without getting cornered!

'Idiots, you have already lost your opportunity.' Apollo sneered in ridicule, watching their useless attempts to recover the cocoon.

'The instant the cocoon was engulfed by my army, it became min...'

Before he could finish his thought, his eyes were suddenly exposed to a blinding flash of light that was bright enough that it would burn off commoners' eyes instantly.

It didn't affect Apollo at all, leaving him staring with a stupefied look at the rising pillar of light, pure and radiant, erupting skyward.

It pierced through the quantum realm with such intensity that it seemed as if a new star was being born right there on the battlefield.

This radiant column burned with a white-hot brilliance that was blinding to behold, and as it ascended, it incinerated every dark creature that was close to it!

The armies, both friend and foe, halted their advances, stunned into silence by the spectacle.

Athena, Aeolus, and Artemis could only stare in shock and wonder as the pillar of light grew in magnitude, its base centered around the cocoon.

'What the hell is this?!'

Aeolus cried out loud as he was hurled away by the shockwave produced, his partners tagging right behind him!

They had seen many unigins' rebirth processes before, but none of them were like this in the slightest.

Meanwhile, the three rulers had an entirely different reaction. They leaned closer to the scene, their divine pupils thinning with a hint of shock and disbelief.

Two rare emotions, they very seldom showed unless in very special cases. This case was more than just special, it was impossible in their eyes.

"The Divine Ascension...He is ascending to a celestial, how, how??" Amun-Ra bellowed, his voice cold, but carried an undeniable level of anger.

"I don't know...Asna's core hasn't been touched at all, I know for a fact." Medusa frowned deeply after using her senses and noticing that her little serpent was carrying its mission smoothly.

If only she could see what was going on in Asna's core or outside of it, their doubts would more or less be answered as Felix was going through the transformation of a lifetime.

A transformation far superseding the origin realm breakthrough or even his first ascension to an unigin.

The only difference from the rest was that none of them expected it...Besides one, Lilith.

'This is looking more promising by the day...' She smiled to herself, 'He is so close to the finish line, closer than anyone else...'

With many peculiar thoughts roaming in her mind, she watched as his physical form began to take shape around his spiritual form.

The seven cores were contained by the seven hearts, seemingly, each connected to a heart, but at the same time, connecting to a singular soul!

"What's going on? Isn't this technically impossible by the universal standards?" Thor exclaimed in shock, unable to comprehend what his eyes were feeding him.

The rest of the tenants were just as ignorant, no one able to give a proper answer to such a question.

It was expected, Felix had gone through hell to ascend multiple times by using a loophole, which enabled him to associate each core with an individual soul of a dragonic tail and a heart as its physical container.

But now? The universe decided to merge all seven unique cores into a sole soul. This went against its order since it implied a single unigin could be the guardian of more than twenty laws at once!

'Indeed, it should be impossible for a unigin, but Felix...' Lilith decided to help them out a bit, sharing with a faint knowing smile, 'He is no longer a unigin.'

'If he isn't a unigin, then what is he beco...Huh? Don't tell me.'

The tenants were quite sharp and managed to come to the shocking conclusion almost immediately, leaving them staring at each other in disbelief.

'I knew that a soul born from a celestial heart might result in the birth of a celestial, but to actually happen...' Lady Sphinx murmured with an astounded look, 'Even connecting the other cores to one soul...'

It wasn't like no one thought of it. It just seemed too unimaginable, like it was absurd to even dream of it.

After all, there were only four celestials in the universe and one of them wasn't even awakened yet.

But, here they were, watching Felix's transformation coming to an end.

While they were shocked by the implications, the divine white pillar wasn't visible to just the ones near it. It actually pierced through spacetime and traveled across all the known and unknown realms, dimensions, and whatnot!

Unlike the universal thunderclap, the pillar appeared in everyone's eyes regardless of their position or status. It was like a white pillar burned at the back of their retina, forcing them to stare at it even while they were asleep!

This caused chaos to arise everywhere.

Meanwhile, in the spirit realm, Lord Hades stared at the pillar with the same emotionless zombie-look expression, his thoughts unreadable on the surface.

"Little one, it seems like you are nearing your goal." He mumbled, "I can't wait for the day you dethrone those three oppressors."

The pillar spoke nothing about Felix, but Lord Hades seemed confident it was related to him. He wasn't the only one with the same feeling.

'Father!'

'Felix, is that you...'

'Ahh, what kind of uproar are you causing now.'

'Little one must be giving them hell.'

Noah, Olivia, Selphie, Nimo, Carbuncle, and many others close enough to have seen many of his miracles couldn't assist but associate this unexplainable phenomenon with him.

Chapter 1845 The Divine Ascension.

Every one of them was going through their parts of life, but the moment Felix came into their minds, various emotions were brought up against their will.

But, all they could do was associate them with hopeful and delightful nostalgia and carry on living, knowing that he was long gone...

Suddenly, the white pillar in everyone's eyes started to turn dark and ominous until it was completely pitch-black!

Everyone was left stunned, having no idea if the pillar was still there, and they couldn't see it or if it had gone away.

The only ones knowing were near it, gazing at it with similar looks. It had indeed turned dark for less than a second before it died out at last...

The moment it disappeared, everyone's eyes landed on a singular humanoid entity with a skin fairer than fairies, and long smooth hair, darker than the darkest nights.

His features were sharpened, with a pinpoint triangle jaw capable of slicing through the hardest known materials.

His pitch-black eyes held a mesmerizing depth, with pupils that spun slowly, giving the impression of staring into a hypnotic, ever-turning vortex.

He was fully nude, but his private parts were hidden by a moving inked tattoo, resembling the same peculiar writings spotted on the back of the All-Seeing-Eye.

They danced across his body, changing from one sentence to another like his milky skin was a playground.

Felix lifted his hand slowly and gazed at it after removing a stalk of hair away from his eyes. The letters came together and created a sentence on his palm, making him tilt his head in curiosity.

After reading it, his expression couldn't help but turn gentle and a bit saddened.

"You were the best..." Felix said under his breath as he caressed the writings, causing them to break into an inked mist.

The mist turned into vibrations and was carried away, reaching Quantix Prime and the rest of the Vibronoxians.

However, only Quantix Prime was able to decipher what it said, as he was very familiar with this time of communication.

It was a unique way of communication only the Quantaar and the royal family could use.

"Did I do good, Father? huh, why did he say it? Is he talking to me...It can't be." Quantix Prime murmured, having no idea how to react to the last words of the Quantaar.

While he knew only he could read this type of vibration, he was also sure that he wasn't the one being addressed.

That's because the Quantaar never considered the Vibronoxians more than just business partners no matter how hard he tried to make their relationship closer.

"Is he addressing him?" Quantix Prime's eyes landed on Felix, who slowly turned his head to face the four unigins.

Before Quantix Prime could continue with the thought, he was shocked to see that all four of them and the entire dark army nearby had disappeared!

He swiftly turned to Timeon and he seemed to have the same expression, making him realize that he wasn't imagining things.

'Who the hell is he...'

'What do you guys think?'

'I don't know, but he was already too dangerous to begin with.'

'This feels too ominous...'

Meanwhile, Felix and the four big 'A's were seen staring at each other in silence. Felix wasn't saying anything while they were trying to study him. Or at least, what he had become.

Felix wasn't showing any change of expression or making a move for a reason. He was analyzing new information bestowed upon him after the ascension. Information that was specific to the stone of reality, his new main core.

It took him no time before reading through it all.

'Felix, are you good? How do you feel?'

'Do you feel divine?'

The tenants checked on him, having no idea what to expect of him after this peculiar transformation. For all they know, he might have changed completely or forgotten about them.

Fortunately, it didn't seem like this was the case.

'I am good, I will talk to you after I deal with them.' Felix replied, his tone still neutral.

'Alright...'

The tenants could only reply with this and watch as Felix let out a long exhale while eying Apollo and the others.

"I have wondered about many things in life, but I never thought most of my questions would be answered with a simple death."

He said with a wry smile as he manifested a medium axe made out of celestial black flames. He waved it around akin to a toy as he continued.

"Like these black flames. I always wondered about its origin and why am I the only one capable of using them." He pointed the battleaxe at them and said calmly, "But now, I know why."

"Easy there, paragon. We know you possess only a tiny bit of celestial flames. You can't bluff your way out of here." Aeolus said with narrowed cold eyes, divine aura screaming off him.

He knew that showing weakness was going to do nothing but ruin their chances at dealing with him.

After all, they were still geared to the limit with divinities unlike him.

"Is that so..." Felix stroked the pitch-black axe and asked with a gentle smile, as opposed to his entire creepy aura, "Will you allow me to test something on you then?"

Before Aeolus could respond, with a single blink, Felix vanished from where he stood, reappearing in an instant before Aeolus.

He wielded the celestial axe, its blade wreathed in churning black flames that seemed to devour the very light around them!

Aeolus reacted swiftly, shooting his arms up and summoning a divine barrier around him!

As Felix swung the axe down in a powerful arc, Aeolus crossed his arms before him, the barrier flaring brightly upon contact with the dark flames.

"Give it your best!" He taunted.

Whooosh!

The collision between the black flames and the divine barrier produced a thunderous roar and a burst of divine sparks.

Aeolus grunted under the force, but he held strong.

"You're wasting your energy, paragon!" he shouted while turning to his allies, seemingly about to ask them to flank him.

Before Aeolus could voice it out, he noticed something alarming. The black flames licking at his barrier were not diminishing as he had expected.

Instead, they seemed to be growing in intensity & strength, feeding off the very divine energy meant to suppress them!

"What?! It can't be!"

His eyes widened in realization as the protective energy of his barrier began to sizzle and crack, slowly being consumed by the relentless flames!

The shocking part? He could feel that the black flames were reaching out to his reserve of divinities and consuming them from within him!

In a desperate move, he pushed back alongside every his remaining strength, desiring to break the connection between them!

Arghhhh!!

Alas, the intense dark flames engulfed him whole & started eating via his flesh, soul, emotions, and even thoughts!

Everything that made him... him, wasn't just devoured, however broken apart first to its initial origin, before getting eaten by the flames, allowing them to grow like never before.

This left Aeolus screaming in unexplainable agony without the possibility of even establishing a single thought under the petrified eyes of his peers.

Chapter 1846 What Has He Become?

"Aeolus!"

Artemis called out loud with a terrified expression, but she still sought to assist him, using her divine bow to fire a powerful green arrow in the direction of Felix.

As the arrow got closer, it suddenly split apart into multiple ones and traveled in different paths, attempting to strike Felix from all sides.

Intrigued, Felix didn't bother to evade them. He made a small gesture with his finger and those arrows were immediately intercepted by a wall of black flames.

The moment contact was made, the arrows broke into their natural state before getting consumed by the black flames, getting a tiny bit stronger.

When everyone saw this, only one reaction was appropriate as a response...Disbelief.

"How...How can it grow without celestial energy..." Athena couldn't help but question out loud.

She already knew that the black celestial flames were too freaky, capable of burning through everything and even remaining to burn for eternity on their own.

However, what they were witnessing was totally different.

The black flames were actually devouring all sources of energy and using them as a source to grow bigger and more terrifying!

The fact it also did it to a divinity was scarier than what was shown.

"I want to let you know, but I can't have my enemies learn about my moves now, can I?" Felix replied with a faint gentle smile, his aura so pacified and serene, like he wasn't in a life-or-death battle.

When he said this, Athena and Artemis knew that he was referring to the three rulers, as his eyes might seem like they were affixed on theirs, but in reality, those two dark vortexes were focused on the three rulers within them.

It was like he could see straight at them right through the spiritual link.

"Agh....ah..."

Suddenly, their eyes were drawn to Aeolus after hearing his whimpering voice. His body was no longer seen, engulfed completely in a pillar of raging black flames, reaching up to hundreds of meters!

With one last soft pained whimper, Aeolus collapsed to a cloud of black ash and flew away by the very wind he commanded...

Not even his Zephyr's blade was spared, burnt, and sucked dry completely.

"This is all he owned, not bad." Felix smiled, as he gestured gracefully for the pillar of black light to return to him.

The pillar of black flames flew in his direction, getting smaller rapidly until it landed on his chest as a drop of black ink, in the shape of a black flame.

Apollo and the others couldn't help but feel their hearts tingling in dread as they stared at Felix's serene demeanor like he didn't just eliminate a unigin and devoured everything about him, leaving him as nothing but a pile of ash...

The worst part? Aeolus was bestowed upon with so many divinities, he could take on at least two unigins simultaneously.

Yet, it didn't even matter...One touch by Felix's black flames was enough to send him back to the eternal kingdom.

'This is it...I was right, this is indeed the key to fulfilling my dream.'

Apollo's dread was swiftly replaced with unfiltered excitement. But, he kept it to himself, wanting to see what was Felix going to do next.

"I still have one last experiment, if you guys don't mind."

Felix seemed to be requesting, but his extended palm in Athena's and Artemis' direction claimed otherwise.

Athena and Artemis glanced at each other and without a single word exchanged, they bolted in different directions, having no interest in battling this scary version of Felix.

They wanted to get away first before enlarging themselves and returning to the eternal kingdom, but alas, neither Felix nor the three rulers were going to allow that.

'You better stay put and fight him with everything you got.' Amun-Ra ordered coldly, 'Or, you won't have a core to return to.'

'Have you lost your mind!' Artemis screamed loudly, 'Didn't you see what we saw! How can we fight something like that?! I doubt even know if you can handle him right now!'

The three rulers' expressions grew cold after hearing her last statement, having their omnipotent strength questioned for the first time ever.

But, they didn't bother calling her for it.

'We saw and we want to see more.' The first ruler said composedly.

Athena and Artemis' expressions turned gloomy, realizing that the three rulers wanted to use them as guinea pigs to extract more information from Felix without caring about their endings.

The sad part, they couldn't even reject it since they held their cores hostage.

'Damn it!'

Just as they wanted to stop and return to the battlefield, they were suddenly planted face-first on an invisible wall and were sent flying back by the recoil.

"The hell?"

Even Apollo was startled by this sight, having no idea what had just happened. He swiftly spread out his senses, his danger senses tingling like never before.

Immediately after, his visage turned grim.

His senses were sealed inside a massive invisible cube, unable to pierce through it even when he was able to see the Vibronoxians outside!

"My apologies, but no one is leaving this place until I get what I want." Felix's creepy mild voice resounded in their minds, followed by a snap of a finger.

Then, a gigantic cube made out of blinking colorful squares emerged into the light, leaving them staring at it with a shiver coursing down their spine.

Even Apollo's expression turned for the worst.

"The Dimension of Order..." Athena turned to peer at Felix with a confounded grimace, "When did he put it down? We sensed absolutely nothing...nothing."

She knew that something was different as even Eris couldn't put down her reality without them sensing it beforehand.

"We are done for..." Artemis already accepted her fate with a bitter smile, "I should have hidden myself in the quantum realm when I had my core on me."

None of them bothered to escape anymore, knowing that not even their deities could stop them from falling under Felix's commands.

That's because in this specific dimension, Felix was representing the universe's order and the divinities were part of its system...Which meant, he could bypass their effects whenever he desired!

This was exactly what Eris had told Felix when he asked her if there was a way to deal with divinities after he got caught stealing celestial energy.

Whoosh! Whoosh!

As expected, Felix merely made a gesture with his fingers and both girls were teleported in front of him.

"Ladies, all you have to do is stay beautiful, I will be done in a moment." Felix requested with a delicate smile as he pointed his palm at them.

As they gazed at his palm, they saw the same inked flame, suddenly become alive. Then, they were horrified to witness their deities suddenly getting pulled right from them in the direction of the palm as a long golden beam!

As this beam kept traveling toward the palm, it turned softer and softer until it became white, resembling standard celestial energy. When it was about to touch Felix's palm, it turned into black celestial flames.

This created a celestial beam of three colors, showing a godly process that had never been witnessed before.

"..."

Whether it was the tenants or the unigins, everyone was left gazing at the beam with widened eyes, trying to make sense of this unexplainable phenomenon.

In less than a couple of seconds, both women were left without a drop of deities in them, stripped clean and without pain or mess.

"Much appreciated, now begone." Felix waved them goodbye with a faint smile, "I will come visit you soon enough."

Athena and Artemis didn't know if he was addressing them or the three rulers. Before they could think too much about it, they found their bodies breaking apart into beautiful chaotic particles...

As they gazed at their fading arms with a dazed expression, they slowly lifted their heads to face Felix, believing that he was going to be punished by the universe for abusing his laws.

But, all they saw was Felix still waving his hand at them, his creepy vortex-like pupils affixed on them...

'What has he become...'

This was the last thought coursing through Athana's mind as the final piece of her soul disintegrated.

None of them bothered to even abuse their laws, knowing that he must have disabled their laws within his reality.

They should feel grateful just by the fact he sent them out painlessly compared to Aeolus, who made the mistake of opening his mouth.

"Now, how should I deal with you?"

Suddenly, Felix turned to Apollo with the same delicate smile, but this time, he didn't seem to be hiding the stored rage within him.

Chapter 1847 Apollo's Psychopathic Dream.

"Why are you looking at me like that?"

Apollo flinched, realizing that he wasn't in a favorable position. Still, he didn't hesitate to bring out what he had done for him.

"I know damn well you aren't going to forget how I saved your ass from Uranus in the void realm and a second time in the silent library." Apollo narrowed his eyes coldly, "You owe me your life twice."

"Indeed, I am not known to shy away from returning favors, which is why your actions angered me." Felix sighed in frustration, "Why did you have to attack me and even kill the Quantaar, a good friend of mine?"

"All you had to do is continue being in my side and I would have repaid the favor to the best of my ability, but now..." Felix shook his head, his eyes turning cold as he aimed his palm in his direction, "You are nothing but another pest standing between me and those three old scumbags."

Apollo could see that Felix was serious about eliminating him. So, he didn't waste his time on empty excuses, knowing that Felix was smart enough to figure out his true motive from his actions...They weren't good in the slightest.

"Wait, wait, wait, there is no need to make rash decisions." Apollo shared with a solemn tone, "You want the death of the three rulers, and while I have no interest in that, I believe our goals align."

"How so?" Felix was slightly intrigued, lowering his palm.

"You see, my entire reason for saving you was for your celestial black flames as I believe that they hold the key to achieving my goal." Apollo's eyes gleamed for a moment, "After I saw what your flames have become, I am more certain than ever."

"By the way, may I know what happened to yo.."

"No." Felix went straight to the point. "Why do you need them?" "It's a bit complicated, you need to understand the background first." Apollo got closer to Felix as he spoke, seemingly attempting to win him over again.

Felix figured out his motives, but he wasn't bothered, staring at him with the same deadpan look.

"Is this related to the dark reaction and your little hideous creatures?" He asked.

"Yes, there's something you need to understand about the dark reaction," Apollo shared, his voice low and serious. "When high-quality materials are concocted or merged, the balance between the quantum realm and the atomic world gets disrupted due to the energy bursts occurring during the process."

"This creates dimensional gaps, small rifts that allow my creatures to slip through into the atomic world automatically."

"How does that work?" Felix raised an eyebrow.

Lady Sphinx was just as confused as him. She had used every means possible to figure out how the dark reaction worked.

From experimenting on it to entering the quantum realm itself. Yet, not in her wildest dreams did she expect the dark creatures to be relying on potion concoction and biochemistry as an entry point.

"It's simple really, all the dimensional gaps and rifts appearing continuously are connected a singular gateway."

Apollo used his light laws with a hint of disgust, displaying Felix a holographic scene of a massive spiraling gateway in the shape of a long corridor. This corridor had a seemingly infinite number of flickering, small rifts.

There was an infinite line of dark creatures going through those rifts nonstop whenever one appeared.

All of this was happening in the void, which was enough to explain Apollo's purpose in remaining in the void all this time.

He wasn't locked up against his will or was forced inside of it. He needed to be there for the sake of his dream.

"Why are you doing all of this?" Felix frowned, "What's driving you to ruin my potions this vehemently."

"I desire to bring out my dark beings to the matter universe."

Apollo responded, his expression growing a bit mad, matching the unbridled insanity buried in his eyes.

"Once I achieve it, I will finally be able to fulfill my dream of casting the entire universe in darkness, returning it to its original state."

"..."

The tenants were left stunned speechless, realizing that this bastard was seeking to eliminate everyone and everything from the face of the universe...Including them!

"I don't need to bring out my entire army to the surface." Apollo replied with a sinister smile, "Just one dark creature will be enough, since the entire universe is filled with dark energy."

"I see." Felix did not show much reaction. "How are my flames going to help you with that?"

"Your dark flames are capable of burning for eternity, correct?" Apollo leaned closer as he shared his plan, "The issue I am struggling with is the dimensional gaps closing up almost immediately as they open, allowing the emergence of a few of my dark beings before the rift closes on them."

"With the source of dark energy and my control cut off from them, they start acting on automatic frenzied eating mode."

"Is that why they start devouring the mixture?" Felix lifted an eyebrow.

"Exactly." Apollo nodded, "I have no interest in stopping any concoction or merge of any type of high-quality materials."

Felix couldn't help but chuckle a bit, not expecting the mysterious, dark reaction that eluded all to not have anything related to the concoction or any other field.

Right now, there were many witches and biologists cursing the hell out of the dark reaction and the universe for putting it in to hinder their progress, not knowing that they were merely collateral damage to Apollo's failed attempts at accessing the matter universe with his creatures.

"Now, I am certain that if we used your flames to coat the edges of the dimensional gaps after they appear, they will force them to stay open for eternity." Apollo remarked with a tint of thrill in his voice, "My dark beings can pass through safely while ensuring the connection to my void, allowing me to keep growing them bigger and bigger until they escape from the atomic world."

"After emerging as a single merged dark creature, they will be able to recreate on their own using the endless dark energy in the universe." Apollo smiled turned creepier and creepier, "The universe won't do anything to them since they were still considered as quantum creatures."

"This f*cker has everything planned out to erase the universe as we know it." Thor squinted his eyes coldly, "He is more dangerous than the three rulers."

At least, the three rulers wanted nothing but to reach the other side, having no interest in whatever happens in the matter universe.

But, Apollo sought the erasure of anything related to light, even if it meant slaughtering all signs of life from the universe entirely!

'He is a psychopath on a different level.' Lady Yggdrasil showed a stern look, 'I can't believe he saved you for the sake of helping him with this. Now, I grasp why he turned against you. He knew that it was highly likely you would reject it and was trying to force it out of you.'

The rest of the tenants nodded in agreement.

In their eyes, how could Felix agree to such a proposal that would destroy his universe? It would make everything that he did or was doing, absolutely meaningless.

Thus, his next answer wasn't short of a shocker.

"How exactly am I going to benefit from this?" Felix inquired, his pools of spinning darkness seemed unperturbed.

Chapter 1848 Above Emotions.

"Haha, I knew you would understand the vision." Apollo laughed boisterously as he kept getting closer to Felix, leaving merely a couple of meters between them.

For unigins, this was more or less a kissing distance. Still, Felix left him be and continued listening to what he had to say.

"If we succeeded in bringing my army to the matter universe, I will make them reproduce like crazy, creating a truly infinite army." Apollo promised, "After the deed is done, and my quest is complete, this army will be yours."

"I don't know how you are doing it, but imagine if you devoured them with your celestial black flames? Imagine how powerful they will become. Imagine how much celestial energy will be in your possession."

Apollo kept leading him on with actual useful plans that would work greatly in his favor.

"I am sure you know that to take down the three rulers, you really need anything that can help you, and still, it won't be guaranteed."

"Indeed, your plan does like it will be of a massive boost to my efforts." Felix agreed calmly.

'Felix...' Candace covered her mouth in shock.

The tenants shared the same reaction, knitting their eyebrows in displeasure and concern, realizing that Felix's personality might have changed after all.

His personality might not seem to be affected by the laws', but his entire demeanor screamed of having turned into a nonchalant celestial.

The tenants were more worried about this than anything as they knew that celestials cared about nothing besides reaching the other side.

This made them carry so many atrocious acts that seemed normal and necessary in their eyes.

Just as Felix's masters were about to intervene and try to bring some sense into him, their pupils widened in a daze after noticing that Felix's entire arm had penetrated Apollo's chest, right in the middle.

On the other side, Felix's hand was seen clutching into a gleaming sphere, half white, half dark.

Not a single drop of blood was on his hand like he had penetrated his soul more than his body.

"Me and you, together we can conquer the universe and the eternal kingdom..."

It happened so fast, so smooth, so clean, Apollo was still in the process of selling his scheme with the same sinister smile, not realizing that his core was no longer his...

"Me...and...you...huh?"

As Apollo looked down at last, the rest of his sentence caught in his throat, slipping out word by word.

He slowly raised his head until his confused eyes locked with Felix's intense gaze. He didn't need to say anything; his expression spoke volumes.

"I didn't lie, your plan does sound intriguing and will help me out greatly, but..." Felix smiled gently, "I can carry it on my own."

"You..."

Before Apollo could react, Felix released a burst of chaotic/vibrational energy from his extended arm, sending a killer shockwave coursing through his entire body and soul.

In the blink of an eye, Apollo exploded into particles, leaving behind only his core, still in Felix's grasp.

Till the moment of his death, he still had no clue what had just happened...

After he was slain, the aggressive dark creatures suddenly became mellow, floating by akin to clouds of darkness.

"Retreat fast! Re...huh?"..."Here they come!! Wait what?"..."What's going on?"

The troops facing the relentless chase of the starving dark creatures were left stunned and baffled after noticing what had happened to them.

"The hell is going on?" Krell knitted his eyebrows.

"I don't know, but it must be related to those foreigners." Vibra commented with a optimistic tone, "Maybe, they have eliminated the King of Darkness?"

"Your majesty, what do you think?" Quantix Prime remained silent, gazing into the distance, where their capital city used to be. Many ideas coursed through his mind as his eyes roamed to the dying-off dark creatures.

"It doesn't matter, continue retreating." Quantix Prime ordered, "We will know the truth when the time comes."

Back inside the dimension of order, Felix was seen tossing with Apollo's core in his hand akin to a baseball ball, throwing it up and down.

He kept gazing around him at the dying-off force of the dark creatures, his expression unreadable.

He waved his hand and the dark army started to twist and turn, getting smaller and smaller while merging until it morphed into a pitch-black ring.

Felix wore it in his right pinky and controlled the size of the dimension of order until it was skin-tight to him.

When the tenants saw this, they couldn't help but raise their eyebrows in astonishment.

'It can be used like this? Doesn't this give him complete control over reality around his skin?' Thor remarked.

Before anyone could answer him, they all got transported outside of Asna's core and into Felix's new consciousness space.

When they opened their eyes, they couldn't help but marvel in awe at how divine and holy the place looked.

Felix had already taken the liberty to recreate the town with their homes and various activities.

Of course, not forgetting the central table at the plaza, using the same table they were tossing cards on when they were less than three.

"Yes, it does."

Felix appeared out of nowhere while answering Thor's question, his celestial aura matched the place to perfection.

"Felix, what's going on with you man..." Thor sighed.

Ever since his rebirth, he had been so weird and unpredictable that they had no idea what to expect of him anymore.

"My apologies for making you worry." Felix smiled gently, "Don't worry, I am still me, I have just ascended emotions, getting rid of all the rage and hatred in my heart."

"Huh, what do you mean by that?" Lord Loki and the tenants were taken back.

"It means as it means, I am no longer attached to emotions or my laws' effect on them." Felix clarified with the same smile, "I am now a celestial, I move my emotions, not the way around."

"This is amazing news!" Candace exclaimed in excitement, knowing that even unigins could not escape their emotions controlling their actions.

The fact that Apollo was planning to erase the entire universe just to bring it into darkness was enough to showcase the level of madness they get pushed to.

For Felix, who had countless laws, his emotions were almost always out of his control.

"Does this mean you will be chasing after the three rulers by choice?" Lord Shiva inquired calmly.

"Choice?" Felix remarked coldly, "I might have cleansed my heart, but I have seven of them, and there is nothing in this universe that's going to change how I feel about them."

Felix's hatred of the three rulers was in a different realm entirely.

He feared and despised them as a mortal. He was cautious and hated them to the core when he became a primogenitor. He dared to stand up against them when he ascended to a unigin.

Now, he wanted nothing more but to wipe them out of the face of the universe. At last, he seemed to have the confidence to make it happen.

"Watch me, I am going to burn them with those very flames I command,"

Felix uttered coldly as his eyes were set in black flames, but his face showed the same gentle smile.

This sent shivers down the spines of the tenants as they were unable to read his true emotions...

He had such mastery over his emotions that discerning his true feelings seemed nearly impossible.

"Speaking of them, is it possible to tell us what happened?" Lady Sphinx asked, unable to contain her curiosity anymore.

Chapter 1849 The Stone of Reality's Powers.

"You couldn't hold it in anymore?" Felix chuckled as he joined them at the central table.

"None of us could." J?rmungandr uttered with an astounded tone, "We thought it was capable of only burning matter and dealing immense pain for eternity. How did it evolve into breaking apart divinities and transforming them into celestial black flames?"

"It's not the doing of the black flames."

Felix shared with a faint smile as he brought out a black flame on top of his palm.

"It's the stone of reality's doing. Remember when we saw how the stone of reality used its powers to create a balance between laws, which resulted in shaping our reality as it is?"

The tenants nodded.

"Well, I found out that Asna's core and the stone of reality are considered intertwined. While Asna's core creates and controls laws, the stone of reality can manipulate their effects and give them meaning."

"You mean like change the laws' entire identity?" Elder Kraken raised an eyebrow in surprise, "Asna can create a law of fire while the stone of reality can make it freeze objects instead of burning them?"

"Exactly." Felix smiled, "The stone of reality's powers is equal to Asna's powers for the very reason. It is the cornerstone of our universe's reality and without it, laws can be anything they can be."

"Doesn't this mean you have control over all laws and can change them as you desire?" Candace exclaimed.

For a celestial heart at the same rank as Asna's, it wasn't farfetched to have such a commanding authority over the laws.

"I can't do it wantonly though." Felix shook his head, "To change the reality of an already established law takes immense energy. If we weren't in the quantum realm, where the universe's rules are more forgiving, the stone of reality wouldn't have caused such chaos."

"For it to create the reality in our universe through giving effects and proper logical connection between our laws, it devoured a significant amount of the released celestial energy."

"I see, it makes sense."

The tenants understood that manipulating laws in the matter universe was not the same as making it in the quantum realm.

Quantum energy ruled this place and it could be used for everything and anything...Even the stone of reality was using it to change realities around it.

"Also, the process isn't simple as it requires another celestial language," Felix added.

"Another celestial language?" Thor gaped in astonishment.

"Don't notify me it's the same one we saw behind the All-Seeing-Eye?" Lady Sphinx caught on immediately.

None of them forgot the mysterious language, which seemed foreign to even Lilith.

"Exactly."

Felix nodded as he manifested a sentence written in peculiar writings, unlike the three celestial languages. Then, he tapped in the sentence on the central table. The writings disappeared immediately and in an instant, the table turned into crystalized ice.

"Although I can control ice laws, I didn't tap into them." Felix remarked calmly, "The stone of reality's control occurs through rewriting and modifying the structure of the law."

"Whoah," Candace exclaimed in astonishment, her reaction shared by the tenants.

"How does it work exactly? Is it similar to the three celestial languages?" Lord Marduk, the expert in universal celestial languages, inquired.

"Not precisely." Felix clarified, "While the three rulers' languages can communicate with laws and elements, my language hijacks the law's structure entirely. This allows me to manipulate its structure to what I desire, however, I can't control it unless I own the law manipulation or use one of the three celestial languages."

"I see." Thor rubbed his chin, "If we considered a law like a building, then your language is the designer while the three languages are the beneficiaries."

"More or less."

While the analogy wasn't perfect for simplification, it was enough to establish an idea of the difference between the four cores.

"But, how is this related to the black flames?" Lord Loki wondered.

"The stone of reality's powers can just change the structure of laws," Felix responded with a faint smile, "But, then I found out that my black flames are a medium for the seven celestial cores."

"What do you mean?"

"When I first obtained them, they had the power to devour matter and burn for eternity. These powers were bestowed by Asna's core." Felix added, "In reality, the black flames' standardized powers are just causing immense pain through burning the body and the soul."

"You are telling us that after ascending with the stone of reality like the main core, your black flames were bestowed with the powers to alter the structure of divinities and celestial flames?!" Lady Sphinx reacted in bewilderment.

"You got it."

Felix gave them a live demonstration with a gentle smile on his face. He sent the black flame to the center of the table and then ordered it to devour the crystalized table.

After it ate it entirely, the flame seemed to burn a bit more intensely...Then, Felix snapped his finger, and the black flame started disintegrating until it became a cloud of celestial energy.

Under the stunned eyes of the tenants, he separated a microscopic drop of celestial energy from the cloud and sucked in the rest back.

"..."

Celestial energy was the rarest resource in the entire universe and the only possible method of obtaining it was through the universe's heart. Not even the three rulers had different methods of harvesting it.

Yet, here they were, staring at what might be a spark of dust of celestial energy, but its significance wasn't lost on them.

"You are telling me, you can harvest celestial energy through anything?" Thor gulped a mouthful.

"Not harvest, but deconstruct." Felix replied with a serene tone, "The vision has shown us that the entire universe is born out of celestial energy...It's the foundational block of everything."

"With my current upgraded version of black flames, I can deconstruct everything and anything back to its original form, which is the celestial energy."

While his tone was calm, the topics he discussed were astounding. If the three rulers were to discover of it, they would be extremely envious.

"Just this alone is enough to give us a new stare at the battle against the three rulers." Fenrir remarked coldly, "Their strength is mostly correlated to celestial energy and since they possess a monopoly on it, no one can do anything about it."

"But it's different enough." Thor grinned, "You can return to the matter universe and farm up celestial energy until it's enough to challenge them all combined."

"Indeed, I am certain that now he is a celestial, the limitation imposed on his strength has been lifted." J?rmungandr added, "You can finally be on equal grounds against them."

The tenants kept chipping in with signs of excitement and eagerness etched on their faces, realizing that their little Landlord was finally at the peak.

The peak, where he could stand side by side with the three rulers!

"I don't want to ruin your little celebration, but you are forgetting one important detail." Lord Shiva remarked expressionlessly, "I am all for the death of those f*ckers, but now that he has become a celestial, doesn't this mean he is also banned from ever stepping into the matter universe again?"

"In fact, I don't even understand how he hasn't been kicked out of the quantum realm yet."

Everyone went silent at once, remembering at last that the celestials were forbidden by the universe from leaving the eternal kingdom!

They didn't forget what happened to Amun-Ra when he chased after Felix to his void domain...Soon, they all turned to Felix for his opinion on the matter just to find out that he didn't appear bothered by this.

"Do you understand something we don't?" One of them asked.

Chapter 1850 Adapt, Change, But Never Gone.

"All I know is that I must not leave the quantum realm in my celestial state." Felix smiled, "The universe's consciousness has chosen to put the stone of reality in the quantum realm for this very reason. It's the only celestial heart that can remain outside of the eternal kingdom post-awakening."

"Really? Why is that?" The tenants raised an eyebrow in surprise.

"Because he made it like that." Felix rolled his eyes at them, "He is the consciousness of the universe, the rules are his to make."

"..."

The tenants were left speechless, realizing that they had been reading too much into everything.

As the universe consciousness, he was the one blocking the three rulers from accessing the matter universe or other realms. In the same sense, he could allow them in.

"If it's like this, then can't you access the matter universe as well?" Thor said.

In his eyes, if the universe consciousness could control such rules, then, he would allow Felix to enter the matter universe freely too.

"Nope." Felix shook his head, "I am also banned from entering the matter universe or other realms."

"..."

The tenants were left speechless again.

Felix chuckled and clarified, "I also have no idea why, his mind works in mysterious ways I guess. But, don't worry, I have already devised a method to leave the quantum realm."

"Huh? How is that possible?"

"Won't you get sent back to the quantum realm by the chains? Or worse, the Eternal Kingdom?"

The tenants had a legitimate reason to question his method. In their eyes, if even the three rulers couldn't find a way to bypass the universe's rules after billions of years, how could he come up with one the day he ascended?

"I am different than them." Felix smiled faintly, "They are just celestials while I am a celestial/unigin."

The tenants knew that he referred to the cores merged with his soul after his ascension...But, they still weren't able to link the two together.

Felix decided to give them a hint of what he had in mind. He snapped his finger and the seven dragonic tails emerged from his lower back, catching them by surprise.

The dragonic tail's appearance had changed drastically, matching his celestial bearing. Their upper scales were pitch black while their lower bottom was as white as Felix's skin.

Their heads no longer matched the seven sin animals but had the shape of an easter-long-headed dragon...Yet, their aura was more overbearing than ever.

"I thought they were gone after the ascension." Lord Loki noted with a dazed look, fascinated by their new appearance.

He had a feeling that just one of them was enough to take down all primogenitors combined.

"They are part of me now, they can adapt, and change, but never gone," Felix replied with a gentle smile as he patted them on the head, making them growl in happiness.

The seven dragonic heads were no longer associated with the seven sins since they were primarily a breakthrough related to the bloodline integration cultivation system.

The only reason they got attached to the seven sins was because Felix joined the origin breakthrough with the first ascension.

But now? They were linked to the divine ascension and had powers corresponding to it.

"I didn't think that the origin breakthrough's effects would follow along to your divine ascension." J?rmungandr chuckled.

"They didn't just follow along...They are the key to leaving the quantum realm." Felix replied, "Or at least, the unigin side of me."

When he put it like this, the quick-witted ones swiftly caught on to what was Felix attempting to do.

"Don't tell me you are planning to link a unigin core with them and send them outside while you leave your celestial form here?" Lord Marduk speculated.

"Close, but not exactly." Felix smiled, "You will see when the moment comes. For now, I think it's time for us to be joined by Eris and Apollo."

"You are planning to revive them?" Thor knitted his eyebrows, "Is it even possible without getting punished?"

Felix went through hell just to revive Nimo and he had to use part of his soul to make it happen. He didn't dare to imagine the price required to revive not just one unigin soul, but two.

"Whatever the price needed, I will pay it." Felix uttered with a solemn tone, "I owe them my life."

Without their assistance, he wouldn't have come this far...Plus, they were the only ones good to Asna during her childhood, including Artemis.

Felix had a soft spot for any unigin who stood up by Asna's side during her banishment, which was the reason he sent Artemis painlessly.

"Fortunately, Apollo left us a good gift." Felix suddenly grinned as he rubbed the black ring on his pinky.

"The dark creatures!" Candace exclaimed, "There is an infinite number of them, you can totally use them as the payment."

"I can use them for more than just that." Without elaborating, Felix switched his focus back to the quantum realm and said, "I have to get to the rift before it closes. But first..."

Felix extended his senses to the limit until he spotted the escaping army of the Vibronoxians and Chronowalkers...Even the Chaosians had departed to their territories, the moment the dark creatures stopped moving.

Sylox might know what happened to Apollo inside the massive cube, but he had no intention of staying behind and finding out.

Felix zoomed his vision until he locked down on Quantix Prime. Then, he phased right next to him, alarming him and his subordinates.

"You!!"

At first glance, they recognized Felix, making them raise their guards to the limits.

"Lower your weapons, I am just here for a quick chat with your leader,"

With a gentle smile on his face, he gestured with his hand for them to relax. Still, no one dropped their weapons and instead became more aggressive.

"Who are you and why have you chased us?" Krell spoke for the emperor, his tone as assertive as it could be.

"Oh, my apologies, maybe this will help?"

Felix snapped his finger and his appearance changed to match Gonn's. Green luminous hair, green eyes, and a beauty unrivaled in the quantum realm.

"You?! It's you!"

Dankin pointed his shaking finger at Felix, his eyes showed nothing but utter shock and disbelief.

"How did you survive the tow..." Before he could finish his question, Quantix Prime shushed him with a silencing ability. Then, he floated towards Felix and extended a hand.

"I believe this is how you foreigners greet each other." He said, seeking a handshake.

"Just the polite ones." Felix grinned as shook his hand.

"I see..." Quantix Prime glanced behind Felix and asked, "May I ask what happened there?"

He wanted to comprehend more about Felix's identity, but he comprehended that such a query would get aired. As for attacking him with his army? He didn't dare entertain the thought.

In his eyes, the fact he came here so soon without a single wound on him was terrifying on its own.

"I have dealt with Apollo or what you usually call the King of Darkness." Felix shared calmly, "You don't have to worry about him ever again."

"You did what?" Krell's eyes widened up in disbelief, his reaction shared by the rest of the troops.

"Believe me or not, I don't care." Felix focused on Quantix Prime and inquired calmly, "I am only here to ask about Commander Bia. Why isn't she with your troops."

When her name was brought up, everyone went silent. The moment Felix noticed that some of them showed a mournful expression, his attitude changed entirely.

"Where is she?"

This time, his query was followed by a frigid aura, causing everyone to freeze in their place.
