

Supremacy 1881

Chapter 1881 I Have Long Awaited This.

"Huh?"

Before Lilith could answer him, Felix and the tenants were shocked to see her body suddenly breaking into light particles.

"Looks like it's my time. Ah, I was so close."

Lilith giggled with an unbothered expression as she watched her own soul slowly disintegrate into a cloud of light.

She turned to Felix and blew him a loving kiss, then she said, "Don't forget about me, little cutie."

As the last word left her mouth, her entire being faded away, akin to a string of fireflies dying as a collective, their light illuminating one last time...

Felix and the rest of the tenants could only watch the now-empty throne, collapsing into nothingness, marking Lilith's sudden passing...

"Is this real..."

As much as Felix tried to deny it, tried to disbelieve it, his specialized divine detection ability didn't pick on Lilith's aura anywhere.

There were only two auras left behind, his own, and Asna's after soul finally completed its recovery.

Before he could think too much about this unexpected twist of events, Asna's core suddenly turned as bright as daylight and started pulsing with celestial aura, akin to the awakening of a divine deity!

Then, it left his body, making him switch his vision to his real eyes, gazing at her radiant core floating away in the void.

Felix and the tenants watched in awe as the core turned into a milky white cocoon before releasing a massive pillar of light that pierced through the dimensions!

It kept cutting through the fabric of space and time until it painted the same image of Felix's ascension in everyone's eyes.

Within the pillar of light, Asna's body began to take a humanoid shape, each detail meticulously formed by the celestial energy.

Felix, completely forgotten about Lilith, could only watch with a slightly opened mouth and widened eyes as his beloved woman possessed her own body at last.

Her flawless fair skin emerged from the light, followed by the flowing waterfall of her crimson red hair, resembling the deepest flames of a sunset.

Her body was perfectly sculpted, with an elegant figure and curves that would turn anyone straight with a single glance.

She wasn't wearing anything, but the divine light covered the majority of her silky smooth milky skin.

As the light began to dim down, her other divine features came to light, starting with her eyes.

Two brilliant amber orbs, glowing like miniature suns, matching greatly with her delicate plump lips.

They curved into a subtle smile as her rebirth was finally completed.

Felix stood speechless, his eyes locked onto Asna.

She was always the most beautiful girl in the room, but looking at her in her flesh gave him an entirely different sensation.

It was like he was staring into a drawn goddess that could be touched and felt in the real world!

Even the tenants were captivated by the sight, unable to remove their stares away from the reborn goddess before them.

Asna took a step forward, her movements were fluid and graceful as if she had never been absent.

Her eyes met Felix's, and the world around them seemed to fade away for a moment...There was an understanding between them, a connection that transcended words.

"Asna, my love..." Felix mumbled as he stretched his hand forward, his twitching fingers speaking volumes of his emotional instability.

He could control his emotions as a celestial, but not here, not now...He allowed his body to express itself akin to any other mortal.

This made him feel like he was living in a dream, a dream that he had longed for so long...

"Felix," Asna's voice was soft, but sent a wave of emotion over Felix, "I'm back."

Those words were enough to pacify Felix's heart akin to a cool breeze washing over him in a hot summer.

He stepped toward her, unable to contain the smile that spread across his face. He then got hold of her hands, intertwining their fingers for the first time ever with their real bodies.

"I thought for a second that I lost you..."

Felix stated as he brought her into his embrace, holding her back firmly while using the other hand to gently caress her hair.

Asna enjoyed his touch very much and buried her head in his chest, hugging him back as tight as possible.

She longed for her freedom for so long, this moment should have been thrilled and over the moon. But now, she was happy just by reuniting with her beloved. She didn't even care if she was free or not, she just wanted to be with him.

After a long-lasting beautiful embrace between two celestials, Felix pulled Asna away a little and gazed adoringly in her star-like eyes.

"How I patiently craved for this moment, for this very, moment." He murmured while caressing her cheek with his hand, feeling her every pore and perfection in his palm.

"I was waiting for this." Asna showed a delicate smile and pulled his face towards hers slowly until their lips connected.

Time slowed as their lips met, the kiss soft and tender at first, seemingly reminding them of a gentle connection that spoke of both relief and longing.

But as the moment deepened, so did the kiss, growing more passionate, more intense, as if they were making up for every moment they had been apart.

Asna's arms wrapped around Felix's neck, tugging him closer, while Felix's palms slid down to her waist, anchoring her against him.

The world around them ceased to exist, there was only the warmth of the kiss, the shortness of their breaths, and the undeniable bond between them.

"Pure love is the purest form of art..."

Apollo smiled in fondness as he played a soft melody with his lyre, elevating this beautiful memory even higher.

Felix and Asna seemed to not even hear the soft and ethereal notes drifting through the air, wrapping them like a tender embrace.

As the lyre's melody filled the space, each chord resonated with the depth of their bond.

A serene lullaby that underscored the softness of their kiss. It was as if the lyre itself was singing of their love, its voice a whispering breeze that carried the promise of forever.

But, what made moments beautiful and unforgivable were their short finality.

As the music was coming to an end, Felix and Asna opened their eyes as they slowly pulled apart their lips.

They left their foreheads to rest against each other, both breathing heavily, seemingly savoring the closeness they had both craved for so long...

As their loving stares met, a soft smile played on Felix's lips.

"I have also waited for this."

"Not as much as me," Asna smiled back, her eyes shining with love.

Then, she leaned for another kiss, sealing the moment with the promise of many more to come.

Chapter 1882 A Sacrifice or Ploy?

After they separated for the second time, Felix's expression turned solemn. He told Asna about what just happened and how if it wasn't for Lilith, he would have been forced to blow her soul to rescue her.

Then, he asked with a serious tone, "Do you feel any change within you? I refuse to believe that Lilith has sacrificed her life for your sake."

"Hmm, nothing?" Asna shook her head, "If she has done something to my soul or core, I would know it."

"I see..." While he trusted Asna's words, he still refused to accept such a turn of events. He would rather trust in the universe ceasing to exist all of a sudden than accept Lilith's sacrifice.

"You said she was able to use my core-based defensive abilities." Asna analyzed thoughtfully.

"Yes, and she disappeared after using just one." Felix inquired, "What do you think? In my eyes, if she can use them, then, she is no different than being the owner of your core. This is simply impossible on so many levels."

"True, even you could give simple commands to my core due to your thin connection with the universe's consciousness." Asna nodded seriously, "Yet, she seemed to have higher authority over you."

"I know, it's simply illogical." Felix frowned, "let's examine with a wish."

Felix went on and wished for the answer from the universe, paying whatever price was needed. The answer he received wasn't to his expectation.

"She is really gone?" His pupils enlarged in shock.

He assumed that the universe would at least not answer him, believing that Lilith might have done something that not even the universe would pick up on.

Alas, his suspicion came back negative.

Now, he had no clue what to think.

All of his senses were screaming at him that Lilith would never come this far and kill herself for Asna's sake... Yet, everything pointed to her truly being gone.

"Maybe she... I don't know, I didn't interact enough with that slut to understand what goes in her mind." Asna waved her hand carelessly, dropping the matter entirely.

Although Lilith had saved her, she didn't feel an ounce of appreciation. She had heard about how she exploited her man to gain access to her core.

She was more pissed about what she did to Felix than the fact she resided in her core for such a long time.

Also, the fact she always flirted with Felix didn't help her case at all.

"Let me in, I wanna meet with big sis and the others."

"Ah, alright."

While Asna seemed to have thrown the matter at the back of her mind and just wanted to reunite with her lover and friends, Felix just couldn't do the same.

As he watched Asna hug his masters and laugh joyfully, he couldn't help but narrow his eyes at her back.

'Lilith, I understand your saga isn't going to end this anti-climactically.' He thought coldly, 'I have no clue what you planned, but I am never going to let my protection down, never again.'

...

Felix wasn't the only one taken back by what Lilith had done. The three rulers were still staring into nothingness in silence, questioning their reality.

They had everything planned to obtain Asna's core, anticipating every move that Felix was about to make.

Even his attack on her soul wouldn't work, as they were going to protect it with their divine barrier.

While it wasn't going to hold that much, it didn't matter. Asna's soul would have already been completed by then.

The only thing they never expected was for Lilith to have the authority to use the core-based abilities of a core that wasn't hers!

"I don't understand..." Medusa murmured, "How can this happen? How can she do that? Is there something we are missing?"

"Lilith." Amun-Ra gritted his teeth, "Ever since she returned from the Echoing Tower's mission, she has been acting up."

"It's true, she tried to steal the universe's heart for some reason even though she knew it was impossible to move it, forcing our hands to banish her." Medusa frowned, "After her banishment, she created the void race and the demon race. Now this? It's like she knows something we don't."

"That's exactly it." The first ruler stated calmly, "I don't understand what kind of information she has, but all of her actions seemed geared to help the paragon defeat us."

"True, without the void race or demon race, his development would have hit a wall before his ascension." Medusa nodded, "But, I always thought that she was doing this for her sake, betting on him to help her reach the other side."

This was what everyone had thought too, believing that Lilith would do anything to obtain her freedom...But now? No one was so sure.

"Now what?" Amun-Ra turned to the prophecy tablet, "The tablet has guaranteed that we will obtain Asna's core. But, we failed, and worse of all, we allowed Asna to land in the paragon's hands while he could farm a boundless amount of celestial energy from the universe."

Both rulers' expressions turned solemn, understanding that if Asna were to awaken, their peaceful lives would be no more.

Even if she wasn't the universe's consciousness replacement as everyone assumed, her awakening would still put her at a scary level.

After all, she was allowed to roam the universe as a unigin/celestial, but after her awakening, she would be a true celestial.

While they didn't understand if the universe would force her to enter the eternal kingdom or not, they were certain she would come for them on her own. After their heinous treatment of her, she was bound to seek revenge.

"The prophecy tablet has changed..." The first ruler frowned, "Asna's core has vanished from the instructions."

"It did." Amun-Ra's expression went cold as he gazed at the empty prophecy tablet, "There are no further instructions."

The only thing remaining was the black hole at the very top, but the rest of the instructions were all erased.

"Does this mean we are left to our own devices?" Medusa questioned.

They had been following the tablet's instructions for billions of years, it felt weird to act on something that wasn't instructed on them.

"Damn it, did we just waste our time on nothing?" Amun-Ra cursed.

All three of them were so desperate to reach the other side, that they were willing to follow the instructions of a tablet with unknown origins.

While they knew that wasn't the smartest decision, desperation called for desperate choices.

Still, they did hope that the ending would be to their benefit.

But now, it seemed like all of their efforts had done nothing but help one mortal climb to unimaginable heights.

A climb that was so impressive, it wouldn't have been possible without such instructions. Luck might have played a huge part, but still, those instructions provided the outline.

"Both of you are missing the big picture..." The first ruler remarked calmly, seemingly unaffected by such disappointing results.

He looked at the empty tablet and shared with a knowing tone, "The tablet has done exactly what we wanted from it. It gave birth to two new celestials who will be coming at us with everything they got."

"If you value and desire your freedom, we are left with only one step." His voice turned frigid all of a sudden, "Prepare for a war as the final winner will have what it takes to break the universe's heart and reach the other side."

Chapter 1883 A Date Across The Universe.

In the first ruler's eyes, the tablet had delivered the promised result after they respected all of its instructions.

While it wasn't the greatest outcome, he understood that if they managed to defeat both Asna and Felix, their celestial cores plus Felix's unigin cores would be more than enough to brute force the universe's heart to open up.

"We always had doubts if Asna's core will be enough, but two celestial cores are done deal." Amun-Ra smiled coldly.

"It will be enough, but Asna's awakening won't make it any easier for us." Medusa frowned.

She knew that the moment Asna awakened, her spiritual consciousness would surpass theirs. In addition, she might be able to tap into the invincible laws of creation and destruction.

She would be more of a hassle to deal with than Felix!

"The universe is a fair place." The first ruler said calmly, "The moment Asna awakens, all of her powers will come at a grave price."

The three rulers were also considered part of the universe's system and were under its protective rules.

Just like there were many things they couldn't do without getting punished, the first rulers were certain that the universe would limit Asna's powers if she tried to abuse them.

"Also, we still have that..." The first ruler narrowed his eyes icily, "Whether she awakens or not, whether they ally against us or not, their fate is sealed the moment they dare step inside the Eternal Kingdom."

Medusa and Amun-Ra understood immediately what he was talking about.

"Then, let's begin our preparations," Amun-Ra uttered coldly.

While the three rulers had kicked off their preparations for the upcoming war, knowing that only one side was going to emerge in one piece, Felix and Asna seemed to be spending their lives in ignorant bliss.

He told her about everything that occurred in her absence; the ascension, the fight with Ares, his ability to deconstruct celestial energy, and more.

She even met with Eris and Apollo at last...Knowing that they had saved Felix's life and were a great help for his journey, she decided to pardon them for what happened in the past.

If it was for any other reason, she wouldn't have bothered to give them a single moment of her day.

Of course, she didn't forget to tease Nimo after not meeting him for god knows how much time now.

Right now, both of them were supervising Apollo's mission of invading the matter universe with the dark creatures.

After Felix ascended with Ares' core and obtained his laws, there was no point in waiting until Apollo created enough dark creatures...One was more than enough.

"Here we go," Apollo said as he released the dark army into an already-prepared dimensional gap.

The dark creatures swam across and emerged inside the atomic world of a plant in the process of controlled evolution.

Amidst the cluttered landscape, Felix merely gazed at the dark army and his pupils started spinning clockwise.

With each spin, the dark army grew bigger and bigger. In no time, the dark army emerged from within the plant, covering it entirely like a virus!

"As expected, Ares' laws of infinity are so much better."

Apollo grinned in delight as he watched his army be welcomed to the matter universe for the first time after god knows how many attempts.

While his dark alter ego wanted this the most, Apollo was still affected by his obsession to make this dream a reality.

The moment the dark creatures appeared in the universe, Felix and the rest waited silently as they looked around them.

A few moments later, Apollo's grin widened. "Looks like we are golden."

"Good, it would have been annoying to manipulate the rules manually." Felix nodded.

While Apollo's alter ego seemed certain that the universe wouldn't interfere with his dark creatures if he brought them from the quantum realm, there wasn't any concrete proof.

"The universe has forbidden the birth of the dark creatures, but not their transportation from one dimension to another." Thor said, "It's quite weird, to be honest, you would expect the universe to be more thorough."

"It's not that bizarre." Lady Sphinx shook her head, "The universe limits plenty of imbalanced creatures from appearing in its main body and other realms. But, the quantum realm is a different story."

"It should have been impossible for any quantum native to ever step into the matter universe and cause actual damage to its structure."

"The dark creatures would have been the same without the many loopholes and walls needed to skip over to bring just one."

When she finished, everyone's eyes were on the blob of dark matter with its two crimson eyes peering everywhere.

It looked harmless and could be killed with just a touch, but every one of them knew that this creature could literally bring armageddon to the entire universe.

"Do your thing, I will visit you when you collect enough."

"Leave it to me."

Felix gave Apollo a head nod and took off with Asna, having no interest in continuing to supervise the project.

Apollo only needed to use the infinite dark matter and energy of the universe to reproduce the dark creatures. Then, choose deserted galaxies and other celestial cosmic entities for nourishment and growth.

In this manner, Felix would have a decent source of farming celestial energy besides the void realm, accelerating his preparations. But for now, his head was no longer on such things.

He was finally with Asna in the flesh and both of them could be said to be at the top of the universe with only three beings capable of halting their music.

Those three beings couldn't access the matter universe even if they tried.

In other words, this was no different than finally obtaining a part of the freedom they always desired.

Felix and Asna planned on making the best of it.

...

"Where do you wanna go?" Felix inquired with a gentle smile as he held Asna's hand.

"I don't care as long as it is with you." Asna smiled back.

"Alright then, let me assist you experience the true beauty of our universe."

Felix knew that ever since Asna was born, she hadn't traveled the universe once in the flesh. She spent her childhood in the eternal kingdom and sealed in the imprisonment grounds.

While she lived in the UVR for many years and tasted a high level of realism, it would never be as good as the real deal.

Thus, he planned on making it up to her and taking her everywhere, starting with uncharted worlds, each one more fascinating than the last.

They walked hand in hand on a planet with towering crystal forests and under the light of twin moons.

Felix playfully conjured tiny flames that danced around them, while Asna's laughter resounded like music in the crystal-clear atmosphere.

In another world, they explored an ancient city carved into the cliffs of a mountain range that stretched above the clouds.

The architecture might have been lost to time but it spoke of a forgotten civilization that once reached for the stars.

Together, they uncovered forgotten secrets, seemingly enjoying a playful game with each other on who could find out first the reason for the fall of the civilization.

Of course, Asna ended up winning as Felix was still stressed out by her tantrums.

Soon, they moved to the World Tree, the fairy's dimensional pocket, the hive's nest, and then to different realms, jumping from the spirit realm, the shadow realm, to the quantum realm, making sure to explore all of their mysteries as well.

Before long, their travels took them to the edge of the universe, where the light of distant stars began to fade into the unknown.

Felix created a small cozy house with its garden and sat with Asna on a swing. He wrapped an arm around Asna's waist, pulling her close while she rested her head on his shoulder.

In the silence of the void, they discovered peace in each other's presence, a fantasy for many, but only a few lucky ones could experience.

"This is it...This is everything I have ever wished for..." Asna cuddled in Felix's arms as she murmured with a gentle smile, "For this very moment, I don't mind giving up on everything."

Asna was imprisoned for twenty million years by the closest beings to her, a family one would say...Such betrayal had damaged her to no end, making one of her long-lost dreams to avenge her childhood.

Yet, such hatred, such trauma, in this very moment, she genuinely had no problems giving up on them just to continue living in peace with her beloved.

But, Felix thought otherwise.

"It's too soon to retire, Asna," Felix narrowed his eyes, "As long as three rulers are alive, as long as we don't find out the verity of this universe, we will be living in a state of insincere happiness."

"But most importantly," Felix said coldly, "The three rulers will never give up on reaching the other side. I have no interest in watching them do it."

As much as Asna enjoyed this moment, she knew that he was right. Still, she pouted in annoyance, "You sure know how to ruin a romantic moment."

Chapter 1884 Is This Enough of a Romantic Moment?

"You call that a romantic moment?"

Felix suddenly smiled as he slowly turned the swing to the other side and pointed his finger at the infinite void.

Still annoyed, Asna squinted her eyes in the direction he was pointing his finger.

"What am I suppose...Huh, is that.."

Suddenly, she covered her mouth in shock as her widened breathtaking eyes reflected a sparkle at a great distance.

Anyone else wouldn't be able to see past a distance sparkle, but in Asna's eyes, she witnessed countless galaxies rearranged across the vast canvas of the cosmos.

Rearranged into a pattern that had her breath caught in her throat as she realized what was happening.

The galaxies, glowing softly in the distance, spelled out the words:

Will You Marry Me?

This sentence rang akin to thunder in her mind over and over again, making her feel like the most loved woman in the universe.

The beauty, the thoughtfulness, the love, it was all too much, and she felt her heart pounding in her chest.

"You...How...When..."

Before she could even find her voice, Felix turned to face her, his expression filled with warmth and affection.

With a smooth graceful movement, he dropped onto one knee, his gaze never leaving hers.

He reached into the space beside him and brought out a ring that seemed to defy the very laws of the cosmos.

It was a masterpiece of cosmic artistry, crafted from minimized galaxies held together in perfect harmony.

The band glimmered with the light of countless stars, seemingly each one representing the infinite moments they had shared together.

At its center, a black hole was suspended, but instead of pulling in light, it emitted a radiant glow that formed the shape of a dazzling diamond.

"Asna," Felix spoke with a voice filled with sincere love, "From the moment we met, you have been the light of my life, the force that drives me forward. We've explored the universe together, fought countless battles together, and seen wonders beyond imagination, and through it all, you've been by my side. I can't imagine a future without you."

Felix paused and then asked with a faint loving smile, "Will you marry me?"

Tears welled up in Asna's eyes, her emotions overwhelming her. The sight of Felix, the man she loved, kneeling before her with the universe itself as his witness, was something she had never expected.

Unable to hold back her emotions any longer, Asna nodded, her voice trembling with joy. "Yes, Felix... yes, I will marry you!"

A brilliant smile spread across Felix's face as he gently slid the ring onto her finger, the galaxies within it glittering as they found their new home.

"Hahah! Now, that's a proposal! Congratulation!"

Thor applauded on with a boastful laugh as he watched them hug each other tightly before turning it into a deep loving kiss.

"Ahh, I am so envious..." Candace bit her nails, desiring exactly what Felix and Asna had even though she was a succubus.

"Tsk, it would have been more romantic if I was there to play a tune."

Apollo clicked his tongue while playing with the lyre, feeling like he had wasted such a beautiful moment.

"Shut it and let them enjoy their moment." Eris quietened him down with a single glare.

Meanwhile, Felix and Asna didn't seem to even hear them. Their lips never left each other, making them feel like they were in their own world.

Soon...

"Is this enough of a romantic moment for you?" Felix chuckled after breaking off Asna's lips.

"Hehehe, more than enough." Asna giggled as she snuggled against his chest. Then, she asked, "How did you pull it off? I thought I had close eyes on you?"

"It wasn't really that difficult." Felix grinned as he narrated, "To succeed, I had to make sure my intentions stay hidden from everyone. So, I allocated the ring duties to one clone and the galaxy's arrangement to another."

"Both of them possessed most of my powers, making it quite effortless to pull deserted galaxies closer together in a specific way." Felix smiled wryly, "The ring was a different story though."

Asna extended her hand, gazing at the magnificent gleaming ring with great fascination and love.

"You must have used the powers of infinity to shrink galaxies and seal them in the ring forever, right?" Asna answered with a big grin as she played with the ring on her finger.

"If only it was that easy." Felix shook his head, "Shrinking and sealing entire galaxies into something so small took more effort than I ever imagined. The real challenge, though, was keeping them stable."

He indicated to the black hole at the center of the ring, its light reflecting in her sun-like eyes.

"This black hole has its own gravitational pull, carefully calibrated to spin the galaxies around it at just the right speed."

"It creates a delicate balance, preventing them from ever crashing into each other. As long as it spins, the galaxies will remain in perfect orbit, forever held together by the force of its gravity."

Asna's gaze softened as she listened, her heart swelling with affection.

"You did all that for me?" she whispered, touched by the depth of his effort.

"Of course. I wanted this ring to be as eternal as our love, something that will last forever, just like us." He grinned as he caressed her cheek.

"Hehehe, aren't you becoming a bit cheesy?"

Although she was saying this to poke fun at him, everyone could see that she was loving every bit of it.

"I was always cheesy, I just never got the chance to express it." Felix winked jokingly.

"Alright alright, don't push me too far." Asna chuckled, "You are making me feel like I am going to pounce on you."

"What if that's what I wanted?"

Felix brought her in closer to him while his hand was snaking under her clothes, attempting to pray on her delicate parts.

"Behave, don't be bad now, we already waited this far along, might as well do it right after our wedding." Asna chuckled as she dragged his hand away.

"Wedding huh?" Felix smiled, unbothered by her rejection. "What do you have in mind? Something big and glamorous or small and family-friendly?"

"You already handled the big and glamorous part, I just want something small and cozy." Asna smiled, "Maybe a wedding in your consciousness space? Everyone I care about is already there."

"I feel the same." Felix agreed.

The instant a decision was made, everyone chimed into their conversation.

"Leave the music to me," Apollo smirked.

"Then, I will handle designing the venue." Cyclope proposed.

"I guess I will oversee the process." Candace smiled.

Most tenants presented their talents in hopes of creating the best possible wedding for those two celestials.

Felix and Asna merely glanced at each other and chuckled, leaving them to handle things out...Of course, as the bride, Asna was going to keep a piercing eye on everything.

While Felix seemed to be living in romantic bliss, a big part of him was occupied with just one thought.

'What are they preparing for us...'

He thought as his eyes roamed to the infinite void, seemingly desiring to know all of the three rulers' cards.

While he should feel at peace, knowing that Asna's breakthrough was enough to deal with the three rulers, deep down, he felt that things weren't going to be in their favor...

Chapter 1885 A Small, Simple Wedding.

Time went by as the day of the big wedding had arrived at last.

Candace had done a great job organizing the wedding by turning the town plaza into the ceremony stage and decorating it with petals, vines, and blooming flowers.

The tenants were sitting on white chairs side by side while their eyes were affixed on Felix, who was standing underneath an arch crafted out of white wood.

Felix wore a finely tailored suit, elevating his celestial breathtaking appearance to a new height.

He had a faint gentle smile as he gazed at the other side, awaiting the arrival of his soon-to-be wife.

Asna didn't keep the party waiting as she emerged from a pathway lined with blooming roses, her presence lighting up the entire garden.

She wore a beautiful white gown that was adorned with delicate flowers, matching the glow in her eyes.

With each step taken, her eyes glowed more, seemingly impatient to tie the knot with the love of her life.

'Those love birds are finally together...' Thor remarked, holding in his emotions.

'I still remember them bickering and fighting each second.' J?rmungandr smiled, 'Now, they can't get enough of each other.'

The rest of the tenants watched in silence, their hearts gushing with pride and joy for the couple they had grown to care for so deeply. Each of them knew how much this moment meant to Felix and Asna, and they were honored to be part of it.

Soon, Asna reached Felix's side, taking his hands in hers, their fingers intertwining perfectly.

They exchanged a soft knowing smile and then turned to face the officiator. Elder Kraken had offered to do the honor and no one fought him for it.

With a gentle but authoritative voice, Elder Kraken spoke, "Felix, Asna, we are gathered here in this garden of life, to witness the union of two souls who have traveled through the cosmos together, forging a bond stronger than the stars themselves."

Felix and Asna shared a glance, their hands tightly clasped together, feeling the gravity of the moment.

Elder Kraken scanned the gathered tenants, and then turned his attention back to the couple.

"Marriage is a journey," Elder Kraken continued, "much like the journey you both have already taken. It is filled with challenges, triumphs, and moments of both joy and sorrow. But it is a journey that, when taken with love and commitment, leads to a union that transcends time and space."

Elder Kraken paused for a moment and then smiled at Felix, "Before the gathered witnesses and the cosmos itself, I ask you both: Do you, Felix, take Asna as your partner, to stand by her side through all of life's trials and joys, to protect, cherish, and love her for all eternity?"

"I do." Felix's voice was firm and filled with emotion.

"And do you, Asna, take Felix as your partner, to walk beside him through all of life's adventures, to support, honor, and love him for all eternity?"

"I do." Asna said softly, her amber eyes shining with unshed tears.

With those words, Elder Kraken raised his tentacles in a graceful gesture.

"Then by the ancient powers I wield, and in the presence of all who stand here, I declare you bound in love and unity, for now and for all time."

The garden seemed to bloom even more vibrantly as the declaration was made, flowers bursting into full bloom and the air filling with the scent of life itself.

Elder Kraken's eyes beamed with satisfaction as he spoke the final blessing. "You may kiss the bride."

Felix and Asna turned to each other, their eyes locking with a deep, unspoken connection.

As they leaned in to share their first kiss as a married couple, the tenants erupted into joyful applause, their cheers echoing through the garden, while Elder Kraken observed over the scene with a faint, knowing smile.

As Asna desired, the wedding was simple, family-friendly, and small. Felix wanted to invite his friends but then realized that it was best not to.

Whether it was Selphie, Bodidi, or Olivia, all of them were living their new lives away from his chaotic life.

It was best not to invite them back in, not when the three rulers had their eyes on him akin to a hawk, hoping for him to show a tint of weakness.

Thus, he kept them in the dark and went on his way to their honeymoon.

Felix chose no other place than his beloved home, Earth.

After arriving, Felix and Asna turned up at a small cottage near a lake with trees surrounding them everywhere.

"Wife."

Felix extended his hand welcomingly towards the entrance of the cottage's door with a big smile.

"Husband, aren't you planning to carry me in?" Asna giggled, seemingly not used to calling each other this way.

"You are strong enough to carry galaxies, yet still acting this way." Felix rolled his eyes at her antics.

Still, he went on and carried her like a princess, watching her play with her feet in enjoyment as he walked inside the cottage.

"You questioned for this."

With a sly grin, Felix suddenly kept walking towards the bedroom instead of putting her down. "I am not ready yet!"

Asna hit the back of his back in protest, but she didn't seem like she was truly against the idea.

Her protests were more a shy display than anything.

After entering the bedroom, Felix placed her gently on the bed while she was still in her stunning wedding gown.

He grinned softly as he touched her cheek, memories of their time together in the UVR surfaced in his mind.

They had pretty much done everything besides the real deal.

Felix was happier than ever to know that they had saved this special moment, instead of wasting it in a virtual simulation.

"Tonight, I am all yours,"

Asna whispered as she matched the love in his eyes, knowing that there was nothing to be nervous about.

Slowly, Felix leaned in, capturing her lips in a tender kiss that deepened with every passing second.

The world outside ceased to exist as they lost themselves in each other, their connection growing stronger with every touch, every breath.

As their kiss became more passionate, Felix's hands slid down her back, pulling her closer, feeling the warmth of her body against his.

Soon, their bodies pressed together, the warmth between them growing as they explored each other with a mixture of tenderness and desire.

The night was filled with whispered words, soft gasps, and the quiet rustle of sheets as they consummated their marriage, their bond becoming physical at last.

As two celestials, the moment they let go of their control, their intertwined bodies released great amounts of heavenly energy, lighting up the entire cottage and the surrounding area.

Outside, the lake gleamed under their light, a perfect reflection of the love that flowed between them...

The tenants had no clue about any of this as Felix had already sealed the connection, leaving them up to speculate.

As the cottage was filled with content moans and rough breathing, one could only wonder how long would they last...After all, it was near impossible for celestials to be exhausted from such activity.

Yet, no one would have ever expected them to go at it for more than four seasons, never leaving their bedroom even once!

After an entire year of going at it strong, it looked like they still had no plans of stopping anytime soon...

They had been waiting for this moment for so long, it wouldn't be farfetched to think they may never leave the bedroom!

Chapter 1886 Watch What You Wish For.

Felix and Asna went on to spend their honeymoon in each other's embrace, making up to all the years of the separation.

Since farming celestial energy was going to take hundreds of thousands of years if not millions before the process started to slow down, they didn't feel the need to put a stop to their honeymoon.

Just like that, close to a hundred thousand years had gone by in the matter universe...

For immortals like Felix and Asna, those years went by in the blink of an eye without much of a change in their daily lives.

However, the same couldn't be said about the SGAlliance and the universe as a whole.

A hundred thousand years was more than enough for thousands of civilizations to rise and fall.

Still, the biggest change had to be related to the human race. After this much time passed, new generations came to life and old ones died out eventually.

After all, the average lifespan of even the strongest bloodliners was less than a hundred thousand years unless their bloodlines boosted their longevity.

There was no need to mention the commoners.

After most of the old generation passed on, the new generation came in stronger than ever with their new elemental cultivation system.

The universe had helped the humans born from the generation that Felix helped.

This resulted in the birth of powerful and capable humans across the entire Milky Way galaxy.

They were so strong that most races feared and respected the human race as a collective now, pushing their rank to the top three in the SGAlliance!

They were only below the Watchers and Dragons!

This time, they did it as a collective instead of relying on a few individuals to carry them.

Of course, while Felix had done most of the work, this kind of development wouldn't have been possible without Olivia.

After a hundred thousand years, little Oli had already grown to be one of the biggest pillars in the SGAlliance and the human race.

She also got married and had kids, and her kids had kids too, creating her own Maxwell Dynasty.

Each time Felix checked on her, he always felt happy and proud of what she had become. Of course, he didn't show himself but he did help her maintain her youthful appearance forever by manipulating some reality strings.

As for Noah? Felix had received news from Lord Hades that he had finally found his little sister's soul and brought her to the heavenly plane.

The moment Felix received the news, he requested Lord Hades to delete Noah's memories about his promise of finding his grandfather.

He just wanted him to expend his time with his little sister instead of chasing after his grandfather's spirit when he could easily do it.

Noah had no clue about any of this and spent his days in the heavenly plane, continuing to protect his little sister akin to her guardian angel.

Meanwhile, Bodidi had become a big shot in the space worm's transportation company and was living his life to the fullest, building his own tribe and eating whatever that came to his mind.

This had made him so fat, that Felix feared that he would end up blowing up from too plenty food instead of dying a natural death.

As an old friend, Felix did him a small favor and manipulated his reality to make him unable to gain weight regardless of the food he consumed.

Last but not least, Selphie. She had already grown to be a fine Queen of the Elves, replacing Queen Alfreda.

She threw herself into her elven empire, elevating the elves' position higher in the alliance.

But, unlike Olivia, she never got married or seemed to bother with the notion of finding someone to tie the knot with. Her fingers were ringless and she seemed to be adamant about leaving them as such.

This was exactly what Felix had feared would happen when he wanted to help her move on by getting rid of their race's obsessive nature. Alas, she made her decision to leave her emotions be and he respected it.

All he could do was pray for her from a distance while making sure to never come in contact with her as he knew that it would do nothing but open a massive wound in her heart...

Hundred thousand years, a long, very long period for some, but a mere seconds for few.

At the moment, Felix and Asna could be seen sitting on the balcony of their small house at the edge of the universe.

"How plenty celestial energy did you collect by now?" Asna asked casually.

"I am sure it's enough to secure your awakening plus have plenty more for the battle." Felix smiled, "The boys have been hard at work."

He wasn't lying as Apollo, Nimo, and his clones had been hard at labour deconstructing entire galaxies and bringing them into either void creatures, dark creatures, or just clusters of mixed energy.

Felix then turned them into celestial energy and stored it within him.

After a hundred thousand years, he had an unimaginable amount of celestial energy that would make even the three rulers envious.

"Why are you asking?" Felix sensed a change in her energy.

"I don't know, it feels too peaceful..." Asna replied while gazing above her, "Maybe I am just being paranoid for no reason, but I expected those old fogies to make a move by now."

"Make a move?" Felix raised an eyebrow, "How? They can't enter or use their full powers here without the universe's interference."

Felix also used to be a bit paranoid, thinking that the three rulers would find a way to come at them regardless of the circumstances.

After all, they had been coming at him nonstop way before. But, he came to accept their hopelessness, knowing that it was simply impossible.

"They might not be able to target us, but they can steep low and target the mortals." Asna frowned, "I know you have your friends protected, but the rest of the universe is a free target."

Felix narrowed his eyes in silence. He would be lying if he said that this wicked thought never crossed his mind.

He knew that the three rulers were more than capable of killing entire civilizations without erupting a universal's wrath.

The universe didn't care plenty about the death of the mortals, but more so about the way they proceeded off.

For example, if Felix were to slap a mortal to death, the universe wouldn't care. But, if he were to abuse his laws to make it happen, then it would be a different story.

Just like how the three rulers have smitten Felix and got scott-free, they could do the same with the others.

That's why Felix had placed celestial protection on his friends without them knowing about it.

"I doubt they will go for it." Felix soon shook his head, "They know as celestials our emotions can't be manipulated."

"I know, but I still have a bad feeling..." Asna's pupils thinned, "For those monsters, there is no such a thing as limits. Even if they knew such a method might not work, they will still try it."

"Let them give it their best." Felix remarked coldly, "I am not coming at them unless I have enough celestial energy to bury them once and for all."

Sometimes, one should double-check what he was wishing for...

...

In a peaceful city, where the sun shone brightly and children's laughter filled the air, an ominous alteration suddenly took place.

Without warning, the sky darkened, and then bolts of sizzling golden light rained down from the heavens, striking indiscriminately!

The first to be hit was a group of children playing in a park...

The bright lightning bolts pierced through them, their joyful screams turning into cries of agony as their bodies crumpled to the ground, lifeless.

"Maika?" "Dea..ea...r."

"Ah...Ah...AAAAAAAAA!!!"

The parents sitting on the benches, chatting and laughing just earlier, were now staring at the ruined corpses of their children with horrified looks.

Before the trauma could even register in their minds, the golden bolts landed on them a moment later, killing them instantly...

This situation wasn't happening just in the park, but across the entire planet as men and women, young and old, were struck down by the same unforgiving force.

The light was not just a weapon, it was a merciless executioner, delivering death in the most excruciating manner possible.

Entire families were obliterated in an instant, their homes shattered by the divine wrath descending upon them.

The scene was one of pure horror, an unprovoked massacre that defied all logic.

The planet chosen for such a slaughter was none other than Mars in the solar system.

This caused Felix to sense the disturbance from his clone situated on Earth for its protection. When he extended his senses and noticed the ongoing massacre, his expression couldn't help but turn cold.

"They really proceeded for it." He uttered with an icy tone as he shared the scenes with Asna and the tenants.

Chapter 1887 A Universal Massacre!

"Felix, bad news." Lord Loki reported with a solemn tone, "I am afraid this is happening on a galaxy scale. I am receiving news that millions of humans are getting dropped akin to flies each second."

"This is horrible." J?rmungandr frowned, "Are they seeking to exterminate the entire human race?"

"They don't care as long as it pushes Felix and Asna to enter the Eternal Kingdom," Fenrir uttered.

On the other side, the three rulers were seen sitting on their platforms while having thousands of spiritual mirrors opened before them. Each mirror was showing a different massacre occurring across the entire Milky Way Galaxy.

Pained screams and children's cries resounded loudly in the dimensional pocket, yet, the three rulers didn't seem moved in the slightest.

"Let's see how far can he hold." Amun-Ra smiled coldly.

"He might be a celestial, but his origins are still of a mortal birth." Medusa said calmly, "As much as he can control his emotions, he isn't going to stand in the corner and watch his origin get erased because of him."

The three rulers seemed to be right as the moment Felix found out that the entire galaxy was under attack, he teleported near it and didn't hesitate to cast a celestial barrier around it.

The celestial barrier immediately intercepted the three rulers' divine thunderstorms and put a halt to this unprovoked madness.

When the three rulers saw this, they weren't bothered...Instead, faint smiles painted their divine visages, anticipating this kind of reaction.

They knew it was the only way to protect the galaxy from attacks since they were using divinities.freeWebnove].com

"Switch target." With the same cold intent, the three rulers dropped the Milky Way Galaxy and targeted the Witch Empire!

When Felix received the news, he swiftly sent a clone to create the same celestial barrier, not wanting the eradication of his master's legacy.

Unfortunately, this was just the beginning...

The three rulers left no race or empire untouched, creating a wide-scale panic across the SGAlliance.

The SGAlliance's leaders found themselves overwhelmed by the sheer scale of the disaster.

Emergency broadcasts echoed across every communication channel, urging people to stay indoors and seek shelter, but even they knew it was futile.

The thunderclouds were too powerful, too random...There was no pattern to the destruction, no logic to the strikes, just chaos and instant death!

Meanwhile, Felix was left with a dire decision.

He could either protect the entire SGAlliance at a great cost of celestial energy or choose the most important targets to him personally and leave the rest to survive on their own.

In both cases, he would be wasting celestial energy continuously, the only difference was the quantity spent.

"This is what I feared..." Asna said with a concerned tone, "After finishing off the unprotected areas, the three rulers don't need to attack anymore. You will be forced to spend great amounts of celestial energy to protect galaxies daily and this will be counter-initiative to our plans."

"I know..." Felix uttered coldly.

He realized that the three rulers no longer needed to attack the protected territories and he would be on the losing side.

For a small price of celestial energy, they slowed down Felix's farming by at least 30% forever!

This percentage reflected only if Felix cared enough about humans and some other races instead of the protection of the entire SGAlliance.

If he went for the latter, he would be actually losing more celestial energy than he was bringing in!

"This was expected from the three rulers." Eris held her chin thoughtfully, "The question is, why now? Why not make their move before?"

"Are they doing this to just slow down Felix's celestial energy collection or force him to enter the Eternal Kingdom much earlier than planned?" Lady Sphinx wondered too.

Those were two different answers with two different outcomes.

"If the rulers did this to slow him down, they could have done it much sooner before he collected this much celestial energy." Lord Marduk shook his head, "It must be the latter. I believe they were also preparing for the war and now, they finally feel like they were ready to take them on."

"..."

"..."

"..."

The tenants were left staring at each other in silence.

They realized that for the three rulers to hasten the start of the war, they must be sitting on a dangerous trump card.

After all, how could they not fear Asna even when they knew that her awakening was going to empower her to a different level?

"At the same time, couldn't they have done this to make sure to slow Felix down while also scaring him into not making a move?" Lord Shiva added expressionlessly.

"You implying reverse psychology?" Lord Loki raised an eyebrow.

"You are looking too much into it." Asna snorted, "Those bastards will not go this far to avoid a confrontation. I am certain they are trying to force us to enter the Eternal Kingdom."

"She is right." Eris nodded in approval.

As one of the closest unigins to the three rulers, she understood how they carried business. Their absolute omnipotence made them uncaring about running such little schemes.

Once they were ready for battle, they would do everything in their power to make it happen.

Right now, the ball was in Felix's and Asna's hands.

Would they ignore the woes and massacre of the majority of the SGAlliance's population and continue farming celestial energy for the next millions of years, or...

"I am sorry Felix, but I am biting..."

Asna decided with a bitter smile as she watched the unforgiving scenes of the three rulers leaving behind on each planet.

"I just can't watch as those monsters punish those weaker than them for something they have no control over..." She murmured, "I know the feeling more than anyone else..."

While Asna could easily turn her emotions off and be cold and distant to those mortals, who she had no connection with, she suddenly found out that it was too difficult.

If they were to be killing each other, she couldn't give a damn, but when their death was associated with celestial matters, which they had no clue about, she simply couldn't turn a blind eye.

Not when she knew that she had what it took to stop it...

"Don't be, to be honest, I have the same intention." Felix smiled back at her, his eyes spilling with a hint of serenity.

"Really?" Asna's eyes lit up, "Why? I thought you said that nothing would affect your decision?"

Even the tenants were taken aback by his sudden switch. Ever since Felix ascended and became in control of his emotions, he always scared those a bit as it made them feel like he no longer had a personality.

It was like he was a robot capable of knowing exactly how as well as when to feel. Such control might seem great, but it got rid of anything humane in him.

This made those fear the day when he would end up making a decision that went against the morals of the real Felix as well as he wouldn't even know it...

"I always decided that the best course of action is to be heartless, to turn a blind eye to the suffering of the innocent in order to ensure the death of the three rulers," Felix spoke while continuing to send clones to protect more nations, "After all, the logic appeared sound at the time; why waste precious celestial energy upon lives that were, in the grand scheme of things, insignificant? If it meant saving enough power to strike down the rulers, wasn't it worth the sacrifice?"

Chapter 1888 Asna's Awakening.

Suddenly, his face broke into a foolish smile as the faces of the countless people who had died flashed before his eyes.

Children, families, and entire worlds were all snuffed out while he had convinced himself it was the "necessary" thing to do.

It chewed at him, this cold, calculated decision he had made...And for the first time in a long while, Felix felt something he hadn't allowed himself to feel, regret.

He turned, and his gaze fell on Asna. Then, he continued to speak with a voice lanced with self-reflection, "But now, I'm faced with a choice, a choice I should have seen before. I can be the bad guy who lets the universe burn to achieve a goal, or I can be the good guy who tries to protect those who need it, no matter the cost."

Asna listened quietly, her eyes never leaving his. Felix took a deep breath, his next words tinged with the bitterness of his own mistakes.

"I realized something, Asna. If I shut down my emotions, if I watch the entire universe burn just to save celestial energy...I'll be no different than the three rulers. No," He corrected himself, his voice filled with self-loathing, "I'll be worse. Because I provoked this massacre while having the power to protect those weaker than me, and yet I chose not to."

"Felix..."

Lady Sphinx and his masters showed faint smiles, seemingly proud that he wasn't taking the faster road.

He could easily turn off his emotions and none of this would matter, but he refused to do so.

It was for a simple reason...

"I don't want to be like them. I don't want to become a monster who sacrifices everything for a single goal. If I do, then what's the point of any of this? What's the point of defeating the rulers if I become as heartless and cruel as they are? What will my grandfather and Nimo think of me?" He sighed.

Asna stepped closer, her hand reaching out to gently touch his cheek.

"You've always had a choice. And you're right, it's not just about power. It's about what you do with it. I believe the best use of it should put your heart at ease, not the opposite." She said.

Felix closed his eyes, feeling the weight of her words. He understood that his motives were always wrong and flawed, making him truly a horrible person in the eyes of outsiders.

To think he was willing to sacrifice the SGAlliance's population for the sake of revenge and obtaining the truth.

Just the thought of committing to it made him sick in his stomach, like the lives of those below him no longer matter in the grand scheme of things.

If it was so, then he was truly no different than the three rulers...

"No more turning a blind eye. No more making excuses. I'll be the protector I should have been all along." Felix smiled gently, "I don't mind losing many things, but not my humanity, I refuse to, regardless of how simple life will be if I did it."

Asna smiled with a light of pride and love in her eyes. "And I'll be with you every step of the way."

Felix nodded, feeling the burdens of his past decisions begin to lift.

The three rulers had shown him what true heartlessness looked like, and in that reflection, he had found the strength to reject that path.

He would not be like them...He would fight with all he had, not just to win, but to save. And in doing so, he would recover the humanity he had almost lost.

"I think it's time I awaken." Asna's demeanor soon changed to being heartless as she uttered coldly, "They want us to come, it will be rude to leave them waiting."

"It will be rude indeed," Felix smirked coldly as he teleported both of them to his celestial form in the void of the Quantum Realm.

He left his clones to intercept the three rulers' attacks and focused on helping Asna awaken, having no idea how it was going to end.

All he knew was that he needed to feed Asna with a godly amount of celestial energy.

"You ready?"

"Hit me." Asna nodded as she sat cross-legged while Felix's palm was placed on her back.

Without delay, Felix began to pour liquified celestial energy into Asna, who in turn, didn't hesitate to devour it!

This kicked off the awakening process almost immediately as her entire form began to glow with pure celestial light.

The transformation started at the roots of Asna's fiery crimson hair as the profound red faded into a pristine white that spread outward, like frost creeping over a flame.

The end result was that her hair turned milky white, with the lower strands appearing as red as blood.

As the energy continued to pour into her, Asna's aura shifted dramatically.

Her aura was releasing a sense of peace and purity alternatively of her usual overwhelming authority.

It also radiated with a holy light, so pure and pristine that it seemed to cleanse the very space around her.

This kind of change took Felix and the others by surprise.

'Why does it seem like mom is becoming holier?' Nimo wondered in curiosity.

'This is indeed peculiar.' Eris knitted her eyebrows in puzzlement.

Just like the rest, she believed that Asna's awakening would add more to her overwhelming aura, making it near impossible to stare at her in the eyes.

Instead, she was releasing a sacred, untainted aura, like she became the embodiment of purity, the purest form in the entire universe.

Yet, the shocking part had to come.

Felix and the tenants were soon left with widened eyes as her awakening progressed, causing the emergence of seven inked tattoos to materialize on her chest.

Those tattoos resembled the seven sins immensely in their positioning, but their appearance and colors were nothing alike.

There was a dove, a dog, a swan, an ant, a tortoise, an elephant, and lastly, an owl.

The tattoos glowed with a soft light, their intricate designs weaving together to form a beautiful and harmonious pattern.

"It can't be...Are those really...They are real?" Felix mumbled to himself, containing his shock and disbelief.

"The seven virtues..." Apollo continued for him with a dazed tone, "I can't believe there are laws for them too."

When the tenants heard this, most of them were left stunned speechless. They knew about the seven sins and could understand them being laws due to their varied effects, but the seven virtues?

"How can the seven virtues be laws?" Candace remarked with a confused tone.

"It actually makes more sense to have them than not." Lady Sphinx grinned wryly, "The cosmos has always shown us that balance is everything for it. That's why there is a counterforce for almost everything. The moment the seven sins laws were introduced, I was always wondering about the existence of the seven virtues."

"Who would have thought, they would be locked up within Asna's core, awaiting her awakening to emerge."

While most of the tenants nodded in understanding, Felix's eyes were still affixed on Asna's tattoos.

Unlike them, his mind went further ahead and made a connection that he never expected in his life.

"I see now, I see now..." Felix murmured absentmindedly, "Lilith, I understand now..."

Chapter 1889 Lilith's Memories. I

Felix realized that the reason Lilith had control over Asna's core was due to the seven sins and seven virtues being both locked on Asna's core originally but during the creation of the unigin cores, they were separated.

"The seven sins were attached to the void core while the seven virtues were left behind in Asna's core." Felix uttered with a look of enlightenment, "Since those two sets of laws were twin counterforces, separating them is the same as separating Apollo's light/darkness laws. Even in different cores, they might still have a bit of control over the other laws."

"Your reasoning makes sense." Eris supported his theory, "It never made sense for Lilith's seven sins to be attached to void, but now?"

The tenants nodded in understanding as they realized that the seven sins were never supposed to be attached to any unigin core.

They were a set of laws, which should have remained in Asna's core with the seven virtues since it didn't make sense to separate them.

"This somewhat explains how Lilith was capable of using Asna's core abilities." Lady Sphinx added with a frown, "But why one? Why did she disappear after using one? How come she had to try so hard to access Asna's core if she originally had this much control over it?"

All of those were valid questions, but unfortunately, no one had the answers or the time to think of them.

Asna's awakening was on the verge of completion as the bright holy light around her started dying out.

When Felix saw this, he knew that he could not start the battle with the three rulers with so many questions surrounding Asna/Lilith.

In his eyes, this might be Lilith's plan to return somehow after Asna awakened. There were just too many connections to skim past such a possibility.

'This is going to cost me a leg.' With a firm look, Felix tapped into the fabric of reality and swiftly searched for one specific rule.

The rule that ensured Asna's expulsion from the matter universe immediately after her awakening and becoming a true celestial.

He altered the rule just enough to help her remain behind temporarily. He did it by slowing down the speed of the celestial chains. They were still going to snatch her, but not as instantaneously.

When the alteration took part at last, Felix realized that it had consumed at least 5% of his total celestial energy reserve!

He couldn't help but suck in a cold breath.

'I hope it was worth it.'

He quickly dropped the thought and refocused on Asna, who had finally concluded her awakening phase.

Whether it was Felix or the tenants, no one was capable of taking their eyes off her as she started resembling a true goddess of purity.

Her hair was milky white with red tips while her skin was shimmering with pure light continually, like touching it was a blasphemous act.

However, when she opened her eyes, everyone was surprised not by their absolute beauty, but by a single tear trickling down her cheek.

Asna looked at Felix, her eyes filled with an untold amount of sadness and gloom. An unexpected reaction for someone who possessed just awakened to their full strength.

"Asna, what happened..."

Felix swiftly went to her and swept the tear gently from her cheek with his sleeve.

"It's Lilith..."

"Lilith! Tell me, did she do anything bad to you? Do you feel her presence inside?!"

Felix immediately got defensive, his eyes activating divine detection and scanning Asna all over.

"No, it's not that...I."

Asna tried to speak up, but in the end, she was too overwhelmed. She took a deep breath and then murmured, "It's best if I just showed you..."

The moment she said this, she tapped into Felix's forehead, putting a memory orb directly in his mind.

Felix regained control over his emotions and dove into the memory orb while making sure to share his vision with everyone else.

Billions of years ago...

Lilith could be seen relaxing lazily on a lavish throne, her gaze drifting across the grand chamber in disinterest.

She sighed while twirling a lock of her dark silken hair around her finger, her thoughts beginning to wonder about doing something to get rid of her chronic boredom.

"Perhaps I should stir the pot a little," She mused, "Hephaestus has been far too quiet lately. A little 'accident' in his territory could make things interesting. And if Poseidon had been to be conveniently blamed...Well, that could lead to quite the specta..."

Before she could finish her wicked plan, the first ruler's indifferent voice resounded in her mind.

'Lilith, your presence is required.'

"Oho? Sounds interesting." Lilith's gaze sparkled in intrigue, teleporting from her throne immediately.

When she reappeared, she was sitting on her platform within the celestial dimensional pocket next to Uranus and Eris...Even Ares was attending, making her interest grow bigger.

"Since everyone is here, I will make it brief." The first ruler spoke calmly, "The tablet has released a new instruction...Pay a visit to the Echoing Tower."

"The Echoing Tower?" Uranus frowned, "Isn't that the new emerging anomaly in the quantum realm?"

"Yes, it seems that there is an important treasure behind the birth of the tower called the stone of reality by the natives." Medusa nodded, "We have to retrieve it. It could be one of the keys to our great escape."

"Since we can't make a move personally, I believe you four are more than capable of retrieving it before anyone can notice your departure."

Lilith and the rest glanced at each other for a moment, noticing that the bulk possessed no problems with taking the mission.

Eris wanted to study the new treasure, Uranus would do anything for their goal, Lilith and Ares seemed bored as hell and would do it for their own sake.

Thus, all four of them shrugged their shoulders and took off toward the Quantum realm, unbothered by the lack of reward.

For beings like them, not even celestial energy could move them to do something against their will.

Soon, the memory screen went black and the tenants conversed with each other.

"Eris already showed us what happened below, did something different happen to Lilith?" Candace wondered.

"Lilith was believed to be the only one who got too close to the stone of reality." Felix narrowed his eyes, "It seems like she has indeed touched it and saw a vision of her own."

When he said this, the memory orb activated again and showed them a scene of Ares, Eris, and Uranus being heavily resisted by the stone of reality.

Regardless of what ability they used, they weren't able to pierce through the miasma surrounding the stone of reality.

When everyone saw how Uranus almost got himself killed, escaping barely, Eris shook her head and said, "Let's head out, if even abusing our laws doesn't work, nothing will."

As she said this, there had been already three celestial chains tightening around her. Ares and Uranus were also under the same punishment.

"Tsk, how can a mere stone be able to resist us this hard?" Uranus clicked his tongue in irritation.

"It's indeed fascinating." Ares murmured while scratching his chin, "Such a treasure must be on a celestial level somehow."

"I think so too, only the three rulers must have what it takes to retrieve it." Eris nodded as she turned around, "Let's get out of here."

Just as Ares and Uranus wanted to follow her, Lilith remarked with a hint of intrigue in her voice, "Not yet, I haven't given it a try."

Chapter 1890 Lilith's Memories. II

"Lilith, don't be stubborn, and let's leave." Uranus said coldly, "It will be annoying to leave the tower with all of us chained up."

"He has a point, we need your protection." Eris backed him.

Unfortunately, Lilith ignored them and floated towards the stone of reality while coating herself in protective barriers, mixing in her seven sins with the void powers.

As she disappeared inside the thick miasma, the three unigins shook their heads and sat down, awaiting her return.

The miasma seemed laced with a protective ambiance, making it impossible for the unigins to see past a couple of meters...Thus, anyone going at its depth would be on his own.

What Felix experienced during his attempt was nothing compared to this mission, making him realize that the stone of reality was its strongest possible form at their time.

Yet, Lilith didn't seem to be having as much difficulty as the others. While they were actively being kept away, the miasma seemed to be inviting her. The barriers were still being messed with, but not as heavily as the others.

'I was right, it's calling for me...' Lilith murmured in intrigue as her eyes were affixed on the pulsing stone of reality.

Each heartbeat sent a cryptic message that somehow she understood.

'Come...Come...Come...'

The closer she got to the stone of reality, the more intense the feeling got until finally, she was merely an inch away from it.

Without an ounce of hesitation, Lilith reached out with her hand and touched the stone of reality.

The moment she did so, the scenery around her was transformed into an infinite void with only one thing around...A transparent humanoid figure with seven celestial hearts beating in sync.

Instead of being scared or confused, Lilith merely cracked a faint smile and said, "Now, it's getting fun." The universe's consciousness showed her the same vision he showed Felix, explaining the birth and creation of the universe. How every celestial core had a big and a small role and without them, their universe would be incomplete.

But then, the vision didn't stop and continued showing her more details, details that Felix and the rest had no clue about.

Felix and the others opened their eyes wide as they watched five celestial hearts split up from the main body and spread out akin to gleaming meteors.

The three rulers' hearts headed to the same destination while the elemental heart went in the opposite direction.

The stone of reality kept reducing in size until it disappeared inside the atomic world. Meanwhile, The Origin of Laws Heart, Asna's core, was devoured by the Universe's heart!

This left behind only the Universe's Heart at the center of the featureless figure.

Felix paused the memory and kept staring at the happenings with furrowed eyebrows, deep in his thoughts.

"So, the separation of the hearts happened right after the birth of the universe. While the rest of the hearts have known origins, what happened to the elemental heart?"

Felix was told by Eris that his human mortal heart was the celestial elemental heart and if he wanted it to ascend, he needed to gather all the laws/elements. But, it seemed like that might not be the case.

"I said it's only a theory." Eris remarked, "It made the most sense for your human heart to be the elemental heart. I still believe in it. There are just too many clues pointing to it."

"Who knows?" Felix said, "Let's keep watching."

The moment he turned it on, everyone was dazed by the sight of the universe's heart releasing light arrows in countless directions!

Each pulse carried in it a unigin core, representing a distinct set of universal laws.

Hephaestus core was the first to be released, hot, and blazing with the intensity of a thousand suns, recognizable anywhere.

Next, a deep blue core flashed into existence, its surface rippling like water. Poseidon's serene core sent waves of calm energy throughout the cosmos.

Then, it was followed by Apollo's core, Eris' core, Uranus' core, and the list goes on and on, leaving Felix and his companions to observe a myriad of colors and energies filling the void.

Soon, the spectacle concluded, and silence returned, but Lilith, Felix, and the others all shared a similar question.

'Where is my core?'

'Where is Lilith's core?'

It turned out, neither the void core nor the seven sins laws were released with the group. This drew Lilith's attention, causing her drop her careless act at last.

She started to feel that she was about to witness the reason she was called here...Her intuition was right.

Under everyone's stunned eyes, a never-seen-before core came into existence from within the universe's heart.

It was a small sphere with two wings on its back.

The right wing was as unsullied as freshly fallen snow with white feathers, gleaming brightly in the void.

The left wing resembled a deathly cursed wing of a demon. It was dark red with black feathers and was releasing an ominous aura.

The sphere itself was split in half in a wavey motion, each side symbolizing their wing's aura. It looked like everything was in harmony even when both forces defined the term opposition.

"It can't be..."

"Don't tell me that Asna and Lilith are..."

"Oh...my...god!"

Everyone was quick-witted enough to realize that this core represented the seven sins and the seven virtues, which meant, a unigin was supposed to be born with those two sets of laws!!

But, the next scene changed the natural course.

The core was split right from the middle akin to a cracked egg. Then, the right symbolizing the seven virtues was attached to Asna's core within the universe's heart, while the left side stayed floating for a mere moment before its new home emerged.

The Void Core!

Under the dazed looks of the viewers, the left wing merged with the void core and changed its entire demeanor, taking over it completely.

It started letting out an ominous evil aura too while the seven sins symbols appeared once in a while on its surface.

Without anticipating for anyone's reaction, the newly birthed core flew right past Lilith's face, awakening her from her daze.

"This...What's the meaning of this?" Lilith inquired with a solemn tone as she gazed at the featureless being.

By now, she knew that she was experiencing a vision and the one before her must be the consciousness of the universe.

While she held her cool before, after seeing what happened to her origin, she demanded answers.

Alas, just like what happened to Felix, the featureless being ignored her completely and carried on with the vision. But, Felix paused everything, unable to watch more after the latest revelation.

Unlike Lilith in the vision, they knew much more and the truth left them staring at each other in silence, seemingly anticipating for someone to bring it up.

For such situations, it was always good to have someone like Apollo.

"I can't believe, I actually can't believe it," Apollo remarked with an amazed tone, uncaring about the solemn atmosphere, "Asna and Lilith have shared the same core? Doesn't this mean they are twin sisters?!"
