Chapter 1891 Lilith's Memories. III

"Wait, how come mom is that old hag's sister? Aren't all laws part of my mom? Doesn't this mean she shares a similar connection to the rest of the unigins too?" Nimo tilted his head in confusion.

His questions were valid since all laws were considered part of Asna's core, which meant the rest of the unigins should be considered as her brothers/sisters too.

"Nimo, you are seeing just the surface."

Asna patted Nimo's head with a gentle smile...She finally understood her origins after awakening her memories and Lilith's memories.

"I am not the consciousness of the Origin of Laws Celestial Heart. I am the consciousness of the universe's seven virtues just like Lilith is the consciousness of the seven sins." She dropped a bombshell, leaving Nimo and some of the tenants stunned.

"How come..." Candace murmured in disbelief, "Didn't your consciousness awaken before you can unlock the seven virtues?"

Indeed, Asna was born as a little child without even knowing about the existence of the seven virtues. How could she be its primary consciousness?

"It's simple really." Felix clarified solemnly as he eyed the universe's consciousness, "Unlike what we have assumed, there is only one consciousness for the universe and it's the one we are staring at. The celestial hearts shouldn't give birth to their consciousness since it defied the existence of the one and only, universe."

"That's why the stone of reality, the elemental heart, and the universe's heart haven't awakened their own consciousness after spending just as much time if not more than the three celestials."

"If it's like this, then how come the three rulers' have awakened?" Thor inquired.

"I don't know, but I am sure it is something similar to Asna's situation." Felix replied, "The universe consciousness might have breathed life in them personally. It's the only proper explanation."

Some tenants agreed with Felix's theory while the majority were still pretty confused since this new revelation had flipped everything they knew about the celestials' origins.

They believed that the three rulers were born on their own after the three celestial languages gained their will.

This was the premise that even the three rulers adhered to and accepted. But in reality, it shouldn't make sense since it took billions of years for just elementals to gain their consciousness.

Foremother's Siamese Galaxy was the biggest evidence.

How could the three rulers awaken their consciousness on their own by absorbing energy while still being at the very beginnings of the universe's birth?

"It's true, the math isn't mathing." Apollo nodded, "We also used to believe that our birth was based on the laws awakening their consciousness, but then we discovered that the universe's heart handled it."

"Indeed, if the Origin of Laws heart gave birth to Asna's consciousness on its own, then the stone of reality should have its own consciousness by now." Fenrir said calmly, "It spent more time compared to all hearts combined."

"Interesting, really interesting..." Lady Sphinx murmured while tapping her finger on her elbow thoughtfully.

"What's on your mind?" J?rmungandr raised an eyebrow in intrigue.

"I am starting to think that the seven virtues and seven sins weren't supposed to be laws in the first place." Lady Sphinx remarked, catching everyone off guard.

"What do you mean?"

"Think about it." Lady Sphinx clarified, "The seven virtues and seven desires represent the universe's fundamental moral and ethical principles. They shouldn't be laws encompassing the universe's reality like the rest of the laws. Their existence is null in the grand scheme of things and does not affect the foundations of reality."

"How can Kindness, greed, wrath, patience, and the others be considered one of the universal laws that govern us? I can understand gravity, water, light, darkness, fire, etc, but those fourteen laws make no sense as much as their powers are overwhelming."

"This got me thinking..." Lady Sphinx pointed at Asna and Lilith, and then disclosed, "What if the universe's consciousness has extracted those moral principles from himself and turned them into laws, knowing that they are key for its rebirth?"

"..."

"..."

Felix and the rest stared at each other in silence, their furrowed eyebrows expressing their troubled emotions after listening to Lady Sphinx's theory.

As much as they wondered about it, they always arrived at the same conclusion. 'She has a point.' That's right...All of them understood that without the seven sins laws, Felix's journey would have taken a much different path. A path that would most probably lead him to his damnation since those laws were simply too overpowered.

"Big sis is smart as always, you are the closest to the truth." Asna smiled bitterly, "But, merely keep watching and you will understand that the truth is more horrific than this."

Upon hearing this, everyone gulped a mouthful in dread and watched as Felix unpaused the memory orb.

They watched with Lilith as Asna's core brightened within the universe's heart, dimming to an unimaginable degree.

It was like the core was on the verge of death. On its surface, only a couple of inscriptions were written, representing creation laws, destruction laws, and lastly, the seven virtues.

But, the universe's heart kept feeding it with celestial energy continuously, and as more time passed on, new inscriptions reappeared on its surface.

When Lilith read them, she read them as the lost laws, which were sent away within their own cores.

"Does this mean the unigins' origin is this heart?" Lilith wondered with thinned pupils, all the new information she was receiving was too much even for her.

But, her assumption was met with a unanimous agreement from Felix and the rest of the tenants.

"The unigins' cores were all part of Asna's celestial heart?" Candace held her dizzy head, "I am starting to lose it, wasn't the universe's heart responsible for their birth?"

"I know what happened." Eris replied calmly, "The universe's heart has extracted the laws from Asna's core and placed them within cores before sending them away for their awakening...That's why there is no creation or destruction unigin. The universe's heart hasn't extracted them with the rest."

"My thoughts exactly." Apollo added with an astonished tone, "Asna's core is called The Origin of Laws by the prophecy tablet itself. Now, it makes sense that the naming was actually literal."

"But wait, how can the universe's heart help with the unigins rebirth without Asna's existence?" "I believe the universe's heart has extracted those laws for itself, leaving Asna's core to recover them through time." Felix interjected, "Since it is the one creating the cores, it no longer needs Asna to revive dead unigins."

"This makes a lot of sense." Lord Marduk mentioned, "I believe this is probably the reason Asna's consciousness came to life much later than the rest of the unigins. Her core needed to recover all of the lost laws before the implanted consciousness of the seven virtues can come to life."

The tenants nodded in understanding...They comprehended that after a unigin was born, they never awaken their entire powers or control at once.

Hence, the awakening stage came later on.

For the others, the awakening stage had happened while they were still in their first years, which didn't really change their lives drastically.

Lilith was in the same boat as she was born with the powers of void laws and the seven sins laws came later after her awakening.

This was a known knowledge for all unigins.

Nimo's situation was different since his entire existence was based on a wish, and while he followed the same steps as unigins, it was more or less to fool Felix and the others into believing that he was Lilith's replacement by the universe.

But, in Asna's case, her consciousness might be based on the seven virtues, but those laws were locked up and she had no idea about them.

That's because unigins figured out their entire laws only after their awakening, which was merely a process of absorbing enough energy to make the final push.

Since the three rulers had banished and made it impossible for Asna to awaken, fearing for the worst, she was left and everyone else to believe that her consciousness came from the celestial heart instead of the seven virtues laws!

This was the reason Lilith and Asna could potentially control each other's cores even with two different souls as long as they were given time to adapt to it.

It was also probably the best explanation for why the seven sins laws weren't resisted by her immunities since the universe considered her as their owner too!

The connection between their laws was merely too strong.

"This is all so messy and twisted, and yet, it doesn't seem like we even have gotten to the scary part."

J?rmungandr sighed as he watched Felix unpause the vision, understanding that the worst had yet to come...

Chapter 1892 Lilith's Memories. IV

The cosmic vision paused for a moment and then immediately accelerated, causing the next scenes before them to blur, moving at a dizzying speed.

Stars blinked into existence, galaxies manifested, and entire worlds were born and died in seconds.

The universe's consciousness was gone, leaving behind just the universe's heart, becoming smaller and smaller until it resembled a blinding white dot.

Soon enough, a sea of celestial energy surrounded it.

Eventually, the vision slowed, focusing on a particular moment in time; the gathering of the three rulers and the unigins near the universe's heart.

"We weren't shown how their consciousness came to life, but it seems like the universe's heart has attracted them all." Felix shared, his eyes affixed on the gathering.

The vision didn't show them talking to each other or such, it accelerated the time again until it started displaying the unigins and the three rulers fighting each other once in a while for celestial energy.

Those fights resulted in injuries, but nothing too serious.

Everyone watching could see that those fights were more or less for entertainment purposes as everyone was bored immensely in such an empty void.

But then, the vision halted at a crucial moment in the history of the universe...The birth of the Prophecy Tablet.

Out of nowhere, the universe's heart flashed with a blinding light and when it died out, the three rulers and the watchers were startled at the sight of a massive divine tablet, hovering high above their heads.

"What's this..." Medusa murmured in a daze as she examined the shimmering tablet.

"There are some letters and pictures on it." Amun-Ra narrowed his eyes, "Why do those letters seem to be written from a language combining our three celestial languages?"

The first ruler gazed at the letters for a moment before reading them out loud, "In the dawn of a new age, when the stars align and the cosmic tides turn, a kingdom shall rise from the union of might and wisdom. The Three who govern the fabric of existence shall join hands with the Unigins, the keepers of the primordial laws. Together, they shall forge a realm beyond time, the starting line of life..."

After reading it, the three rulers glanced at each other for a few seconds before lifting their heads, and gazing at a hole in the shape of a portal, leading to nothingness.

"The universe's heart..." Medusa murmured the name written underneath the hole and then switched her vision to the real universe's heart next to them.

By now, none of them knew that the small dot next to them was the universe's heart, but when they read its name, it just seemed right.

"Is there really another side inside this dot as we predicted?" Amun-Ra's eyes brightened up.

"Seems like it." The first ruler said calmly, "Our birth source can only be explained by it. Now, it even threw a tablet at us. There is something inside, something behind it, and we must find out."

"What are you saying?" Medusa frowned, "We follow this tablet's peculiar instructions?"

"Why not, we have already tried everything else to no avail." The first ruler nodded, "We have nothing to lose and everything to gain."

"I agree." Amun-Ra said coldly, "I have no interest in being trapped in this dimensional prison forever."

By now, the three rulers had already realized that they were trapped inside the future eternal kingdom's borders, which were nothing but a unique dimension under the universe's heart creation.

They were quite desperate to leave it since there was literally nothing to be done here besides gazing into the void and sometimes battling the unigins as a change of routine.

Since their options were slim to none, Medusa ended up shrugging her shoulders and agreeing with the proposal too.

With that, the three rulers had made their decision to follow the first instruction of many more to come...

"If only they knew their entire purpose in life would be to fulfill a prophecy of their damnation, would they still do it again?" Eris smiled in derision.

"This is really the first step of the entire universe's history." Thor remarked, "What would have happened if they ignored the tablet? Would we still exist?"

"Most likely not." Fenrir shook his head, "The tablet crafted them create us, without it, they wouldn't have bothered to waste even a drop of celestial energy on us."

"Without the primogenitors, the universe wouldn't have been this populated and the elemental manipulations wouldn't be as widespread."

"While humans might still be born, they won't have been able to create their bloodline cultivation system without the beasts," J?rmungandr added with a faint chuckle, "If Felix was born, he would have been just a rich commoner."

"You are underestimating the humans' adaptability." Felix smiled, "I am sure we would have come up with something new to ensure our survival. That's how humans are, it's near impossible to get rid of us."

Felix said it with his whole chest, knowing damn well that the human race was born to stay. With or without a cultivation system, they would always find a way to establish themselves.

However, his life would have been indeed different.

Soon, the vision initiated accelerating again, skipping the creation of the Eternal Kingdom, and many other smaller scenes, including the mission to retrieve the stone of reality.

However, instead of showing Lilith touching the stone of reality, the vision showed her leaving with the squad after she saw them failing horribly.

"Hmm?"

Lilith and the rest were surprised by this, making them understand that the stone was about to show them a different future.

As expected, the vision persisted playing, showing them how the rulers paused the efforts to retrieve the stone of reality and left the unigins to carry on with their lives.

Lilith returned to her palace and persisted antagonizing the unigins for the next billions of years until she got banished by a majority vote.

Then, she remained slumbering in the void realm while the three rulers persisted following the instructions of the tablet, starting with the birth of the primogenitors.

Felix and the primogenitors observed with their own eyes how the first ruler pointed his fingers toward spiritual mirrors, showing many creatures of all sizes and shapes.

"That's me..."

Lord Loki murmured as he eyed a chameleon camouflaged on a tree, bidding its time to prey on a flying bug.

"There I am."

J?rmungandr smiled bitterly, his eyes affixed on a little green snake with purplish scales, slithering on a grass field, oblivious to what was about to come.

Rumble! Rumble!...

The first ruler unleashed divine lighting bolts on each of those creatures, blessing them with part of his powers, intelligence, and strength.

It was like a divine blessing and the tenants could do nothing but keep their eyes attached to their origin, having no idea how to process their emotions.

To see themselves as nothing but dumb creatures following pure instincts crafted them realize that they were indeed blessed.

There were many creatures of the same species as them just nearby, which meant, that if they weren't chosen by the three rulers, their lives would have amounted to nothing...

Triple Release Today to make up for yesterday! I am so sorry, but I am still dealing with the aftermath of my father's medical situation, (Papers, hospital, insurance, and all of that bs).

Chapter 1893 Lilith's Memories. V

"To know now that our birth purpose was to help little Felix reclaim the universe's throne, I feel blessed to have been given this opportunity." Thor smiled, the depression from living for so long with no purpose had long been cured.

"I can't see it any differently." Fenrir added with a cold tone, "Still, those three f*ckers have to die."

Although they were watching the three rulers give birth to them, the primogenitors still didn't feel an ounce of belonging. They knew that it was nothing but a business transaction and without the tablet, they wouldn't have seen the day of the light.

Thus, if they were going to show appreciation, it would be to the creator of the prophecy of the tablet, which they believed to be the universe's consciousness.

After the lightning strikes were concluded, Medusa and Amun-Ra decided to share their blessing too.

But, they didn't bestow it to all primogenitors...They chose Lady Yggdrasil and Cyclope blindly and bestowed their celestial language on them. They did it only because the tablet had mentioned it, though, it didn't specify which target.

In other words...

"Oh maaan, they did it randomly? I thought I was chosen or special than the others." Cyclope let out a long exhale in vexation.

"Makes more sense." Lady Yggdrasil merely chuckled softly, unbothered.

"If they were picked by the tablet, I would have gotten all three celestial languages." Felix smiled, "Since it didn't and I still made it all the way here, it's clear that having all three of them wasn't necessary."

"It's kinda creepy when you think about it." Lord Shiva said expressionlessly, "It means the creator of the tablet knows every little detail about the past, present, and future of the universe. He is putting only the necessary instructions to guide your life into this exact moment."

"It's about to get a whole lot creepier," Asna mumbled.

Felix and the rest narrowed their eyes as they continued watching time fly in the vision. After the primogenitors were born, some worked on creating clans, empires, and universal domination, while some isolated themselves.

It kept going like this until the primogenitor's Era ended when the majority of them entered Loki's illusion world for hundreds of millions of years.

Their sudden disappearance had created a drastic shift in the universe as new powerful races emerged unrelated to them by bloodline...Dragons, witches, elves, dwarves, metal race, and more.

The birth of those races had kicked off the beginning of the Dark Ages as the domination of the primogenitors' empires fell with their disappearance.

Soon, the vision changed the perspective to the Eternal Kingdom, showing the birth of Asna and her short childhood in the realm before getting sent to the imprisonment grounds.

"What do we have here?"

Lilith seemed curious about this, but she continued watching the brutal wars during the Dark Ages birthing the UVR and the SGAlliance.

While the forebears slumbered or remained isolated, the SG Alliance emerged, marking the dawn of a new era that brought all races closer to one another than ever before.

During the heights of the SGAlliance, the vision zoomed in from one galaxy to another until it arrived at the Milky Way. Then, it kept zooming in until the blue gem Earth came into view.

Under the dazed eyes of the viewers, the vision stopped zooming after reaching a hospital bed, showing a gorgeous woman with golden hair and blue eyes giving birth.

A stunning stoic man was standing next to her and holding her hand while grandfather Robert was watching from a glass window.

"Mom...Dad...Grandpa..." Felix murmured, his stare turning softer and relaxed like he was back to his childhood again.

Aaaaaaa! Aaaaa!!

After great difficulty, Felix's mother finally pushed little Felix out and with a gentle slap on his buttocks, his high-pitched cries filled the room.

Before anyone could react, the vision accelerated again, flying past Felix's childhood, showing everything from his parent's death in a helicopter crash, to him bullying his cousins, the Alexander Kingdom visiting Earth, and finally, to how he joined a bloodline clan, participated in the ruins' mission.

The vision slowed down only when he met with Asna and had their souls merged up before he exploded it and Kronos came to the rescue.

"Wait a second, if Asna's consciousness was based on the seven virtues, then how come your souls merged up?" Candace tilted her head in confusion after being reminded of this.

Felix paused the vision as he answered with a faint smile, "Whether Asna was the consciousness of the celestial core or the seven virtues, if my soul was related to the universe's consciousness as we assumed, then both will work in my favor."

"He is right, if the seven virtues weren't laws originally, then their connection to the universe's consciousness was much higher." Lady Sphinx nodded.

"There is no ifs, I am quite sure they weren't supposed to be laws." Apollo mentioned, "The seven virtues and seven sins are the only laws without elements, and the three rulers' control over them."

"Indeed." Eris nodded in agreement.

"I see..." Candace raised an eyebrow in surprise.

She didn't think that the three rulers had no control over those fourteen laws. But, it was truly the only evidence needed to support this theory.

Felix unpaused the vision and his second chance in life came into play, going almost exactly as the one he lived.

But, as he grew older and bypassed J?rmungandr, Lady Sphinx, and Thor, his life took a drastic change when he picked Roc's bloodline to integrate next with!

"This...Is this the future where Lilith hasn't created the void creatures or Nimo?"

Felix was dazed, realizing that they had not seen or heard a single detail about the void creatures.

Sure, Lilith was banished to the void realm, but she hadn't created void creatures during the primogenitors Era!

"It's true." Suddenly, an almost unrecognizable voice resounded in everyone's ears from behind. When they turned around, they saw that it was Lord Chaos!

"Look who decided to join us at last." Lord Shiva sneered.

Lord Khaos ignored him and continued speaking with a solemn tone, "Based on this vision, Lilith hasn't approached me and charmed me to help her with the void creatures' creation."

"Interesting...Without Lilith and Lord Khaos making the void creatures, no connection was established between them. In addition, Lilith had no reason to create Nimo since she didn't know or care about the existence of Felix."

"She kept spending her years in deep slumber, not linking herself with Felix one bit. This resulted in Felix choosing another bloodline than Khaos' bloodline since he had no chip to make the trade." Lady Sphinx concluded.

One shouldn't forget that the only reason Lord Khoas agreed to the transaction was due to Nimo's existence and his feud with Lilith.

He also believed that Nimo was Lilith's replacement and he wanted this to happen for his vengeance.

Without those two connections, Felix could only dream of Lord Khaos' bloodline. Especially when he was alive and there was no creature with his bloodline relation...Not even the void creatures.

"This also means he has no reason to head to the Alexander Kingdom since he went there to absorb void creatures for Nimo's hatching," Thor added.

When everyone heard this, they turned to watch the vision and noticed that Felix had straight up joined the war between the Anti-Mariana Alliance and the Mariana Empire right from the start!!

Chapter 1894 Lilith's Memories. VI

He truly didn't go to the Alexander Kingdom and slumbered through the entire war, surrounded by millions of void creatures as Nimo fed on them to hatch.

He joined from the start and helped the Anti-Alliance win the war, but it resulted in grave casualties across both territories.

Without Nimo, there was no void army, without a void army, the Mariana Empire gave it everything instead of surrendering the moment the void army made an appearance.

But still, the war was won.

Though, this was nothing but the start of Felix's downfall.

Felix and the tenants watched as Felix was gravely limited with Roc's bloodline compared to the void bloodline.

As a starter, there was no void domain that was capable of killing everyone and anyone in the games instantly.

Still, he was able to inherit Roc's spatial splitting blades, allowing him to go quite far in his journey.

But, the next choices for his bloodlines kept getting worse and worse due to the lack of greater opportunities.

It was like changing the Khaos' bloodline started a domino effect.

Because of this, when he finally arrived at the sixth replacement, he merely broke through the origin realm instead of ascending to a unigin...Even when he went through the same hell in the heavenly plane and watched his beloved getting kidnapped before his own eyes.

He wanted to become a unigin, but there was simply no opportunity to make it happen. Because he helped Lord Hades, he allowed him to return to the matter universe, but that was it.

Without Nimo in the picture, Lord Hades couldn't see Felix's potential to become a unigin at all. Thus, he didn't even bother to help him enhance his spiritual capacity.

He returned the favor by sending him out and Felix in the vision was happy just to leave, not knowing that he kept missing opportunities to facilitate his chances to ascend to a unigin.

But, he soon found out after roaming the entire matter universe that there was nothing to help a mere mortal become a unigin...it was simply an impossibility.

Thus, Felix gave up and decided to choose the only path left ahead, breaking through the Origin Realm first.

Felix, and the tenants all watched in silence as his alternate version executed his potential, his life, everything, the moment he broke through the Origin Realm...

He succeeded in becoming a seven-headed hydra with each head able to control and breathe flame based on his seven elements...But, that was it.

He had become the strongest entity in the matter universe without any contestant, but his dream of becoming a unigin was done forever.

As expected, the vision accelerated again, showing only a blur before finally stopping at a mountain facing the sunset.

On top of it, an old wrinkly man with a white beard sat on it with a big jar of wine in his hand.

His wrinkled eyes seemed dead, gazing into the sunset as he drank his wine in silence. The moment he finished it, he looked into the sky, his eyes reflecting defeat and utter hopelessness.

"I tried...I really, really, tried...But, I failed you..." With one last gaze at the sky, he murmured, "I failed us..."

Then, he blew his soul, committing the grandest act of suicide for the strongest being in the matter universe...

His soul explosion was so powerful, that it destroyed the entire world he was on.

As the vision zoomed out, everyone was stunned to see that it was Earth, but not in its most wonderful state.

But, the vision kept zooming out and out, showing that Earth wasn't the only place in shambles.

The entire Milky Way was destroyed, and humans as a race went extinct. Yet, it still didn't stop, zooming out and displaying for everyone how the entire SGAlliance collapsed and all surviving races were in barbaric wars, resembling one familiar period.

The Dark Ages.

The vision didn't explain anything as the moment it zoomed to its limit, it shut down, and then, it played itself from the very start.

"What's all of this and why does it have any relation to me?" Lilith frowned in displeasure.

She couldn't care less about a mortal's journey no matter how fascinating it was since it was clear that it had no connection to her.

Her real body probably slept through the entire four Eras.

But, it was different for Felix and the others.

Felix paused the vision's replay and sat with the others in silence, already starting to connect the dots of what happened or was about to happen.

"This was my life without Nimo, no, without Lilith's interference..." Felix uttered as he gazed at Lilith's irritated frozen look.

"Indeed, if she hasn't brought Nimo to life, if she hasn't placed him in your path within the Shurima Temple, if she hasn't created Lucifer and made you inherit his evil energy, and most importantly, if she hasn't manipulated you, you would have never ascended to a unigin." Lady Asna shared with a bitter smile.

"Everything that she had done was to help you obtain the necessary tools for the ascension as without them, you would have never fooled the universe into accepting you as the new Paragon of Sins."

"Evil energy, her core, the breakthrough to the origin realm, everything needed to be perfect and it's near impossible for such preparation to happen without her." Elder Kraken shook his head, "You simply can't become a unigin without a unigin's core and those necessary steps. There was no other unigin in the universe who would have done the same."

"No one." Felix and the tenants went silent, realizing that as much of a manipulative c*nt Lilith was, everything she had done was for Felix to avoid that bleak future...A future that he had no clue about.

"But why, why didn't she just come clean and tell us what she has in mind." Fenrir held his chin thoughtfully, "I doubt there was a need to make herself Felix's enemy when he has already started to trust her during their training."

"For f*ck sake, she trained him to beat Nimo's alter ego, just in the end to force him into gaining access to Asna and making him realize that Nimo's existence was for this moment." Thor cursed.

The rest of the tenants nodded in agreement...They realized that if Lilith told the truth and showed them what she knew, Felix would have taken her in as one of his masters immediately and would have accepted her guidance about everything.

Instead, she turned herself into his most hated enemy, someone who didn't just break his trust, and betray him, but also played like a fiddle to enter his beloved's heart.

He simply could never forget such a disgrace until the day he died no matter what Lilith did after to redeem herself.

That's why even when she helped him plenty, he always considered himself to be using her, waiting for the best moment to ensure her death.

In their eyes, this entire dynamic would have been different if she simply told the truth from the start...

"You should keep watching, the answer is just around the corner." Asna sighed.

Chapter 1895 Lilith's Memories. VII

Upon hearing this, Felix resumed the vision with a solemn expression. He watched as the vision kept resetting each time it arrived at the moment of his death.

It was like the moment he died, the universe lost its anchor and it reseted to the very beginning.

"Why are you showing me this? Are you asking me to help this cutie survive or what?" Lilith asked with an irritated tone.

The vision had already been replayed five times...Each time, there were slight differences, but the ending was always the same.

Felix died through suicide after spending his entire life searching for a way up, a way to reach divinity, but to no avail.

The moment he broke through the origin realm, he lost his chance forever.

"Hmm? Is that what you want?" Lilith suddenly raised an eyebrow after noticing that the vision paused for a moment before continuing to play...She took it as a response at last.

"Why will I do that?" Lilith knitted her eyebrows, "What do I have to gain from this mess?"

Abruptly, the vision collapsed after a flash of light and the universe's heart reappeared again.

Lilith and the rest turned to look at it and before they could react, the universe's heart started to glimmer brightly while getting bigger!

"This...Don't tell me?"

Felix's eyes widened in disbelief, a reaction shared by the rest of the tenants.

"Are we about to see what's on the other side at last?!" Apollo said while clapping his hands eagerly.

"My heart is beating so fast...What if there is nothing? What if there was something? Ahh! I can't think!" Candace released a low scream in excitement and dread.

Regardless of their reactions, everyone's eyes were affixed to the expanding universe's heart.

After it grew to a decent size, the light began to die out, leaving behind a circular rippling mirror.

"Huh? There is nothing..."

Felix and the others' excitement soon turned to confusion after seeing that there was nothing behind the universe's heart.

It was a literal black screen...Yet, Lilith's reaction said otherwise.

"How extraordinary..." She was able to murmur only those words before the universe's heart sealed shut, returning as a mere dot.

"What's going on here." Felix frowned as he paused the vision. "Did we see the same thing?" "Most likely not." Asna said, "I think she has altered her memories."

"Why would she do that?" Thor and the rest of the tenants were just as bewildered. Knowing that he wouldn't receive his answer like this, Felix resumed the memory.

"So, that's how it is?" Lilith smiled, "If I helped this cutie fulfill his call, I get access to the other side?"

With those many resets, Lilith was easily able to understand that Felix's goal was the death of the three rulers and rescuing his beloved, Asna.

"Why not? I am dying of boredom either way." Without double-checking anything, Lilith showed an enthusiastic grin as she watched the new vision, studying it fully this time.

Then, she attempted to manipulate it by showing up before Felix and enslaving him with her lust mark while he was still young.

However, the moment she did this, Felix lost his autonomy.

Under the taken-back looks of the viewers, the cycle ended right there and then, before starting again from the very beginning.

"Interesting, I can't control him or it is considered a failure...But," Lilith held her chin thoughtfully, "What does this reset imply?"

"What does she mean?" Nimo asked with a confused tone.

Felix and the tenants had serious expressions as he answered, "She is wondering if this reset is related to the vision, or the real universe."

"Wait, you are considering that the entire universe might reset every time your journey is finished?" Nimo raised an eyebrow in surprise.

"It's indeed crazy to think about it, but there is a chance that the universe does reset each time Felix's voyage is halted." Asna clarified with a solemn tone, "Since he is believed to be the universe's consciousness on a path of rebirth, it's not farfetched for him to be considered as the Anchor of the universe."

"Isn't that a bit too much? We are talking about a universe's reset, only the universe's consciousness can..." Apollo scratched his cheek sheepishly, "Forget it, I can totally see him installing such a counter-measure."

If it was anyone else, the tenants would have never bothered to waste their time on such a crazy theory. But, this was related to the universe's consciousness, the true ruler of all.

He was the only one capable of pulling such a crazy concept and no one could do anything about it.

Soon, Felix and the tenants watched as Lilith tried the easiest options to help Felix reach his goal.

She even arranged a situation where she saved him to gain his trust and then told him about everything she knew and what he needed to do.

But, the moment she did this, the universe came to a grinding halt and the cycle began a new one.

"Interesting, I need to help him without him losing control or knowing about the truth." Lilith smirked at the challenge, "This is going to be fun."

Felix and the rest of the tenants were left to watch a true manipulative mastermind in action, leaving them with widened jaws at how she came up with a plan that altered the entire future of the universe for Felix's sake.

It took plenty of trial or error, but eventually, she locked on a single plan that seemed to have the highest chance of success...It was exactly the plan she used on Felix!

Felix moved past the memories of the vision, wanting to see Lilith in action personally. Now, the memory orb showed Lilith returning from the depth of the stone of reality's miasma with the same expression she entered with.

"You had enough of wasting our time?" Uranus sneered as he turned around, "Let's get the hell out already."

"Good thing you didn't abuse your laws at least." Eris nodded at Lilith.

No one seemed to suspect a thing like Lilith was gone for a mere couple of seconds...In reality, she was inside the vision for centuries if not more, to perfect her plan. While she had emerged as a different being entirely, no one was able to pick up on the changes. "It was fun to try, I was very close to touching the stone," Lilith replied lazily as she followed them.

"Oh? I wonder what would have happened if you did touch it." Eris wondered out loud.

"Probably instant death."

Uranus scoffed with a hint of dread in his eyes, quite terrified by the stone of reality. Ares kept his silence, unbothered by the whole situation.

Sometime later, the four upper unigins escaped the Echoing Tower and returned to the Eternal Kingdom, updating the three rulers on the results.

After some back and forth, they were excused and Lilith returned to her Palace.

The only difference between this scene in the vision and the real world was a tint of craziness buried behind Lilith...

'What's going to get me banished, but raise no suspicion?'

She wondered with a widened grin as her eyes reflected the gate to the celestial dimensional pocket, some wonderful and crazy ideas were roaming her mind...

Chapter 1896 Lilith's Memories. VIII

For the next couple of hours, Felix and the tenants watched how Lilith's life took a drastic turn.

Starting with enforcing an earlier banishment by attempting to steal the universe's heart. Since she was already antagonizing most of the unigins, the majority voted to get her kicked out, finally done with her shenanigans.

After she was banished, Lilith slumbered for a short while to avoid any eyes on her. Then, she kicked off her plan by wishing for Nimo's birth.

Since Nimo was considered an anomaly, the wish was just too expensive. This caused her to get punished heavily by the universe.

Lilith didn't seem to care as she placed Nimo's egg at the heart of the void realm and she returned to her slumber.

Felix fast-forwarded the memories until Lilith woke up to find herself in the Primogenitors Era.

She straightway kicked off the second part of the plan. She located Lord Khoas and charmed him with her words, manipulating him emotionally to give her everything she wanted to create the void creatures' race.

With his help, Lilith's punishment was reduced immensely as she didn't use the universe's assistance for everything.

After she was done, she threw him away like disposable garbage.

Everyone turned to look at Lord Khaos, feeling somewhat sorry for him.

Being treated in that manner was terrible on its own, but discovering later that his misfortune ended up benefiting the very man he had bet on to bring him justice, was a different story.

"Don't feel bad for me. We are all puppets, dancing under the hands of the universe consciousness."

Lord Khaos said expressionlessly one last time before retreating from the gathering, having no interest in watching the rest.

"..."

"..."

"..."

The tenants' expressions immediately turned solemn, understanding none of them truly possessed free will.

While Lord Khaos was manipulated a bit more directly, their entire existence came to be for the sake of helping the universe's consciousness reborn through Felix.

As much as they considered this a noble purpose due to their tight relationship with Felix, it didn't change the fact that their lives were attached to strings from birth.

"Don't think too much about it." Eris said calmly, "Even the three rulers are under the same puppet master. You should feel glad that we are on his side."

In her eyes, if everyone was under the same curse, it was much better to be on the side of the caster.

The tenants seemed to agree with her as everyone dropped those depressing thoughts and returned to Lilith's memories.

They witnessed the emergence of the void creatures, and the universe's history started to become familiar to them...The same civilizations fell and the same ones rose in their place.

Felix quickly skipped to the Dark Ages era and watched as Lilith started a new project on the other side of the Great Nothingness...The birth of the Demon race!

She extended her palm forward and started to channel the darkest and most malevolent energy within her until it condensed into a crimson orb.

This was her evil energy born from the seven sins laws...As an energy, it had no consciousness and Lilith knew that it would take forever for it to gain it on its own.

Thus, she accelerated the process by using a wish, sacrificing everything she prepared as a price.

"Rise, Lucifer, born of my soul's night, bearer of chaos, and bane of the light."

With the final word, the crimson orb started to take shape into a tall and regal figure. His presence exuded a raw dark charisma while his entire aura screamed of wickedness.

As his features developed, his appearance started to resemble Felix more and more until eventually, he was more or less his very twin!

Only now did Felix and the tenants have their assumption confirmed about Lucifier's identical appearance to Felix being a result of Lilith's doing.

She had been staring at him for centuries while perfecting her plan.

"Knowing her, she must have definitely done this to mess with you." Apollo chuckled.

"Most likely." Felix's eyelids twitched.

Meanwhile, Lucifer opened his eyes for the first time just to see Lilith's breathtaking beauty covering his line of sight.

At first sight, he felt a kind of connection to her like no other, making him lower his head and speak his first-ever word.

"Mother."

Lilith observed him with detached indifference, her eyes cold and calculating. She had crafted him to be the perfect instrument for her plans.

But as she looked at him, she felt no attachment, no maternal instinct. To her, Lucifer was nothing more than a means to an end, a tool in her grand scheme.

But, she had no interest in telling him this.

"Lucifer, my greatest creation," She spoke, her voice carrying a bit of warmth, "I brought you to this life for a simple reason... You must grow strong enough to dominate the universe and reclaim the throne."

"My purpose is to own the universe..." Lucifer murmured to himself as he gazed into the distance.

Although he was recently born, Lilith made sure to feed him with some basic information as she had no interest in raising a clueless child.

"The only way to achieve your grand purpose is to merge with this entity and consume his powers." Lilith continued her brainwashing by showing Lucifer a spiritual picture of Felix from the future.

When Lucifer saw how he looked like Felix, he felt his chest thumping loudly, like it was calling him to merge with Felix as fast as possible.

"Lead me to him, Mother! I won't fail you!" Lucifer uttered with a cold resolve.

"Settle down, your destiny won't arrive until twenty million years from now." Lilith said, her voice growing fainter, "This should give you more than enough time to prepare for your ascension."

Before Lucifer could react, Lilith added one last time before her body disappeared into the ether, "I am going to slumber for a while... You know what to do."

"Mother...I..." Lucifer swallowed his words and promised while lowering his head, "Sleep well Mother, I have everything covered."

Lilith had indeed gone to sleep to recover from the punishment of bringing Lucifer to life. Although she prepared the price, it was still not enough for such a big wish that was capable of altering the entire history of the universe.

Meanwhile, Felix and the rest of the tenants were surprised to see that the memories had switched from Lilith's eyes to Lucifer's eyes.

"She probably obtained all of his memories after waking up." Lady Sphinx said.

Everyone nodded in agreement and continued watching as Lucifer navigated his new life on the other side of the universe.

If there was one word that could describe it, it would definitely be...Demonic.

Lucifer had brought hell on the entire population of the other side, demonizing anything that breathed.

He had only one goal in mind, to create an army of demons to help him with his universe's domination.

When he realized that his speed was slow, he created the other six demonic princes, giving them free will, unlike the rest of the demons.

Then, he retracted back to darkness and left them to fight amongst each other to obtain more territories until the other side became a demon-infested realm.

"So many lives lost, so many lives tortured...All for the sake of my ascension." Felix spoke under his breath with an expressionless look.

He had his emotions turned off as he watched the whole demonic massacre being carried out, knowing that if he didn't do it, he would be beyond disturbed.

He knew that nothing good would come up from reacting to those scenes, knowing that there was nothing he could do for them.

All he could do was make sure that such a massacre would never be carried out under his presence...He was already doing it by protecting the entire SGAlliance from the three rulers'.

"It's not for your ascension, it's for the universe's consciousness rebirth...Everything is for that goal." Eris said calmly.

"Goal huh?" Felix narrowed his eyes coldly, "I can't wait to find out about his reasoning."

Chapter 1897 Lilith's Memories. IX

After the demons took over the other side, years went by and the two sides remained separated, having no clue about their existence.

Felix fast-forwarded the memories until Lilith opened her eyes again. She did so the moment Felix was born.

She just kept following his journey without interfering, waiting for the perfect time. It arrived at last when Felix decided to search the Shurima Temple for treasures.

This time, everyone watched as Lilith opened a void portal and placed Nimo's egg above the Guardian's palm before disappearing.

Then, she watched him almost lose his life if it wasn't for the Devourer's heart acting as a secondary heart after half of his body got deleted by the beam.

Even then, she refrained from interjecting.

'Too much meddling will do more harm than not.' She said as she chewed gum with a careless look.

But, she still did something that none of them had expected.

She blinked to the deserted galaxy, where Kronos was known to reside. Then, she approached the black hole and spoke with a playful smile, "Krono, it's your favorite girl, how about you let me in?"

"Sigh..."

A deep sigh resounded from the black hole, making Lilith giggle in amusement before stepping inside the death machine.

However, she ended up emerging on the other side in one piece, leaving her to gaze at the frozen timeline with a look of intrigue.

"Lilith," Kronos rumbled, "You know you're wasting your efforts."

Lilith focused on Kronos' massive eye above her and said calmly, "You know why I'm here, Krono. I've seen what's on the other side, and I want it."

Kronos' pupil thinned as it locked into her eyes. Then, a deep exhale left his lips, "No one wants that, Lilith. Believe me. What lies beyond is a burden, not a prize."

Lilith's lips curled into a small knowing smile. "Burden or not, I want it. I've seen what it can do, what it can unlock. And you, Krono, are going to help me get it."

Kronos stared at her for a long moment, the weight of countless ages behind his gaze.

"Very well. But remember, Lilith, once you cross that threshold, there's no turning back."

Lilith winked at him. "I'm counting on it."

Kronos shook his giant eye and then created a spacetime tear. In an instant, both of them were pulled into the tear, leaving behind the desolate wasteland and emerging into another frozen timeline.

When Lilith opened her eyes, she found herself standing above the Sealing Hall on the imprisonment grounds!

"This..."

Felix and the rest of the tenants were left stunned as they watched Lilith summon a golden earring from thin air. Then, she extended dark tentacles to wrap around the Sealing Hall.

With a single tug, the Sealing Hall was absorbed into the Golden Sun earring.

Lilith examined the earring with satisfaction, its weight a comforting presence in her palm. She fastened it to her ear, feeling the ancient power settle into place, now under her control.

She turned to Kronos, who watched her with a mixture of concern and resignation.

"You'll regret this," Kronos said quietly, his voice filled with a somber warning. "The price is higher than you think."

Lilith met his gaze with a cold smile. "Perhaps. But that's a risk I'm willing to take."

"Thank you for your help, Krono."

With that, she turned and vanished into the ether, leaving Kronos alone in the frozen timeline once more.

Felix paused the memories immediately, feeling like his brain was about to explode.

"I had a feeling that Lilith might have had a hand in getting me the sealing hall for Nimo's alter ego, but I never expected her to obtain it this way." Felix expressed, still trying to make sense of what he had witnessed.

"I am just as confused." Thor knitted his eyebrows, "How can she obtain another sealing hall from a different timeline? Isn't everything changeable besides the only constants, like unigins and natural realms?"

"True, if Asna was sealed in one timeline, there wouldn't be copies of her in other timelines, which means no sealing halls too." Candace tilted her head, "Is my understanding correct?"

"Your understanding is correct if you considered the other timelines as a standalone with their own people and set of rules." Eris clarified calmly, "But, it isn't. Those timelines are nothing but copies of the main universe frozen in different durations from the beginning of time to its end."

"Any changes occurring in the main universe, which is considered as the main timeline, will affect the rest of the timelines, changing everything while keeping it frozen."

"Aa, I still don't understand..." Candace smiled wryly.

"In simpler terms, when Kronos has sent Asna and Felix to a different frozen timeline twenty years in the past, he has awakened it as the new main timeline." Eris explained, "As the new main timeline, all other frozen timelines were affected based on the degree of the temporal manipulation. Since it was a mere twenty years, the past remained somewhat the same, but the changes occurring in the future were drastic enough, that the entire history was altered."

"This makes me believe that Kronos has tapped into a personal frozen timeline outside of the universe's rules. Otherwise, it shouldn't be possible to find a perfect sealing hall since Asna was locked in it while she was in the eternal kingdom."

"This meant the moment she disappeared, all the sealing halls in other frozen timelines should be gone too."

"That makes most sense." Lady Sphinx was the first to nod in understanding.

"That's why Lilith has gone to him, knowing that he is the only one with a spare sealing hall." Lord Marduk added.

"The real question should be why did Kronos decide to help her so easily and without any payment?" Felix knitted his eyebrows.

Knowing that all of Kronos' moves were calculated and had an end goal drove Felix to believe that he was helping him through Lilith.

After all, it was clear that he was the only one knowing the full truth about their universe.

"It's like he is trying to help you reach the truth on your own," Asna said, "He has been helping you from the shadows and when you directly asked him for it, he rejected it."

"I think so too." Felix nodded.

Now that Lilith had the Sealing Hall, it didn't take a genius to know what her next move was.

As expected, Lilith took off towards Foremother Siamese's galaxy, seeking a meeting with no one but Lord Zurvan!

The only person who could help her with her plan without jeopardizing anything.

While Lord Zurvan was a mere primogenitor, he was still the primogenitor of time. Thus, the moment Lilith emerged from a portal in front of his cozy cottage, he didn't seem surprised one bit.

"I have been expecting you, Madam Lilith." He greeted as he sat on a table with two cups of tea already poured.

Lilith didn't bother taking his offer at the table.

She threw the Golden Sun earrings on the table and said calmly, "You know what to do with it."

Then, she turned around and left before Foremother Siamese could interfere.

"My lord, what was that?" Foremother Siamese's voice resounded in the cottage.

"My small and humble role." Lord Zurvan smiled bitterly as he played with the earring in his hand, his pupils reflecting a vision.

A vision showing Felix coming to this very cottage to collect this earring...

Chapter 1898 Lilith's Memories. X

After Lilith left, she took away the vision with her, making it impossible for Felix and the others to see what happened next at the cottage.

"It makes sense for the earring to have a mark of my soul since Lilith could easily obtain it through a wish or from her future Intel." Felix held his chin thoughtfully, "But, why choose Lord Zurvan for the task? Also, why does it seem like Lord Zurvan knows more about the future than the three rulers? Isn't he blocked by the veil just like the rest of us?"

When Felix first received the earrings, he didn't know about many things, making him assume that the three rulers had a hand in this.

Even the earring's origin must be related to Hephaestus, as he was the only forger qualified to craft such divine spatial jewelry capable of holding the Sealing Hall.

The moment he was introduced to the world of unigins, many of his previous questions could be easily answered.

But now, he was confused by different ones.

"She must have chosen him because she knows he can see the future fully without similar consequences." Eris said calmly, "I believe the veil isn't there to block everyone from peering through it and seeing how the future is, but just a selected few."

"Zurvan must have not been picked since anything he has seen can't be shared or he will instantly forget it the moment he tries to do it." Lady Sphinx expressed.

"That's true, he is cursed to see the future, but not share it with anyone." Thor frowned, "But, based on his reaction, I don't think he is seeing as far as Kronos. Otherwise, his reaction shouldn't be as mild."

The tenants nodded in agreement, knowing that it was impossible for Lord Zurvan to be more composed than Kronos.

If the truth was shocking and terrifying enough to traumatize Kronos into erasing his memories periodically, then it should have ruined Lord Zurvan.

In other words, he had information about the future, but he must have no clue what awaited them on the other side of the universe's heart.

"This is probably the reason the rulers never bothered him." Fenrir said, "They know that he has no clue about the other side, and extracting information from him is useless since everything he was seeing, will be blocked for them."

Everyone agreed, knowing that Lord Zurvan was merely wielding a fraction of the three rulers' powers.

"If he can see that far into the future, this means that he must have brought the entire galaxy into life with all elementals in it for your sake." Lord Marduk addressed, "We all thought it was based on an experiment, but it's useless to experiment on something you already know the answer for."

"It's true...The elemental galaxy has helped Felix immensely both in his cultivation due to the time difference and most importantly, with his fight against Nimo's alter ego!" Candace raised an eyebrow in surprise, "Foremother Siamese can be said to be the only being in the matter universe who had what it took to help out with Nimo's alter ego!"

When the tenants recalled how everything went down, even when Felix failed to defeat Nimo's alter ego with Foremother Siamese's help, it still gave him the confidence needed to commit to such a suicidal battle.

After all, he was at a deity level attempting to fight off a unigin, although he was weakened.

"I will get my answers when I pay him a visit." Felix said calmly, "We still owe Foremother Siamese a favor for her help."

Felix swiftly unpaused the memories and watched as the years kept going by and Lilith's eyes never left him, watching every single game of his and every war he took.

Even when Felix got smitten by the three rulers and sent to the spirit realm, she didn't help him out.

She was certain that Felix would emerge in one piece from the spirit realm as he always pulled it off in the vision.

Only this time, she wished for one thing. 'Hadey, don't disappoint me now...My cutie has enough clues to help you see beyond his mortally limits.' Lilith murmured, 'Show him the way, lead him to me.'

As the tenants heard her thoughts, shivers coursed down their spines at such a freakish manipulation...Even Lord Hades had no idea that he was part of Liltih's plan.

As expected, Lord Hades ended up helping Felix with his ascension, telling him the exact steps he had to follow to ensure it.

From devouring Lucifer and becoming the new personification of evil to fighting off against Nimo's alter ego for the sake of obtaining his core and ascending during the origin realm breakthrough.

Everything was perfectly planned, making everyone appreciate Lord Hades' intelligence and foresight. Only now did they understand that Lord Hades was a mere puppet to Lilith's scheme.

In fact, Lord Hades always knew that Lilith was up to something after picking up on those details, but he didn't manage to figure it out.

Soon, the scene jumped to when Felix was fighting against Nimo's alter ego while Lilith was watching in his mind with the rest of the tenants.

This time, they could read her thoughts during this brutal and impossible battle.

'He will probably hate me forever for this, but it's the only way to reach the other side without compromising the plan.' Lilith thought to herself with a faint smile as she watched him getting beat up like crazy.

'Me and Asna are born out of the same core, which makes us twin sisters. While her new home is a thousand times better than mine, if I manage to get into it and spend enough time, I might be able to fool her core once.' Lilith pondered, 'It might work or not, but it's the only defensive measure I will have to ensure my stay.'

"Lilith!! Please help him!!" Suddenly, the tenants' cries to save Felix from Nimo's alter ego after landing in the void realm, echoed thunderously in her mind.

The situation outside wasn't looking good for Felix in the slightest and if no one were to intervene, this would be the end of him.

He was already on the verge of losing consciousness before Asna's core had the time to finish the devouring process.

'Looks like it's time.' Lilith smiled inwardly, but externally, she paid a visit to Felix at the depth of his subconsciousness.

Felix and the others watched as she twisted his arm to give her access to Asna's core.

She left him with no choice as she made it clear that if he refused her, she would kill him and take Asna's core anyway.

Though, she promised to hand it to the three rulers, which was the only thing Felix could never agree on.

Thus, Felix agreed eventually while his heart burned with hatred and anger at Lilith's betrayal.

'If only he knows how deep the rabbit hole goes, will he still react like this?' Lilith chuckled inwardly as she watched Felix vow to end her life for this.

When she said this, everyone turned to look at Felix, wanting to know if his feelings changed after watching Lilith's memories and understanding her motives.

She had indeed manipulated him, but at the same time, if she hadn't, his life would have ended on top of a mountain by suicide.

That future repeated itself so many times, that it became clear to Felix that his fate had to be changed manually for him to continue his growth...Lilith made herself into the boogeyman to help him with it.

While her ways were demonic and merciless, and should be questioned by anyone with morals, if she didn't go that far, it might not have been enough to change Felix's fate this drastically.

"It's still early," Felix replied emotionlessly, knowing that Lilith's death was still an enigma.

If he wasn't certain that Lilith's memories were real, he would already assume that she was showing him all of this to change his perspective of her...Another form of manipulation.

But, she could never alter her memories that drastically before two celestials without them spotting it immediately.

After Lilith guaranteed her stay in Asna's core, Felix went on to ascend into a unigin at least, escaping from that ominous ending in the vision.

From here on, Lilith's information from the vision should have been over, yet, she did something none of them would have expected...

After Felix lost his consciousness, Lilith was still in control of her laws and powers. Instead of getting rid of Nimo's alter ego, she sent him to the Quantum Realm for one last mission.

'Don't return until you map out the entire Echoing Tower.' She ordered calmly.

Chapter 1899 Lilith's Memories. XI (End)

Nimo's alter ego listened to her order instantly, disappearing towards the Quantum realm. It took him no time to find the Echoing Tower, but entering it was a different story.

He was forced to wait many years before the entrance opened up, but due to the massive time difference between the realms, it changed nothing.

After he went inside, the first thing that came before him was the massive dreadful eye on the sky, making the tenants realize that the tower's topmost floor was the hundredth!

"No wonder the map was found on this floor, the upper ones didn't exist during the mapping," Thor remarked.

"I am more confused about Lilith's reasoning for doing this." Candace wondered, "Does her future information go as far as Felix entering the tower? Or did she just take a guess?"

"It must be an educated guess." Felix knitted his eyebrows, "She understood that there would come a time when I might enter the Echoing Tower to retrieve the stone of reality."

"She wanted to help you one last time before she loses her powers," Thor added as he watched Nimo's alter ego map out the tower, floor by floor.

He used his laws whenever needed to survive the floors' peculiar mechanism. Since the seven sins laws worked perfectly in the tower, he found not much struggle even when he was all alone.

After a decent period and many tough moments, Nimo's alter ego managed to map out the tower and detail every floor's mechanism before writing them all on a giant monolith.

Returning to the hundredth floor, he strode purposefully to the stone of reality on the first floor and came to a halt directly in front of the miasma cloud.

Lilith swiftly retook control and gazed at the stone of reality with a hint of intrigue, wondering if it would show her a new vision.

"Hmmm?"

However, the moment she took a step inside the miasma, she came to a shocking discovery.

The stone of reality was rejecting her advances!

"That's it?" Lilith raised an eyebrow, "Is my role finished?"

Silence.

The stone of reality refused to let her get any closer and if she were to force it, she knew that her fate would be similar to Uranus.

Thus, she shrugged her shoulders and turned around, leaving one last statement, "I have done my part, it's on him now."

Lilith sent Nimo's alter ego to the hundredth floor and made him place the giant monolith somewhere visible. Then, it erased his existence once and for all.

Felix paused the memories.

"Her impact on your life can be said to be monumental. To even predict your next move and prepare ahead to help you out...Sigh, she really pulled all stops to ensure reaching the other side." Elder Kraken said with a wry smile.

"While she did all of this for her own selfish reasons, it still doesn't change the fact that your life would have been drastically different without her interference." Lady Sphinx said.

The tenants nodded in agreement.

"If it's just for selfish reasons, why did she have to sacrifice herself at the end for Mom's sake?" Nimo asked in confusion.

The tenants nodded in agreement.

"If it's just for selfish reasons, why did she have to sacrifice herself at the end for Mom's sake?" Nimo asked in confusion.

"That's what we are going to find out," Felix said with a cold look as he skipped through Lilith's memories until he reached the end.

He stopped the moment he exposed the massive snake, biting into Asna's core. This time, they witnessed the conflict from Lilith's perspective.

'Well, this is an unexpected turn of events.' Lilith uttered coldly as he gazed at the snake, realizing that her plan was about to be ruined at its final steps.

'If the three rulers repossessed Asna's soul with her core, it's a game over for me.' She had been awaiting Asna's rebirth with great patience, and this wasn't the ending she had hoped for.

The worst part? She could see that Felix was somewhat hopeless in this situation as he had no time to take care of the snake before Asna's soul concluded its rebirth.

When she saw that he was about to blow Asna's soul again, she shook her head, 'A good counter-measure, but a little bit too late.'

Knowing that their fate was sealed, Lilith glanced above, like she was staring directly into Felix's eyes, and showed a faint hopeless smile, 'All I ever wanted is to see the other side again...'

Before Felix and the tenants could react, Lilith joined the confrontation and used Core Flare Cleansing.

It erased the divine snake, but at the same time, it disintegrated Lilith with it.

The memories ended the moment she was dead, the screen turning black, akin to a movie ending abruptly.

"..."

"..."

"..."

The tenants were left gazing at the black screen in silence, many thoughts roaming their minds about the whole situation.

All of them knew that Lilith was addressing Felix at the end with her thoughts, knowing that after her death, Asna would inherit her memories due to the connection they shared.

While she didn't make it direct or beg him outright, it was obvious that she was wishing for him to see the whole picture and help her achieve her dream too, just like she helped him.

After a brief silence, Lady Sphinx turned to Felix and asked, "What do you think?"

"Her ways were questionable, but she still has placed a bet on me," Felix uttered with a strict tone.

If he wasn't in complete control of his emotions, he wouldn't have been this calm about it. His mind and heart would have already turned his soul into a battlefield, one thinking rationally and the other emotionally.

When it came to rationality, Lilith had shown everyone that every move of hers was in Felix's future benefit even if it made her be perceived as the bad guy.

On the other hand, it was nearly impossible to forget what Lilith had put him through as his heart was burning for years to avenge itself.

Now, it found out that all of those emotions were for naught...Such a drastic change would be difficult for anyone to accept.

But, Felix was a celestial now and his rationality always came first in such decisions, making him understand that his enemies currently, weren't Lilith, but the three rulers.

"Whether she has done all of this for her selfish reasons or not, the point still stands that I wouldn't be here without her diabolical manipulation." Felix decided calmly, "I will revive her when I deal with the three rulers."

"That's the smartest choice." Thor approved.

The rest of the tenants agreed too, knowing that even if Lilith was revived, she would no longer have any power over Felix.

After everything that he had seen, he didn't mind allowing Lilith to see the other side one last time.

But for now, he had to focus on what was about to come.

"Asna, the chains will ensnare you in less than three seconds." Felix shared calmly, "Are you ready?"

"I have been ready for more than twenty million years," Asna uttered coldly, her demeanor not matching her holy aura.

With a head nod, Felix tapped his finger on her forehead and obtained all the information related to her awakening.

He knew that she might not have turned out to be the universe's consciousness replacement as everyone predicted, but the awakening did make her a true celestial after unlocking all the laws in her possession.

In other words, she was the only being in the universe with full control over all laws...Even the seven sins, creation, and destruction!

Thus, her spiritual pressure might be similar to Felix and the three rulers due to them being all at the same rank, but their arsenal was entirely different.

That's what Felix came to find out after reading the information, making his lips crack into a cold smirk.

"With our powers combined, they wouldn't know what hit them."

"I am counting on it." Asna narrowed her eyes, "I have no interest in making the battle last long."

"Likewise."

Felix reached out with his hand and caught Asna's hand. Then, he waited until the last moment before the chains could wrap themselves on her, and teleported to the void realm!

The moment they reappeared, similar golden chains manifested out of nowhere and took hold of Felix akin to a hostage. Then, it started to pull him into an emerging golden portal with Asna still in hand.

Felix gazed at the portal, then at the universe he was leaving behind, before finally setting his eyes on his beloved.

With a faint warm smile, he said, "This is our first and last battle...Let's show them the monsters they have created with their own hands."

"First and last battle, huh?" Asna smiled back, squeezing his hand, "Who can tell? It doesn't seem like there is nothing on the other side."

"I know, but whatever is on there, as long as we are together, me and you, nothing can hurt us." Felix uttered coldly, "The three rulers are the first to have a taste."

The moment the last word left Felix's lips, their bodies got dragged into the portal, disappearing at once.

The portal closed behind them almost immediately, seemingly sparing the mortals of the matter universe from witnessing something, their minds couldn't fathom even if they tried.

A battle that would define the future of the universe for the next eons to come...

Chapter 1900 Peace Was Never an Option.

The moment they passed the portal, Felix and Asna stood on a sea of clouds, stretching infinitely in all directions.

Their intrusion hadn't gone unnoticed as the moment their feet touched the clouds, the three rulers were alerted.

"They are here," Amun-Ra uttered coldly.

"Keep it in, let's try the peaceful approach." The first ruler said calmly as he waved his finger.

Immediately after, the divine incarnations of the three rulers appeared high above Felix and Asna, parting the sea of clouds like gods about to reveal themselves.

"Paragon, Asna, we have long since awaited your arrival." The first ruler welcomed with extended arms, "Do excuse our forceful approach, but, you have left us no choice."

"Forceful approach?" Felix replied expressionlessly, "You have needlessly massacred tens of millions of lives. Lives of mortals, who knew nothing about our celestial matters."

"Paragon, you are a celestial now, you should act accordingly." Amun-Ra said coldly, "Mortals' lives are just as meaningless as a drop of water in an ocean."

Felix's expression remained indifferent...He had long gone past being affected by anyone's words and this entire conversation in his eyes was meaningless.

He knew that the three rulers didn't attack them because they wanted to work things out amicably.

After all, celestials were in complete control over their emotions and they could easily skip over their hatred and anger if needed.

As much as Felix and Asna had tortured and annoyed the crap out of them, now that they were celestials, they felt that the best move to reach the other side was if they worked together.

After all, with Felix's ability to deconstruct celestial energy combined with their saved pools from billions of years, they would have enough to brute force the universe's heart.

As expected...

"We are all celestials here and it's clear, we seek the same goal." Medusa interjected with a gentle smile, "To find out the truth about our universe and what is hidden on the other side."

"So, how about we put our differences aside and work together to solve this puzzle? Once we are done, you can carry on with your vengeance, we don't mind."

'The nerve to suggest a partnership out loud after everything that happened.' Ancestral Dragon Imyr sneered hatefully.

He felt like the three rulers treated everyone and everything as disposable trash. When Felix and Asna were weak, the three rulers' did everything to make their lives a living hell.

But, the moment they became celestials, they suddenly garnered their respect to treat them as equals.

Asna felt the same.

"Only you bastards have a thick face to propose a partnership with us." Asna narrowed her eyes frigidly, "Did you really think there was a one percent chance we would agree?"

"Yes, because at the end of the day, aren't we all slaves to this universe and doing whatever it takes to free ourselves?" The first ruler said composedly.

The three rulers still had no clue about the universe's consciousness attempting to revive himself through Felix.

In other words, they were doing all of this just to escape from this universe, having no idea that their entire existence was nothing but another pawn to the universe's consciousness.

As much as Felix wanted to tell them, he knew that they wouldn't give him the satisfaction of seeing a good reaction.

Thus, he didn't bother entertaining their proposal.

He sat down cross-legged and manifested the fabric of logic in front of him.

Without glancing in the three rulers' direction, Felix said calmly, "Unfortunately, peace was never an option."

Rumble! Rumble!!

The space around him began to rumble, responding to his intent. He could sense the Void Realm, sealed off and isolated, but not for long.

With a deep breath, he pulled on the invisible threads that bound the Void Realm, desiring to break off the seal once and for all!

Cracks began to form around him, faint at first, but quickly spreading like spiderwebs through the air.

The clouds beneath his feet trembled, and the sky above flickered with strange chaotic patterns.

"He is tapping into the void realm." Athena remarked with a solemn tone, "If he were to break the seal and establish a connection, he would have an infinite supply of celestial energy."

"Good, it's about time someone put those bastards in their place," Aeolus uttered coldly, spectating the ongoing conflict from the safety of his domain.

"Seems like getting killed by him wasn't enough for you to hate him," Artemis chuckled.

"Hate him?" Aeolus sneered, "My hatred is exclusive to the three rulers after treating us like slaves."

"How about you? You feel the same..." Athena added as she glanced in the direction of a beautiful goddess, "Demeter."

One hundred thousand years was more than enough for unigins to not just recover their souls, but for their entire cores to be recreated by the universe's heart.

Although Felix had sacrificed Demeter's core for a wish, the universe's heart still came through and created a new one.

"Hate?" Demeter shook her head calmly, "It was never personal between us, I know it, he knows it. I have no loyalty to either side."

Before her peers could respond, the words were crushed in their throats by three powerful waves of spiritual pressure descending upon Felix and Asna!

They were so strong, that the unigins felt it within their own domains, making them incapable of imagining what the target would feel like!

Well, it felt like the weight of millions of galaxies pressing down on Felix's shoulders, forcing him to stagger a bit.

Yet, Felix didn't bother to even lift his head...He just continued working on breaking apart the seal.

While he ignored them, Asna had no intentions of doing the same.

She stepped in front of him, her form glowing with a radiant light that cut through the oppressive spiritual waves.

With a stern visage, she extended her palm forward and released her own spiritual pressure, colliding against the three rulers' spiritual pressures at once!

Booooooom!!

When most would assume that three spiritual pressures would overwhelm one, the exact opposite occurred!

The collision created a thunderous shockwave, tearing the clouds around them apart, and fracturing the sky above!

Asna merely stood in front of her man, unmoving akin to a rock.

The callous look on her face made it clear to everyone that she wasn't going to allow any harm to befall her beloved!

"Woah...Mother is so strong." Nimo murmured, his eyes sparkling in fascination.

"Strong? You have yet to see anything..." Eris merely smiled, her eyes never leaving Asna's face.

Meanwhile, the three rulers' incarnations seemed quite surprised that Asna's spiritual pressure didn't manage to completely evaporate theirs.

'It seems like our assumption was wrong.' Amun-Ra smiled coldly, 'Her awakening must have empowered her somehow, but not enough to give her a similar authority to the universe.'

Felix had been using his spiritual pressure to keep them hidden, making it impossible for the three rulers to see anything related to Asna's awakening.

That's why they sent out incarnations and used their spiritual pressure first, desiring to test out the waters before committing to the battle.

'This changes everything.' Medusa's expression also turned sinister, 'Her spiritual pressure is merely slightly better than ours, but not strong enough to overwhelm us.'

The first ruler and Amun-Ra shared a knowing glance, understanding what Medusa was implying.

Still, The first ruler remained calm as he said, 'The plan stays the same.'

The moment he finished, Amun-Ra and Medusa disappeared from the dimensional pocket and reappeared on top of their incarnations' shoulders...They gazed at Felix and Asna with looks void of any emotion.

"Will you be fine against them both?" Felix asked calmly while his eyes never left the wall of logic.

Asna turned her head and showed a faint cruel smile before uttering, "You should worry about them."

Then, she walked forward, her steps were so graceful they merely left soft ripples on the floor of clouds.

As she was walking forward, two blades manifested on her hands...One was crafted with crimson energy while the other with gray energy.

They were simple and had no details, resembling two swords created out of pure energy. Yet, everyone felt shivers course down their spine after noticing their intense auras, making them understand that a single slice by them was enough to cut through anything!

The quick-witted ones had already figured out the blades' source.

'Destruction and creation blades...' Eris murmured, 'Will they be enough?'
