Chapter 211 - Lighting Up The Fuse!

'Not on my watch.' Felix sneered as he created two mustard yellow bombs!

He removed the giant leaf and stood up, exposing himself to the players near him.

All of them felt a sudden chill course on their spine at the thought of being this close to the predator of the game without their knowledge!

They immediately jumped to another tree, putting as much distance as possible.

Though, they didn't leave as they were eager to watch the upcoming battle and see if they could take any advantage. Find authorized novels in , faster updates, better experience, Please click #!_50694348962067844 for visiting.

They weren't the only ones eager, as Meliodas, who had Felix in his eyesight all the time, switched the camera from Rosanna to Felix, putting him back on the large screen.

Whoosh Whoosh!

The moment Felix appeared on the screen, he was shown throwing the yellow bombs at the Alliance formation, targeting the biggest cluster, which was behind Rosanna.

Poof poof!

Before the sound of the bombs approaching them could register in their mind, the bombs exploded right within their ranks, making those with horrifying reaction speed to hold their breaths reflexively while jumping backward, trying to leave the mustard yellow mist.

Fortunately for Felix, only two players reacted this way. As for the affected three, who were in the contact zone? they stood stiffly, completely paralyzed while feeling like the world was spinning around them.

That's right!

The mustard yellow bomb was a merged inducement created from combining paralyze and dizziness inducement!

Felix being at 84% integration plus with Asna's back-up energy, finally made him feel comfortable to use merged inducements without worrying too much about being cost-efficient.

"Bloodriod, take care of him with your alliance!" Displeased by having her pictures ruined, Rosanna ordered the warrior-like man while pointing her finger at Felix, who was rushing at them while holding two acid green bombs.

"Consider it done."

Bloodriod and his alliance narrowed their eyes in focus and charged towards Felix, preparing to dodge the bombs at any moment.

Too bad, Felix was never aiming at them!

Poof poof!

Abruptly! Two acid green bombs exploded exactly on the Crown, encasing it in a green misty cloud!

Rosanna's expression turned unsightly as she was forced to back away from the Crown, not daring to have her skin touched by the acid.

Now, even if she wanted to hold the Crown, she had no way to approach it unless she had an ability that could protect her against the corrosion.

"Bastard!" Infuriated, she gritted her teeth while glaring at Felix, who escaped the moment he threw those bombs, dragging with him Bloodriod and his alliance.

After seeing that she lost half of her army, while the other half had most of its members poisoned, Biohunter's eyes lighted up as he ordered, "GO GO! Kill everyone but her! She is worth more alive!"

"Don't let anymore approach the Crown!"

"Kill whoever you see!"

The rest of the alliances and partnersh.i.p.s hidden in the area, all started to leave their shell as well, aiming unsurprisingly not at the Crown but at each other!

All of this was part of Felix's plan!

He understood that making the first move was all he needed for the fuse to light up and make the situation descend into a one for all chaotic battle!

The only reason no one made a move before was because the alliances' leaders were not trusting in each other to combine their strengths and attack at once.

No one dared to make the first move as he would be attracting the most attention and hate.

Seeing Felix jumping from a tree to another while being chased by bloodriod and his alliance was enough proof.

"Don't lag behind!" Bloodriod ordered his allies as he kept swinging his heavy sword at the giant leaves, which were blocking his sight from spotting Felix.

The spectators noticed that Felix's speed was strangely slower than he displayed when he chased down HeavyMetal. They believed that based on those six players' speed, Felix should have been out of their sight by now.

Yet, there was always 40 meters or so between them that couldn't be bridged no matter how hard Bloodriod and his allies pushed themselves.

This carried on until five kilometers was put between them and the Crown.

'I think I am far enough.' Felix glanced behind him with a hidden glint while slowing down his speed gradually until he finally entered the attacking range of the elemental rangers.

"Scatter Sand!" Bloodriod shouted as he aimed his palm at Felix's back, releasing sand blasts, which started to split into multiple fragments! The rest of his allies each used an elemental ability, showering Felix at the same time!

Phew! Phew! Whoosh!...

Without turning his head and checking on the approaching salvo of elemental abilities, Felix bent his knees on the branch he was on and hurled himself to a dangling thin tree branch, catching it with his arms!

Due to his great momentum, the thin branch swung Felix away from the impact zone!

Boom! bam!...

Without losing composure by the loud explosions behind him, Felix let go of the thin branch after reaching its peak velocity, making him fly into another tree branch!

Since he was swung in a weird position, he did a backflip in the air to make his feet be the first to touch the branch.

Thud!

After landing, he rolled two times and crouched on the branch for a second before standing up and starting to dust his clothes.

Whoah!!

The spectators cheered after seeing such a fine maneuver, that made their blood boil in excitement.

Strangely, they weren't the only ones excited as Bloodriod and his allies kept gazing at Felix with an abnormal fervor. Felix grinned faintly at those looks, as he knew what they were aiming for.

'Hehe, they are looking at you like a piece of gold.' Asna said in amusement while taking large sips from a can of coke.

"Want my head for the bounty?" Indifferent, Felix asked out loud while having his hands in his hoodie's pockets, hiding two pitch-black bombs!

"If it wasn't for it, I wouldn't have dared to hunt you." Bloodriod looked at Felix with a stoic expression, "But the 500 million on your head is too much to pass by."

"In 30 seconds, you will change your mind." Felix snickered as he snapped his finger, engulfing himself with a white aura, hindering their vision.

"Cikao, MoonSight, go block his retreat path!" After seeing that Felix wasn't planning on running anymore, Bloodriod decided to surround him first before collapsing on him from all sides.

However, The two players had an unwilling expression as they kept gazing at the white aura without blinking.

'Greedy morons!' Bloodriod understood what was on their minds.

They were worried that after they leave, Felix would have already gotten killed by Bloodriod and the rest.

Based on their alliance's contract, those without contribution wouldn't get any part of the reward!

"The bounty will be split evenly!" Bloodriod shouted, "SO MOVE YOUR F*CKING ASSES!"

Cikao and Moon Sight stopped hesitating any further after hearing so. They gave Felix one last glance and went both in one direction.

However, the moment they jumped on a tree that had fewer leaves than the rest, two pitch-black bombs rushed from the white mist, heading in their direction!!

Poof Poof!

just like they were hit by homing missiles, one bomb exploded half a meter above the head of Cikao while the other exploded in front of Moon Sight!

Scared shitless, they both held their breath as they guarded their skin against black inducement.

Alas, it was already too late, as all it took was a single particle touching them, and the 20 inducements started raging inside their bodies and minds.

It didn't take even a split second before their bodies started to disintegrate into black particles, drifting by the wind and utterly disappearing from existence.

The sight was so mindblowing that the spectators and the players near Felix, all had their mouths left agape, too shocked to close it.

Bloodriod's hand, which was holding the heavy sword started to tremble, expressing his extreme fear at what he just witnessed.

He always believed just like everyone else that Felix's black inducement was usable only after he activates his ultimate ability.

This conclusion wasn't his own but belonging to the majority of supremacy games' analytics in the network!

They watched and analyzed Felix's 2nd game frame by frame, second by second, and after seeing the numerous missed chances of Felix using the black inducement, they deduced that he wasn't able to use it without activating his ultimate ability first!

This gave the players in the game, who clearly done their homework on Felix, the belief that he would only use the black inducement when he gets heavily injured.

This conclusion might not sound that convincing, but it was the only logical explanation that could be extracted from the available information about Felix in the network.

So, neither Bloodriod, the players, nor the spectators anticipated the emergence of the black inducement this early in the game!

"Stop clowning around in my presence." Felix's nonchalant voice resounded from within the white aura, breaking everyone from their daze.

"Come at me all at once." Felix smirked while snapping his finger, removing the white aura, "My time is too precious to waste on you idiots."

"RUUUUUN!!!"

"Wait, what?"

Unfortunately for Felix, his taunt didn't make the players as humiliated and mad as he anticipated. Instead, from the remaining four players, three turned around and bolted as fast as possible with horrified expressions like they just saw the devil himself.

The only one, who was left behind was Bloodriod, who kept gazing at Felix without blinking his eyes even once.

"Sigh, I guess it's just me and you Mr. Blood." Felix looked at Bloodriod in his eyes and praised him, "At least, you are a man enough to figh..."

Whoosh!

Before Felix could finish expressing his approval for Bloodriod, his lips started twitching at the sight of him breaking down into sand particles, drifting into the air, making him feel like a retard talking to himself.

The f*cker wasn't even here in his real body!

'Pffffff! Cough! Cough!' Asna immediately spew a shower of cola from her mouth and nose as she tried to laugh while gulping down a mouthful.

Yet, even with cola dripping down her nose and tearful eyes, she was still laughing out loud at Felix, making his irritation increase threefolds after what just happened.

He didn't think that his black inducement would scare everyone into bailing away, not caring anymore about the fat bounty on his head.

'F*ck me, I should have downplayed my strength more!' Felix could only cry in his mind as he chased after them five times the speed he was escaping with before!

The sight of him approaching with such a dastardly speed scared the shit out of the players. By now, they already figured that Felix wanted to bait them away from the main battlefield to take care of them all at once without hindrance!

"SPLIT UP!" Terrified, one of them shouted as he turned right, leaving his allies' formation. The rest figured that his plan was truly the best one. Thus each chose a direction and hoped that the predator behind them, chose one of their allies instead of them.

"Since you proposed it, you will be the first." Peeved, Felix ignored the rest and chased after the player, who took the right direction.

He truly should have kept his mouth shut and escaped as one herd. Alas, it was already too late for regrets after getting marked by Felix.

AAAAAAAAAAAA!

Now? Only his pained screams resounded in the forest, making the rest of the players sweat buckets down their chins.

Chapter 212 - Buying Her Life!

"To actually turn into the hunter after being a prey for merely a couple of minutes." Meliodas smiled wryly as he praised, "Only when spectating Landlord, will you see those kinds of scenes."

Felix's fans puffed out their chest in pride while cheering at top of their voices, turning the stadium into their house!

It was clear that at minimum 5% of the spectators were Felix's fans, belonging to his club.

The two months between the games were more than enough for Felix's Fanclub to gather tens of millions of new members! Especially when Felix went viral for an entire week in the Mariana Empire after his 2nd game.

Right now, the natural spectators, who either still had no idea about Felix, or simply didn't give a crap about him as they came to cheer for their own people, started to feel the burn of having those fans breathing and screaming down their necks.

Alas, they could only complain in their minds and continue watching Felix hunting down the closest players one by one.

...

In the main battlefield, near the Crown, the entire forest was utterly ruined as trees had their huge branches snapped and lying all over the ground, and leaves of all colors and shapes were either burnt or still burning.

If the trees' stem wasn't humongous and steady, the trees would have been cut down and fell into the ground by now.

BOOM! Crack!....

The natural beauty of the forest was nowhere to be seen, as tens of players were battling each other using destructive abilities, ranging from using small fireballs to medium-sized lightning storms, striking down with an impartial accuracy.

Yet, throughout all of this, the Golden Crown remained floating in its position without a single blemish on its l.u.s.trous surface or the gems attached to it.

Heck, the branch, which the Crown was floating on before, was already destroyed to oblivion. But still, the Crown remained floating a hundred meters mid-air without support.

As long as no one took hold of it, it would stay like that until the game ends.

"Can anyone of you losers still fight?" Rosanna knitted her eyebrows in disgruntlement as she turned her head, eying the wounded three players, who survived the first onslaught with her.

Earlier when Felix left with Bloodriod and his allies, all the players in the forest collapsed on Rosanna and her goons, managing to kill two players and wound the rest.

She was only able to emerge unscathed due to her element and bloodline.

After so, she went into hiding and sent a message using the Queen to her allies to group up with her.

Now, they were watching the chaos unfold before them, not daring to make a move. But for how long could they stay like this?

The players were falling akin to flies near the Crown, downsizing the numbers each second. Before long, a player with a flying ability or other similar abilities would take advantage of their shortage and steal the Crown!

'Damn it, why is Bloodriod taking so long?' Irked, Rosanna kept looking at her bracelet, noticing that 7 minutes had gone by since she was contacted by him, informing her about his 'battle' with Felix.

Currently, she was waiting just for him in order to dive back in the battle, with the advantage of having more players in her alliance.

Whoosh!

Speak of the devil and he shall appear, as sand particles started to gather and form in front of Rosanna, making her yelp in surprise while pointing her green shimmering fingers in his direction.

"It's me." Bloodriod rubbed some sand particles off his shoulder as he stood in a composed manner.

"Where is the rest?" She tilted her head, looking behind him, hoping to spot his allies.

Unfortunately, Bloodriod response made her heart sink, "I am the only one who made it here."

He closed his eyes not wanting to display his fear and dread after remembering that chase.

"What the hell are you talking about?!" She shouted with flushed cheeks, "You told me that four of you escaped successfully from him!"

"Indeed, but we totally forgot that he had that overpowered eye vision!" His upper lip trembled as he said, "Whenever we believe that we had lost him, he suddenly pops up from behind us and starts throwing bombs at us. And the f*cked up part, he was five times faster than us!" He massaged his eyelids as he kept speaking, "Every time he caught one of us, he engulfs him in his acid aura, making him beg for mercy just to have his head explode by a punch or a kick."

"By the time, I made it to the main field, I believe that only Sierra had escaped since she went in the opposite direction from us." Find authorized novels in , faster updates, better experience, Please click #!_50698490904364281 for visiting.

Horrified and aghast, the wounded players behind Rosanna gulped a mouthful after hearing him retelling what happened like he was telling a ghost story in a camp.

However, they believed every word that came out of his lips as they saw what a f*cking Psycho Felix was inside the maze shuffle.

"Then how did you escape?" She asked.

"There is no reason for me to tell you." Bloodriod wasn't a fool to explain his abilities to other players.

"Tsk" Rosanna clicked her tongue in annoyance as she ordered, "Whatever, get ready we will join the fight in one minute."

Argh! Ouch...

Pained, the players kept groaning out loud as they tried to stand while putting pressure on their heavy wounded areas.

Some had their back or chest completely burnt off while some had a long bloody wound on their limbs.

"Keep groaning all day long, you losers are coming with me." Rosanna gave them a cold glance.

"Sadly for you, none of you are going anywhere."

Whoosh!

Before the shock of hearing a stranger's voice within their hiding spot set in their minds, their vision was suddenly blinded by the bright yellow color, making them want to close their eyes reflexively.

Alas, their eyelids were as unresponsive as ever.

'What's goin...Argh, my head!!' Rosanna didn't manage to finish even one thought before the world started to spin rapidly, making her feel extremely dizzy.

Thud Thud Thud...!

The only sound that was going through her mind was the noise of hard objects colliding.

A few moments later, which felt like years to her, the bright yellow mist was removed from her sight.

However, the paralyze and dizzy effect still lasted for five seconds before she regained her senses back.

Just as she tried to activate her escape ability, she felt her neck getting clutched and tightened, making her face turn purple.

After feeling the strength of the hand around her neck, she knew that her life could be ended faster than thought!

"How much do you think your life is worth?" Felix asked with a faint smile while gazing at her behind the darkness of his hoodie.

"Mmmm!!!"

She kept making muffled noises while looking at him with bloodshot eyes, trying her best to let him know that she was having difficulty breathing.

How was she supposed to answer when he was strangling her like that? Some of the spectators had this thought coursing in their minds.

"Use the Queen to give me your price." Felix's faint smile was wiped out of his face as he said coldly, "You have three seconds to please me with a good price before I snap your neck." He warned, "Don't attempt to activate an ability. I know that your plant elemental abilities require at least a second to activate."

'You hateful prick!' Rosanna could only curse in her mind as Felix's knowledge of her abilities was spot on.

She was a plant Elementalist with a legendary bloodline with abilities more oriented towards battles instead of support like Olivia's.

As Felix said, her abilities require plants to manifest first and that required time she didn't afford currently!

Hence, she could only drop any attempt to escape and laid down her price, 'I only have 500 million in my account after I spent all the rest hiring those useless sc.u.m.'

"Show me your bank account." Felix asked out loud, not giving a shit if the spectators heard him or not.

If it was another player, they would have used the Queen for such a sensitive matter, as the spectators didn't like seeing players' life getting sold.

After all, if every player was caught and given the choice to buy his life with tens of millions or even hundred, what would be the point of them buying a ticket to come to watch the games, when all they would be seeing was players buying and selling each other instead of killing each other?

Hence, unless the price offered was worth the risk, the players rarely choose to head in that direction.

Felix never bothered with offering this option to the rest of the players as he knew that most of them couldn't afford to get him even a 100 million SC.

He wasn't going to ruin his reputation in the SG, which was going to make him billions of stream revenue on higher ranks due to momentary greed for those millions.

However, Rosanna was a special case, as she was being known as a walking cash pig in the games due to her mother's booming business in the UVR!

This made everyone, even Felix, to try and milk her out of her coins instead of killing her and getting 200 GP.

Without sounding a single complaint, Rosanna showed her bank account details, making Felix's eyelids twitch at the sight of hundreds of millions getting sent to her by the same account every month.

Without needing to ask, Felix figured that account belonged to her mother, sending a 'monthly allowance' for her to play with.

Only now did the facade of being born in a rich family wore off, making Felix feel like he was born a poor commoner instead!

Chapter 213 - Snatching The Crown!

'See, I'm not lying.' Rosanna sent another message, 'Give me the contract to sign and get it over with.'

She was truly used to this situation for her to be this cool-headed!

Not wanting to waste time as well, Felix quickly sent her a mind contract, entailing that she would pay 500 million for her life and they will not interact with each other in the game after.

After the Queen delivered it, Rosanna confirmed accepting the conditions and terms to the Queen, making the contract officially valid without signing with the UVR ID.

"Glad to do business with you, sister Rosanna." Felix unclutched her neck, making her drop to the ground while coughing her lungs out.

Her purple face soon started to regain some of its natural colors. After feeling a bit alright, she raised her head and glanced around her.

The sight that greeted her, didn't please her in the slightest, as corpses of her allies were lying around the area with a bullet-like wound on their foreheads.

"You bastard! Why did you kill them! They are worth 50 million each!"

Unfortunately for her, no one responded to her irked curse.

"Landlord?" Bewildered, she looked behind her back and saw that Felix was already gone.

The moment he got 500 million out of her, she lost her worth in his eyes!

"Rosanna, what are we going to do now?"

Out of nowhere, sand particles started to reform again in the shape of Bloodriod in front of Rosanna.

"YOU USELESS PIG!" The moment she noticed him, she started throwing all kinds of insults and curses, "You f*cker led him to us and left me all alone against him!" She asked while clenching her fists, "How dare you appear now after he left?!!"

"What do you want me to do?" He shrugged his shoulders with a careless attitude, "He had your life in his hands, if I showed myself, I will just complicate it more." He added, "If I attacked, I doubt you will live to see the end result of it."

"You are still a useless pig." Although she knew that he was right, she would never admit it.

She stood up while dusting her dress. Then, she approached the edge of the branch and lowered her head, gazing at the untouched Crown that was a hundred meters below her.

Who would have thought that her hiding spot was exactly above the Crown?!

And who would have thought that Felix didn't leave far from her position but head even upward, reaching the tip of the tree?!

'5 minutes left before the 2nd transmission.' Wholly camouflaged by leaves, Felix kept glancing at his bracelet then at the Crown. 'I will make a move after it ends.'

He already created a plan to snatch the Crown. It might take a lot of guts and a hint of craziness to pull it off, but Felix was still going for it!

That being said, Felix didn't want to hold the Crown right now as 5 minutes was nowhere enough of a headstart to run away before his location start getting transmitted all over.

He wasn't worried about someone taking the Crown in this duration, as the game was still in its early phase.

The only player with a solid chance to get the Crown and actually survive while holding it was Rosanna due to her mega alliance's protection.

However, after Felix got rid of her army and ruined her plans, the game was reset back to the start!

"Now that Landlord has gotten rid of the greatest threat, what's gonna be his next move?!" Meliodas pointed the camera at Felix as he wondered what was on the spectators' minds.

...

9 minutes later...

The Golden Beam in the sky, which was displaying the Crown's location, only had 1 minute before it turned off.

The fights near the Crown stopped at once the moment the transmission started 4 minutes ago.

Now, not a single soul could be seen in the area as everyone went on hiding.

Too bad, in the eyes of Felix's, everyone's hiding spot was on full display.

So far, only 30 players or so were left behind from the previous 50. They were all licking their wounds in utter silence, not have any thoughts of carrying on the battles.

After a short while...

"The 2nd transmission has ended!" Meliodas proclaimed out loud the moment the golden beam withdrew back to the Crown.

The spectators held their breaths in anticipation, ready to watch round two of the battles.

Unfortunately, no one made a move, as the silence in the forest remained unbroken.

"It seems like the alliances have decided on a truce!" Meliodas sighed in dejection, as he knew that probably no one was going to aim for the Crown until the last 30 minutes in the game.

"Man this is so boring."

"Meliodas switch the camera to other zones!"

"Switch!"..."Switch!"..."Switch!"

After hearing the spectators chanting so, Meliodas took a step further and split the screen into two halves, displaying in one the Crown and in the other, the teleportation circle of the volcanic zone.

After seeing that 50 players or so were split into multiple groups, camping the teleportation circle without fighting each other, Meliodas shook his head in disappointment.

In the end, Meliodas made the screen display only the Crown after showing the spectators that nothing much was happening.

Seconds gone by, then minutes, the players in the volcanic zone were waiting for the teleportation circle to deliver them the Crown Holder.

The spectators were waiting with bored expressions for any fight to occur.

The players near the Crown were waiting patiently for the last 30 minutes in the game to arrive to make a move.

Everyone was waiting and restraining themselves...Except for one.

"It's showtime." Felix smirked faintly as he stood with his hands in his pockets at the very tip of the tree!

The raging wind kept blowing his clothes, yet it never managed to shake him even an inch.

Meliodas, who just gave Felix's small screen a side glance, had his entire attention stolen by Felix's confident smirk. His senses tingled that Felix was about to do something extraordinary.

And MC's senses were rarely wrong!

He swiftly pinned the camera on him while saying with anticipation, "Is Landlord going to make a move?"

The spectators all quietened down their chatter after seeing Felix on the screen, cracking his neck and knuckles.

Then, he took a deep breath through his mouth and....JUMPED!

Shellshocked and in utter disbelief, Meliodas and the spectators all had their eyes widened at the sight of him nosediving from three hundred meters or so with his fist extended in front of his head, bursting into any obstacle in his path towards the Crown!

Thin branches got broken! Giant leaves were torn apart! His fist got bloodied and clearly cracked, yet nothing managed to stop his descend!!

"We will move 10 minutes earlier than th..."

WHOOSH!

Rosanna, who was explaining her plan to Bloodriod next to her, suddenly stopped talking as the sound of the wind coming from above was too loud to miss.

"What the f*ck!" The instant she raised her head, she saw Felix bursting through a giant leaf and continuing his journey down below without sparing her a single glance.

Felix was wholly focused only on one target, and that was the floating Crown in the air!

150meters...100m...50m...

The closer he got to the Crown, the clearer his path got from the obstacles, as the previous battles between the players almost destroyed the entire area, leaving only the stems of the trees and some large branches still standing proud. 'Almost there!' Calm and collected, Felix opened his bloody fist with a bit of difficulty, and extended the other hand forward next to it, making him resemble a football player wanting to catch a ball.

20meters...10m...5m...1!

Whoosh Cluck!!

Some players, who were staring at the Crown before, blinked for a split second, and the sight that welcomed them after, made them doubt their eyes!

Felix catching the Golden Crown with his hands while still descending down to the ground without stopping!

Just as the spectators wanted to cheer at Felix's astonishing play of snatching the Crown, they were suddenly reminded that Felix didn't have a single ability to slow his fall or protect him from the collision with the ground!

Confused, they saw him do a front flip in the air making his legs face the ground first. They thought that he had a plan, but...THUUUD!

The booming sound of his body smashing into the ground, creating a massive shockwave, that hurled dust and dirt everywhere, left them at loss for words.

Everyone had their eyes glued at the cloud of brown dust, blocking their sight from seeing Felix's situation. But, from the loud sound of the collision, they knew that he was definitely either dead or crippled!

Seconds went by in utter silence until the cloud of dust drifted in the air, exposing a humongous hole resembling an empty meteor crater.

Empty?!

Where did he go? Before this question could take root in their minds, the players and spectators were suddenly reminded of the 5 seconds rule!!

As long as a player kept holding onto the Crown for 5 seconds he would get teleported randomly in 500 meters radius!!!

Felix was falling for two seconds after catching the Crown and three more after landing on the ground!

Everything was calculated beforehand!

"HOOLY SHIT!" Meliodas' feminine voice was nowhere to be seen as he screamed in excitement like a burly man.

The play was too godly, his true gender took over the wheel!!

WHOOAAAH!!!

Meliodas excitement was shared by the entire stadium, as everyone was screaming at the top of their voices, using whatever gadget in their hands.

They didn't think for even a second that Felix was daring, ballsy, and f*cking nuts to actually jump from three hundred meters without having a single safety on him!

They always knew that his plans were always on the risky side, but this..this was the next stage of craziness!

"Is it just me or did we really just lose the Crown under our noses?" Biohunter murmured with a hint of disbelief next to his allies, still not able to comprehend what had he just witnessed.

Alas, his allies behind him were just as shocked and aghast as he was.

They believed that no one was going to touch the Crown this early, and even if a player was stupid enough to attempt so, it was impossible to do it without being noticed by them.

After all, some of them had abilities related to vision, so invisibility and such were totally useless in this situation.

All of this without mentioning the fact that the Crown was floating hundreds of meters above the ground without anything near it since the branch that it was on before was completely snapped from the battles!

This meant anyone, who was retarded enough to make a move, would be spotted from miles away!

This increased the difficulty to snatch the Crown by tenfolds!!!

All of those obstacles made the players certain that a final battle was needed to decide who would hold the Crown.

Yet, all of those thoughts were thoroughly uprooted from their minds by Felix's unorthodox plan!

They were waiting but he was planning!

Chapter 214 - Reaching The Volcano Zone!

Meanwhile, 500 meters away from the previous position of the Crown, Felix was lying on the ground with his limbs all pointing in different directions, resembling a broken doll. Especially his legs, which were clearly beyond shattered.

If it wasn't for his chest rising and falling ever so slightly, Meliodas and the spectators, who were watching this on the large screen, would have assumed that he messed up his calculation.

It was clear that the fall might not have taken his life but it left him in truly unenviable shape. Though, Felix already planned for such an end result when he jumped from the tree.

'Revitalization!' With his eyes closed shut, Felix activated his 4th passive after engulfing himself with a mustard yellow aura.

Argh!!

He groaned in pain after his shattered bones were starting to get affixed back to their original shape.

Since he didn't use the corruption inducement, the revitalization process took a full minute instead of ten seconds. The potency of two inducements wasn't the same as twenty stacked at once.

"Never doing that shit again!" Felix mumbled to himself while trying to stand up on his feet. His legs kept trembling as he was feeling numbness all over his legs.

Felix knew that he could have avoided all of this by simply waiting until the final battle starts 1 hour later and snatch the Crown during the chaos.

However, he never was focusing on the win only, but on getting as many points as possible while doing so!

In other words, securing the Crown as early as possible was a must in order to start gaining 1000 GP each 15 minutes that passed!

After the pain withdrew completely, Felix stretched his limbs, cracking his joints.

"Oh?" As he cracked his neck, he noticed that the Golden Crown was slightly hovering above his head.

He didn't notice it before, as its bright light was reduced to the bare minimum as well as its size, making it fit perfectly in his head.

"Not bad." Satisfied, he smiled while touching the smooth gems decorating it. Find authorized novels in , faster updates, better experience, Please click #!_50722624594042802 for visiting.

Unfortunately, he didn't get even a second to enjoy the Crown before it got ruined by the sight of two humanoid red auras approaching him from the front.

They were extremely close to him as he noticed them without pushing his infrared vision to the limit.

Felix looked behind them and saw that the path they came from was leading to the humongous volcano.

'It seems like they are part of the other half.' He thought to himself while climbing up a tree.

He didn't go to the top as he hid merely on the first branch. He was planning on ambushing them since they weren't part of the rain forest players.

If they were, Felix would have escaped in a heartbeat. After all, who knows if they were sent as scouts by an alliance to locate him?

If that was true, they would easily send Felix's coordination by using the Queen.

A couple of seconds later...

Thud! Thud!

Felix took out his fingers from those two players' foreheads and wiped them clean from the blood.

The ambush went smoothly without a single hiccup, not taking Felix even two seconds before ending those two poor players' lives.

After dealing with the obstacles, Felix pushed his infrared vision to the limit while turning his head all around.

Immediately, he spotted four players rushing in his direction while having the green beacon behind their backs.

The rain forest's players were here!

Not planning to meet up with them, Felix turned off his vision and started sprinting in direction of the volcano at his top speed.

His destination?

Clearly, the tunnel leading to the labyrinth, as he understood that if he wanted to survive the entire duration, he could only pull it off inside the volcano.

The island was merely medium-sized, and no matter where Felix run in the forest, he would eventually get found out by the majority, and worse of all get surrounded from all sides!

Even the volcanic zone players would take part in!

The only reason, they didn't bother to aim for the Crown this early was due to seeing its location being static two times in a row while being in close proximity to the green teleportation circle.

However, when the next transmission goes off and they notice that Felix was on the move, those players wouldn't hesitate to ditch camping the teleportation circle!

At that point, Felix would be dealing with everyone on the island chasing him in such an open area. But, if he entered the labyrinth? The story would be narrated in a completely different manner.

In the labyrinth, Felix knew that he would be the hunter and they would be his prey!

He licked his lips in anticipation at the thought of it, sending chills down the spine of the spectators who saw it.

"It's clear that Landlord is putting his faith of survival on the volcano's tunnel!" Melidoas looked at the time and wondered, "But will he be able to reach them before his location starts getting transmitted?"

Felix's fans were also worried about so, as they could see that Felix might have gotten rid of most players in the forest area after getting teleported randomly, but the players in the volcanic zone were gathered near the red teleportation circle that was on Felix's path to enter the tunnel.

If the transmission went off before entering the tunnel, he would be literally delivering the Crown right in their hands, saving them the trouble.

...

12 minutes later...

Felix was hiding on top of one of the last trees, which were separating the two zones from each other.

After those trees, there was only a flat black ground stretching for a kilometer or so, leading to the humongous black volcano.

Felix narrowed his eyes in concentration at the humongous tunnel, which had a giant red circle engraved right next to it.

He looked at it for a second before switching his vision to the parties of players, which were spread around the circle.

Some of them were sitting on large black boulders near it while others were standing further back, keeping their distance. The alliances had zero trust in each other to remain that close.

They might be certain that no one was going to make a move, as it was simply stupid to battle without a purpose. But, they still preferred keeping their distance.

This led to the tunnel having only a couple of players beside it.

No one bothered with the tunnel as the Crown in their eyes was still in the forest, especially when the next transmission was about to start in two minutes.

Due to the constraint on time, Felix spent only one minute to come up with a somewhat unreliable plan, which could help him bypass the players and rush into the tunnel before his location gets transmitted.

"Hopefully this works." He sighed and snapped his finger, engulfing himself in a milky white aura. Then, he jumped down into the ground and sprinted in direction of the tunnel.

He was still far from the red circle and the players. Thus, everyone, who was looking in front of them, managed to notice only a tiny white sphere advancing towards them.

"What is that?" They raised their eyebrows in surprise as they pointed their fingers at it.

"Is that an aura ability?"

"I believe so as well."

Before long, everyone was staring at the approaching white sphere, guessing what it was, and unsurprisingly a lot of them managed to land on the right answer.

"What the hell is Landlord up to?!" Meliodas facepalmed as he said, "Did he forget that other players have an infrared vision just like him?" He shook his head with a hint of disappointment in his eyes, "They will notice the Crown on top of his head and inform the rest, by then he won't escape even if he has eight legs."

The spectators couldn't help but agree with him on this one.

They didn't know if Felix was simply getting c.o.c.ky and believing that his existence by itself would deter all of those players, or he had another plan in mind.

Whatever it is, they were about to find out, as Felix was getting closer and closer to the tunnel, which had a six players alliance standing on a giant black rock right next to its entrance.

"I think that's Landlord!"

"The hell? Why is he wasting his energy like that?"

By now, the players already figured that Felix was the one approaching them, as his white aura was iconic to him. Yet, from what they saw about Felix in his previous games, he didn't have the habit of wasting energy for fun.

They weren't retarded to not see that Felix was hiding something. And in this game, what was there to hide beside the Crown?

"Visionary, please check if he has the Crown or not!" A stunning blue-haired man with an icy cold stare ordered one of his five allies, who were standing right behind him on top of that giant rock.

Nonchalant, Visionary walked in front while removing his glasses, exposing reptile-like eyes. Though, he didn't turn on his ability yet, as Felix was still 40 meters away from him.

He had only an **Intermediate Infrared Vision** that allows him to see infrared objects within 20 meters. Such an abyssal radius was even from an epic tier 2 bloodline! A huge contrast to Felix's infrared vision.

After Felix saw that he was about to reach 20 meters from Visionary, he snapped his finger, creating a pitch-black bomb on top of his head.

Immediately after, he made it explode, engulfing him and the Crown!

Meliodas and the spectators all tilted their heads in confusion over his play. They had no idea what he was aiming to achieve, as they were still able to see him with the Crown.

However, after seeing the clear confusion on Visionary's face, they were reminded of something...The large screen was displaying everything with an omnipotent vision!!

Meliodas turned it off in split second, and changed it to infrared vision, making the large screen display exactly what was appearing in Visionary's eyes.

Sssssss!!

The crowd immediately drew a deep breath in shock and awe at the sight before them.

THE CROWN WAS GONE!

Chapter 215 - Booby-Trapping The Tunnel!

"So does he have the Crown or not?" Mr. Frosty asked Visionary.

"He doesn't have it." Visionary scratched his head in confusion as he said, "I'm only seeing a normal humanoid red aur.."

"WATCH OUT!"

Poof Poof!

Two pitch-black bombs exploded on top of the large rock, one next to Visionary and the other at the party behind him.

The strike was so sudden, by the time Visionary heard the warning, he was already engulfed inside the bomb!

He didn't see it coming as he was still using his infrared vision.

"Visionary are you alright?!" Mr. Frosty shouted while inside a dome made of ice. His allies were all hiding inside of it as well.

"He is not alright." Felix's frigid voice came out of the white aura as he dashed through the tunnel, "None of you will be if you keep pestering me."

Frightened, the players near the red circle either gulped a mouthful or took a step back at the sight of Visionary turning into drifting black particles...

Those with thoughts of chasing Felix in the tunnel completely uprooted them and were on the verge of slapping themselves for even thinking of willingly approaching that monster.

In their eyes, it was only worth antagonizing Felix if he had the Crown. However, from Visionary's answer, it seemed to them that he wasn't carrying it.

Their gut feeling was screaming at them that something was fishy about Felix. But still, no one dared to put their lives at stake just to fulfill their curiosity.

Just like that, Felix swaggered in the guarded tunnel while wearing the Crown under the eyes of 48 players!

The spectators were speechless not knowing to react to this situation. They really didn't anticipate his plan to work.

Honestly, some of them still had no idea why the Crown was hidden from Visionary's infrared vision.

Thankfully, Meliodas figured it out swiftly and explained it to them, "The Crown does not release heat from within like living being's bodies but simply glow brightly, emitting rays of light." Meliodas praised Felix with a pleased smile, "Landlord exploded two pitch-black bombs on the Crown, which absorbed the rays of light, making it completely disappear in the eyes of those with infrared vision!"

Meliodas might have explained it nicely, but the VIP spectators knew that Felix's plan only worked due to his oppressive strength!

If it was another player trying to pull that shit off in front of 48 players or so, Mr. Frosty wouldn't ask Visionary to spot the Crown but instead jump with his allies and gang up on the player.

However, Felix was too terrifying and Mr. Frosty wasn't a retard to use his alliance's wellbeing to scout for the other alliances and partnersh.i.p.s.

He was certain that Felix was going to at least take three or four with him before going down.

The sight of what remained of Visionary drifting in the air just further highlighted that his decision was the best to make.

...

Inside a well-spaced tunnel that was leading to the underground, Felix was sprinting with buckets of sweat dripping down his chin.

He already removed the white aura, as he couldn't afford to have it active for even an extra second.

His energy tank wasn't even 30% full after using the white aura as camouflage for so long and the corruption inducement many times.

'Asna, prepare to start pumping the purified energy.' Felix informed Asna while wiping his sweaty forehead with his sleeves.

He wasn't sweating due to the nervousness of deceiving an army of players, but the hellish heat that was smacking him in the face the further he went down the tunnel.

After all, he was literally inside an active volcano.

'Alright.' She suddenly reminded him, 'But do notice that you only have about 200% of purified energy instead of 500% like before.'

When Asna gave Felix the purified energy in the shuffle maze, she pumped purified energy that she got from 5k of high-grade poison stones.

However, during the last five days, Felix brought her only 2k high-grade mixed stones. He only obtained that amount due to the fact Asna didn't require a specific element to purify energy.

'That should be enough.' Felix smiled in a confident manner. However, after glancing at the time in his bracelet, he couldn't help but frown his eyebrows.

Only 20 seconds remained till the next location transmission, and he was still quite far from the tunnel labyrinth that was shown in the game hall.

He knew that the distance between him and the players was still crossable by some players with movement abilities.

'Let's put some traps.'

Instead of fretting over it, Felix started creating ruby red bombs and threw them to the ceiling while running.

However, before the bombs could collide with the surface, Felix would make them stop forcefully and let them hover mid-air, totally hidden as the tunnel was dimly lighted.

After hiding 20 bombs on the path, Felix started to huff in exhaustion as his energy was getting drained each second to control those bombs and make them stay in their positions without exploding.

'Asna!'

Understanding what he wanted, Asna started pumping her purified energy until Felix's tank was only 40% full. Since the energy was purified, Felix was actually back to having 100%!

'One, three, six...eighty.' Focused, Felix kept counting the meters while running from the booby-trapped zone.

Peep peep!

The moment he heard his bracelet's alarm of the incoming transmission, he went to hide behind a medium-sized rock that was next to the right wall.

'150 meters.'

Immediately, He pushed his infrared vision to show him only the distance that he calculated. After preparing everything, Felix took a deep breath through his nose with his eyes closed shut.

He could hear his heartbeat increasing each second that passed, showing that he might seem confident but deep down he was still agitated and nervous by having everyone in the game chasing him down for the remaining duration of the game.

'Easy Felix, just play it easy...!' He kept trying to keep his emotions in check, 'In the underground, you are the hunter and they are the prey. you are the hunter...!'

In desolate silence, Felix kept repeating this phrase over and over again until his eyes snapped open at the last second of the alarm, shimmering with a dangerous vibe, that it would make anyone tremble by a single glance.

Peep!

A sudden golden beam emerged on top of Felix's head and broke through the ceiling, heading into the sky.

The players outside of the tunnel all turned their heads with dumbfounded expressions, gazing at the golden beam that was merely a couple of hundreds of meters away from them.

They instantly recognized that Felix had duped them. However, before they could even feel ashamed and humiliated by it, they saw that the beam of light was static in one place!

That meant only one thing!

"LANDLORD IS NOT RUNNING! KILL HIM!" MR. Frosty shouted as he jumped from the large rock, followed by his allies.

They were the closest to the tunnel, thus they already had a headstart over the rest.

"F*ck! Chase them down! Don't let anyone touch the Crown!"

"Buff my speed!"

Complete chaos has erupted near the red circle as the alliances' leaders voiced their orders to rush into the tunnel, ignoring everything else. Find authorized novels in , faster updates, better experience, Please click #!_50786479231782508 for visiting.

The players with movement abilities were the first to enter the tunnel after Mr. Frosty's alliance, followed by the rest.

Everyone was focusing only on the Crown, not bothering to address the strange reason why Felix decided to go through all of that effort just to stop moving.

Unfortunately, they should have given it a second thought. As the moment Felix saw with his infrared vision that most of the players were running down the booby-trapped path, he snapped his finger with a wide grin, making all the ruby red bombs drop down from the ceiling and explode amidst the players!

Poof, Poof, Poof!...

Startled by red misty clouds, raising all over the tunnel, most players activated their defensive abilities reflexively while holding their breaths.

Sadly, there were still some players, who were slower to react, as they inhaled the inducement thoroughly.

The spectators, who weren't familiar with Felix's inducements believed that his trap had failed since most of the players got out of the booby-trap path without losing a single hair strand.

However, the moment they saw that the affected players had actually activated their offensive abilities and started barraging everyone on sight akin to madmen, those thoughts were removed from their minds.

Boom! Phew! Bam!...

"Don't fight them back, They are hallucinating!" Mr. Frosty screamed at his allies, who were trading abilities with the poisoned players.

Alas, his voice didn't reach far as the tunnel was filled with explosion noises, players' war screams, and pitiful wails.

BOOM! Argh!

A thick purple lightning bolt struck down on a beautiful girl, making her groan for only a split second before dropping into the ground, completely scorched!

Boom!

The one who killed her didn't even manage to gloat for a second, before getting rained down by a salvo of elemental abilities, making him explode into a cloud of bloodish red mist!

More and more of such sights were happening inside the path every second, painting a horrifying scene. Due to them being in a dimly-lighted tunnel, it was extremely easy to get hit out of nowhere by stray abilities.

The situation got so bad, some players turned around and escaped through the tunnel's entrance, too terrified to dash through the chaotic battles to reach the other side.

The entire tunnel had fallen into Havok, which was created by one inducement...Hulicination!

The poisoned players' greatest fears were manifest in front of them, which was obviously either getting betrayed by their allies or get struck in the back by some random player.

Felix knew that he only needed one player or two to get poisoned in order for the chaos to break out. Inside such a closed-off space, an ability that was aimed at one person would end up hitting three or four.

Adding to the dim lights and the red mist all over, it was extremely difficult for the players to notice, who was affected by the poison or not. Thus, they simply protected themselves by using whatever means to kill those aiming at them.

This carried on even when the five seconds of the inducement had already ended and the original poisoned players were dead!

All of this was manifested by the simple use of one inducement and the environment corresponding to it.

"That went even better than expected." Felix nodded his head in satisfaction as he kept watching the humanoid red auras disappear one by one akin to candles getting extinguished by a breeze of wind.

"Alright, time to bounce." Not planning on staying until everyone regain their wits back, Felix turned around and continued his sprint down the tunnel.

He looked at his game points account and realized that he gained 1120 GP at once from the chaos!

"Not bad." He said, smiling.

He didn't know exactly how many players were eliminated in the chaos, as the game points rewarded for eliminations get split evenly between the players, who had a hand in the death of that said player.

Felix didn't rely on his infrared vision to get the correct number of deaths, as he knew that some players might have escaped the booby-trapped path safely.

He might not know the number, but the spectators, who were still watching the chaos unfold in excitement and awe already counted that more than 19 players had been eliminated at once!

This number without counting the players, who escaped the tunnel!

Felix had literally used one ability, and one inducement, to downsize the number of players by almost 50%!

The spectators had never seen such great efficiency before, and they were dying in anticipation to watch how the rest of the chase was going to play out!

Chapter 216 - Fake Groaning!

"Landlord! You crafty bastard!" Infuriated and frustrated, Mr. Frosty cursed out loud while glaring at the golden beam of light that was moving swiftly away from them.

'You might have lowered our numbers, but you have offended everyone who remained!' He sneered as he focused back on what left of the players.

Some were hiding behind rocks while some still fighting with bloodied bodies and murderous gazes.

"ENOUGH FIGHTING DAMN IT! LANDLORD IS ESCAPING!"

Mr. Frosty furious proclamation resounded in the tunnel, forcing the players to halt throwing abilities and remember what was their target in the first place.

They all glanced above their heads and saw that the golden beam was truly moving away from them.

"He played you all like a fool with one inducement!" Mr. Frosty continued shouting while pointing his finger at the golden beam, "He set everything up in order to lower our numbers and build distrust between us."

The alliances' leaders froze at hearing the last part, as they discerned that now they had a bigger problem than chasing Felix!

How were they supposed to leave their backs in the open again after what had just happened?

Before, the players had a tiny bit of trust in each other as they had one common target, which was the Crown.

They believed that not a single player was retarded enough to start a fight when there was clearly no benefits in doing so.

But now?

From the way everyone was having their abilities active and staying away from each other, the alliances' leaders knew that no one was going to repeat the same mistake even when they knew that Felix's hallucination inducement was the cause of the chaos!

"Cyber Fly, Valkyrie, Miss Dusk." Mr. Frosty called the names of each alliance leader while staring into their eyes, "I suggest we merge our alliances and hunt down Landlord!" He clarified hastily to not waste time, "The moment we kill him, the alliance will automatically break."

Mr. Frosty didn't bother addressing the partnersh.i.p.s as he believed that the moment the other leaders agreed to his proposal, the rest would be forced to accept joining the alliance or leave the tunnel.

"I agree!" Valkyrie was the first to voice her alliance's decision. She was a wide-shouldered woman, wearing a knight armor while carrying two long swords on her back.

"I accept your proposal." A man with bug receptors on top of his head nodded his head slightly.

"Since even Cyber Fly already joined, what else for me to say?" An elegant lady with short curly hair said while chewing gum.

The players in the tunnel all started voicing their desire to join the alliance after seeing the big four dogs in the volcanic zone decided to combine their strengths.

"Sign this contract please and be quick about it." Mr. Frosty sent them a standard contract, entailing that they shouldn't harm each other and anyone who breached the contract would be required to pay 2000 GP.

He wasn't a retard to make the penalty more extreme as that would make players hesitate to sign the contract, and at this point, he just wanted to hasten the process so they could start the chase.

Felix was toggling further and further down the tunnel while they were standing here trying to make friends in order to build a thin line of trust.

After a short moment, the majority of the players signed the contract as some of them were too wounded to carry on fighting. They withdrew to the entrance of the tunnel, dwelling the number of players further down.

Mr. Forsty's expression couldn't help but get ugly after counting the current number of the mega alliance didn't even reach 20!

They started the chase with 48 players or so and now they were left with lower than half!

"If you found Landlord, don't engage but use the Queen and send us his position!" Mr. Frosty jumped from the rock and said lastly, "MOVE OUT! We will plan the rest on the way!"

"KILL!" Find authorized novels in , faster updates, better experience, Please click #!_50797176099488639 for visiting.

Boiling mad, the players let out a war cry as they chased after Mr. Frosty, who was running with the three alliance leaders.

This time every player was paying close attention to the ceiling and walls for any further traps.

They learned their lesson the hard way.

...

Three minutes later...

The golden beam disappeared, making Felix sigh in relief. The five minutes transmission truly felt like five years.

But now, Felix had 15 minutes of freedom to go wherever he wanted, and especially to start his plan.

Thrilled, Felix rubbed his hands together as he turned on his infrared vision limit to 100 meters and left it as it is. Then, he chose a random tunnel from the three ones in front of him and continued his sprint.

However, he didn't run for even two minutes before seeing that the tunnel was split into two paths again.

Without slowing down he dashed through the right one, not worrying about finding a dead-end like he was in the maze.

The tunnels in the labyrinth were all connected one way or another to each other. Thus, no matter, which path he took, he would end up finding other paths.

Heck, he might take one and see that he actually ended up making a full circle and coming back to the same spot!

This might mean that the Labyrinth wasn't really that massive, but its complexity was Felix's best environment. And those players, who were stepping into it in separated groups, had no clue what was waiting for them.

'That should do it.' After spending three minutes entering and exiting tunnels randomly, Felix finally stopped running, making his fans wonder what he was up to.

He walked to a wall and started punching it with his fists as hard as he could, scaring the shit out of his fans.

BAM BAM BAM!...

The noise of his punches kept echoing in the nearest tunnels to his position, giving him away to any player in the area.

Meliodas kept switching the camera in those tunnels to let the spectators see if the noise had attracted anyone.

Fortunately for his fans, none of the players were near Felix at this point. They were still close to the entrance of Labyrinth.

Felix forgot to calculate the aftermath of the chaos, which delayed the players two extra minutes from making a move.

"Tsk, I toggled too deep." Felix clicked his tongue while massaging his tingling knuckles.

Speechless, the spectators saw him turn around and return where he came from!

Didn't he enter the Labyrinth to facilitate his escape? They thought to themselves.

Sadly, the sight of Felix narrowing the distance between him and the players showed them that he never was planning on escaping.

After a while...

Felix suddenly stopped his journey back as he noticed five humanoid auras on the other side of the tunnel.

The walls weren't really that thick, as the Labyrinth's tunnels were resembling holes left by humongous worms.

'Five at once? Even better!' Felix grinned as he turned around and started sprinting diagonally with the five players.

A couple of minutes later, Felix saw that there was a tunnel, leading to the other side of the wall. His eyes brightened up in delight, but he didn't enter it.

Instead, he sprinted towards rock and jumped on it, using it as leverage to build momentum. He bent his knees and hurled himself to the ceiling on top of the tunnel's mouth!

Since the surfaces were uneven and rugged, Felix had it a bit easier to keep hanging with his fingers and legs attached to the ceiling akin to a spider.

Unfortunately, all of his efforts went to waste as he noticed that the players were actually ignoring this tunnel and heading to another.

'F*ck my life.' Vexed, he could only improvise and scream with a terrified voice, "Help! Landlord is chasing me!"

"Hmm?" Startled, the five players froze their footsteps, as their ears picked up Felix's echoing voice quite nicely.

Unsurprisingly, Valkyrie was leading this team as the twenty remaining players, were split up into four teams, each being led by one of the four big dogs.

They might want to find Felix, but it didn't mean they would split up into twos or threes and send themselves to death.

"Stay behind me." With a stoic expression, Valkyrie unsheathed her long swords as she called softly, "Shield of Light."

A moment later, bright light started to gather before her until a wide shield was manifested.

The shield kept emitting a blinding light only in front of it, as for Valkyrie and the rest? They were able to see through it like it wasn't even there!

The players behind Valkyrie started to either morph or create their own offensive or defensive elemental abilities. So far, not a single one of them was a pure support player.

This was honestly understandable, as not a lot of support bloodliners chose to play individual games. It was too risky for them.

ARGH!! Argh!...

Abrupt pained groans began echoing through the tunnel's mouth, making Valkyrie and the rest to frown their eyebrows in worry.

They knew that whoever called for help earlier must have been caught by Felix!

"Chronominia send our position to Mr. Frosty and the rest." Valkyrie entered a battle position as she walked step by step towards the tunnel, "Tell them that we found Landlord!"

Unlike the tense atmosphere, Valkyrie's team was experiencing, the spectators were laughing their asses off at the sight of Felix fake groaning while hanging upside down on the ceiling without a single ounce of shame.

This just showed them how far Felix was willing to go for game points!

Chapter 217 - Bona Fide Massacre

After Felix noticed that they were approaching the tunnel, he closed his mouth shut and tightened his grip on the rugged rocks, worried that they might give in and drop him at the worse possible timing.

Pitter Patter...

Meanwhile, Valkyrie's team footsteps kept resounding in the silent tunnel as they walked while having their eyes surveying every single area.

The tunnel wasn't really long as it was merely connecting the two paths together. Thus, it didn't take even a couple of minutes before they reached the other entrance, where Felix was hanging above it.

Only 15 meters were separating them.

'Chronomania please scout the entrance for us.' Solemn, Valkyrie sent her request by the Queen.

She knew that in this deafening silence a soft whisper would echo far and wide.

Chronomania nodded his head and stepped in front of them. He was resembling a two-meter white tiger with long fangs protruding down his jaw.

His senses were sharpened after he morphed, thus each step he took forward, made his gut feeling scream at him to back off.

By the time he reached the mouth of the tunnel, his fur was standing upright without his control.

'Lady Valkyrie, I can't walk any further.' He sent a message with a grave expression.

Without waiting to receive her response, he took a step back, planning to retreat. He might agree to be a scout due to his heightened senses, but he would never put himself in danger for strangers.

Tsshshs...

'Hmm?' Cronomania's furry ears suddenly picked up a slight movement coming from above him.

Alerted, He raised his head, wanting to inspect the origin of the sound.

'What the f*ck?!'

The moment his eyes landed on the ceiling, he saw Felix grinning at him devilishly while dropping mid-air with his foot aiming at his face!

He swiftly put furry thick arms in a guard position while holding his breath.

Thud!

Felix's foot landed on Chronomania's arms, making him step back three times before he stabilized himself.

Whoosh!

Felix used Chronomania's thick arms to do a backflip, landing inside the tunnel where Valkyrie's team was at.

The moment his feet touched the ground, he snapped his finger, engulfing himself in corruption inducement!

Argh!

Felix didn't need to turn his head as Chronomania's pained groan was enough to let him know that he was dealt with properly.

"Let's dance." Playful, Felix licked his lips while dashing rapidly towards the terrified Valkyrie's team, who reflexively used whatever they had while escaping backward, hoping to put as much distance as possible.

They knew that one single touch by the corruption inducement and their fate would be sealed!

Boom thud!...

Unfortunately for them, Felix wasn't hindered in the slightest by their last attempts at saving their lives, as he kept evading left and right the abilities, which he deemed a threat to him.

'WHY IS HE NOT BLINDED!' Valkyrie's proud and stoic expression was nowhere to be seen as she was screaming in her mind while hurling bombs, resembling flash grenades behind her back.

It was clear that she was a light Elementalist, whose abilities were oriented for utility.

Even the shield of light's purpose seemed to be for blinding her enemies instead of blocking abilities.

Sadly for her, Felix's infrared vision allowed him to adjust the degrees of light he should see just like he could adjust the distance. Thus, her abilities were thoroughly countered!

Poof Poof!

Annoyed by their escape, Felix turned off his aura and threw two corruption bombs instead, making them explode exactly amidst their disarrayed escaping formation.

"NOOO..!"..."F*ck You Landlo..!"..."I don't want to d...!"

The three players were all touched one way or another by the black mist, making them each shriek what came up at the top of their minds before everything darkened for them, just like their bodies.

'Shit! Shit! FROSTY WHERE ARE YOU!!!' Scared shitless by the ash of her allies touching her face, Valkyrie kept screaming in her mind for Mr. Frosty's help.

Though, the message that was sent by the Queen showed not a single hint of the distress that she was experiencing.

Poof!

Unfortunately for her, this time she wasn't lucky enough to have others block the mist from reaching her, as the bomb exploded right in her back with a speed almost breaking the sound barrier!

The distance separating her and Felix made his bombs almost undodgeable!

The only way she could have survived was by having abilities that either create solid objects, like Mr. Frosty's ice dome, or ones that could at least evaporate the bombs before reaching her.

Alas, her light element possessed a lot of qualities and effects, even having healing abilities. But those mentioned options weren't part of them.

Cluck! Cluck!

Her swords, which dropped into the ground, were the last things that proved her existence, minus the ash mound near them.

'What a stupid girl.' Asna insulted her without care, 'She is clearly a melee form fighter. So, why the hell she bothered to approach you?'

'She was counting on her abilities to blind me, then cleave my head with her swords. That's her famous combo, which I saw in the network.' Felix shook his head while leaving the fight area, 'Too bad, my infrared vision allows me to adjust the light intensity.' He suddenly chuckled, 'Well, even without it, my corruption inducement is enough to block her from approaching me.'

'Tsk, doesn't that mean she is still stupid?' Asna clicked her tongue in criticism.

'You are wrong.' Felix shook his head with a devilish grin, 'Everyone who willingly decided to chase me in this labyrinth is stupid!'

The spectators didn't know why he was grinning to himself, but that didn't stop them from cheering him after showing them such a one-sided fight.

It seemed to them that his corruption inducement was truly too strong even for a legendary bloodline. Especially when he was using it from the beginning of the game without any clear limit or weaknesses.

If only they knew that Felix's energy tank was getting emptied by 10% each time he threw a corruption bomb, they wouldn't have had those thoughts.

"And with that, Landlord's personal current elimination tally is 17!!" Meliodas exclaimed in enthusiasm, "That's 3400 GP without counting the huge fatalities he assisted in causing by his hallucination inducement!"

Markus, Felix's true number one fan, who was responsible for documenting everything about him, already had calculated the total game points, that Felix currently earned from the instant his foot landed on the island.

5550 GP!

1000 GP from holding the Crown for 15 minutes straight, 1150 GP from the chaos he caused with his hallucination inducement, and finally 3400 GP from his direct eliminations.

"Holy, he gathered this much under one hour?"

Leader Emma and the fans near Markus all exclaimed in shock after glimpsing at the amount in Markus's hologram.

The 2nd player in the game with the most points didn't even reach 600 GP! Such a wide disparity just further emphasized for those fans that Felix their idol was a league apart from everyone in this game!

"He is about to meet up with another team. Let me type in peace." Irked, Markus shoed them away without glancing in their direction.

Leader Emma and the rest all reseated themselves and started cheering Felix on his upcoming battle.

...

30 minutes later...

Felix was humming a soft tone while clutching the neck of Miss Dusk, who was gazing at him with a pleading look.

Crack!

Detached, Felix snapped her neck and threw her corpse next to her four teammates, who were lying on the ground with either their neck snapped or having bullet-hole in their foreheads.

At least those were complete corpse as some were just a black mound of ash.

After dealing with Miss Dusk's team, Felix stretched his arms behind his back for a second before glancing at his bracelet.

'Hmm, the players from the forest should have reached and entered the labyrinth by now.' He pondered as he kept looking at the time.

Only 35 minutes were left before the end of the game!

'Hopefully, everyone will be here.' Felix withdrew his hands back in his pockets and started striding with big steps aimlessly like he owned the place.

"Does he even have limits? Why does it seem like he has an endless stream of energy?!" Melidoas just like the rest of the spectators was about to lose his shit at the way Felix kept eliminating the players effortlessly like he wasn't fighting 1vs5 in each battle.

During the previous 30 minutes, Felix had taken care of two more teams, each having 5 players. One belonged to Cyber Fly and the other was Miss Dusk's one.

Adding this to Valkyrie's team, and totally tall would reach a whopping 15 players eliminated in merely 45 minutes!

A bona fide massacre in individual games!

The spectators weren't shocked anymore by Felix's overwhelming feats but terrified by his existence that was breaking the balance of the game.

The f*cked up part about all of this was the fact Felix was known in the network for not being even a 1st stage bloodliner!

He was bullying peak 1st stage bloodliners left and right, causing them to stop telling apart, who was a veteran player or a hardcore one, as he was demolishing every player the same as the last one!

At this point, Felix in their eyes didn't appear as the underdog or newbie, who was still in his placement games, but a high leveled player coming down to terrorize the poor silver players!

"The rain forest players are here!" Meliodas switched the camera from Felix to the entrance of the first tunnel, which was near the red circle.

As he said, Biohunter, Rosanna, Bloodriod, and the rest of the forest players, were approaching the tunnel while keeping a large distance between each other.

When Felix's first location transmission went off, the forest players realized that they were duped after seeing that he was in the volcano instead of toggling south as they assumed.

After all, it was only logical to escape in the other direction of the players, not go straight to them!

Sadly, by the time the transmission went off they were already too deep in the southern area behind the green beacon. This delayed their journey to the volcano by half an hour.

Though, it seemed that none of them were worried, as there was still enough time in the clock for them to regain the Crown.

"Is that Mr. Frosty?"

"Why is he outside of the volcano?"

The moment they reached the tunnel, they saw Mr. Frosty and his party sitting on the large rock with their heads lowered, gazing at their feet like they gave up on life.

"Mr. Frosty, what's up with you?" Bewildered, Biohunter asked what was on everyone's minds.

"Uhm?" Startled awake, Mr. Frosty looked beneath him and was shocked to see 30 players or so were spread in the area into multiple groups.

Color regained in his face at the sight.

He immediately started informing them about what happened here since the moment Felix's foot landed on the volcanic zone.

Rosanna and the rest kept listening to him retelling the events with chills coursing on their spine.

Getting rid of 28 players by traps?

Killing team after team being led personally by a hardcore player?

They didn't want to believe him nor dare to. However, they knew that Mr. Frosty had no reason to lie to them as it brought him zero benefits.

By the time Mr. Frosty finished retelling everything, the players' backs were drenched with cold sweat and began to have thoughts of withdrawing from the chase!

In their eyes, the tunnel's mouth appeared the same as the gate to hell!

Chapter 218 - The Rain Forest's Players Are Making a Move!

"Why are you alive?" Biohunter had to ask, as from everything he heard, it seemed like Mr. Frosty's team was the only survivor in the entire volcano zone, besides the wounded players from the chaos, who went into hiding.

"We escaped the labyrinth before Landlord found us." He said with his hands trembling.

When Mr. Frosty and his team heard Valkyrie's cry for help, they forwarded it to the rest of the teams with the latest position sent by Chronomania.

However, instead of going to check by themselves, they let the other teams do it.

Till this moment Mr. Frosty was thanking his nine stars that he made that decision, as it didn't take even 10 minutes before he heard Cyber Fly's cry for help that lasted for merely two seconds before he stopped receiving anything from him.

When that happened, he decided to leave the Labyrinth, as he wasn't confident in his strength to pull off what Cyber Fly and Valkyrie couldn't.

Thus, instead of throwing his life away for no reason, he gave up on the chase, not having any more thoughts about snatching the Crown from Felix.

Thankfully, he marked the position of the labyrinth entrance. Hence, it wasn't hard for him to escape.

"So no one is currently inside the labyrinth besides Landlord?" Rosanna threw a question of her own.

Mr. Frosty nodded his head slightly.

"You heard him." Rosanna coiled a hair lock on her finger as she asked Biohunter, "How are we going to play this out?"

"Since Landlord can handle five bloodliners at once, we should ally and split our forces ten bloodliners in each team." He lifted a finger as he added, "And each team will have one mental type bloodliner."

Chatter immediately broke down between players, as each was discussing Biohunter's proposal with their own teammates.

They knew that the only way for them to have a shot at the Crown was by dropping their ego and zerg Felix with numbers.

"I will be the first to agree!" Rosanna threw her hair behind her back as she said to the rest of the players, "Stop wasting our time. The Crown's location transmission is about to start in a few minutes. We need to be in the labyrinth when that happens!"

After hearing so, the players stopped mumbling pointlessly and raised their hands in the air displaying their agreement to the alliance.

A few moments later, everyone signed the contract and separated into three teams, each having ten players and one mental type bloodliner. Mr. Frosty and his allies joined the 3rd team and took leadership of it.

"Those bastards truly have no pride!"

"This is making me pissed!"

"Damn it! They are even protecting mental type players."

Concerned, Felix's fans had their hands before their mouths as they booed out loud, making their displeasure resound in the stadium.

It was clear that they weren't confident in Felix's chances of defeating those teams, as they knew that his only weakness was mental type abilities.

Before, he was either ambushing or taking out the players in a couple of seconds by his corruption inducement, not letting the mental type bloodliners to activate their abilities.

But now? Those players would be protected at all costs!

"Move out!" Biohunter shouted as he charged into the tunnel, followed by Rosanna and the rest.

"The 2nd round of the hunt has begun!" Melidoas switched the camera to Felix as he yelled passionately, "Does Landlord have enough energy to repeat the same feat and recreate another massacre?" He smiled widely, "I for one can't wait to see!"

...

Meanwhile, inside the labyrinth, Felix was sitting on a flat-surfaced rock with arms resting on his knees.

'one minute more and another 1k GP in the bag.' He smiled faintly as he noticed that only a minute remained before 15 minutes mark to complete again. He glanced at his total game points and a wide grin couldn't help but affix on his lips.

7550 GP!

'Hehe, after I hunt down the forest players, I can make it past 10k!' He rubbed his hands together in eagerness at the thought of it.

Peep Peep!

After hearing his bracelet vibrating, Felix stood up while asking in his mind, 'Asna, how much purified energy you still have?'

'If I give you everything, you will have at most an extra 40%.' She replied while yawning.

'That's it?' His eyes widened in disbelief as he honestly thought that he still had enough to fill his tank to 100%.

'Heh, why are you surprised?' She snickered, 'You were asking after every fight to give you more and more energy.'

Stunned, Felix froze in his position as memories of his fights started to resurface in his mind, showing him how irresponsible his energy management was.

He realized that he was using his corruption inducement numerous times when he didn't even have to!

This made his energy kept plummeting rapidly. But since he had Asna's purified energy, he never bothered to think for a second that another cost-efficient inducement was a better option than corruption inducement.

'Sigh, I was really drunk on the feeling of turning others to dust effortlessly.' He smiled bitterly, acknowledging his mistake, 'I was getting corrupted by it unknowingly.'

He always scolded Olivia for not conserving energy properly, but here he was practicing exactly what he preached.

The worst part? The purified energy wasn't free! He literally was wasting needed coins just to hasten the battles by a few minutes!

The purified energy was supposed to be left behind as backup energy when he was left with nothing to use, not be counted as part of his energy tank.

That's what he was doing now, and what needed to be changed!

Just as he was about to slap his cheeks to wake himself up, the golden beam was projected into the sky from the Crown.

After Asna saw the beam, she transferred all of the remaining purified energy to Felix, fill his energy tank to 50%. He previously had 10%.

'Change of plans.' Felix stopped having any thoughts about hunting the rain forest players, as now his main priority was to survive until the game ends.

If he played it smart and didn't waste his entire energy on corruption inducement, he might have had enough to continue eliminating other players.

But now? He could only turn on his infrared vision and start toggling deep within the labyrinth, escaping at his fastest speed.

Sadly, no matter what tunnel he took, the golden beam was giving him off to the three mega teams.

"He isn't far from us!" Biohunter shouted while pointing his finger at the golden beam, which was appearing as clear as crystal to everyone, even though they were in the underground.

The SGA might want to make the games appear as real as possible, but it would never affect the fairness and integrity of the games to achieve so.

"Split up!" After seeing three tunnels before them, Mr. Frosty went for the right tunnel, while being followed by his team. Meanwhile, Biohunter's team and Rosanna's team each took a tunnel.

The spectators kept cheering with flushed cheeks at the sight of Felix weaving through the tunnels while being chased by 35 players at once!

The distance between them was getting nearer and nearer since Felix was taking tunnels randomly, and sometimes those tunnels had curvy paths, making Felix's effort gone to waste.

Meanwhile, Biohunter and the rest rarely ended up with this problem as the golden beam was making it easier for them to see which tunnel was going to bridge the gap closer.

Minutes passed by and the distance kept getting bridged closer and closer until Felix's ears started to pick up the loud echoing sound of footsteps behind him.

'Oi Felix, that doesn't sound like five players at all.' Asna said.

Startled, Felix stopped running and went to a wall, putting his eyes near the surface. He took a deep breath and pushed his infrared vision to the limit, making him get assaulted by a headache a second after.

However, instead of wincing in pain, his eyes widened in shock at what he saw.

An army of humanoid auras coming from all directions towards his position. Ten arriving from the south, another ten from the east, and finally fifteen coming from the west.

'Dear god!'

Scared shitless, Felix turned around and continued his escape in the opposite direction, not daring to entertain the thought of getting surrounded by them.

He never expected that the forest players were going to chase him in tens!

He always believed that they were going to make teams made of five players like the ones' he dealt with.

In his mind, It was only logical to believe that five players were enough to kill a single player.

Sadly, Felix didn't know that Mr. Frosty had ratted on him to the forest players!

"Landlord! Where are you at?"..."Running is pointless!"... "We can see you."..."Do you feel tired?"...

Taunts kept echoing in the tunnels, making Felix frown his eyebrows in annoyance.

Though he didn't respond or bothered to pay attention to them, he simply carried on running and running until the last second of the transmission ended.

The moment the golden light disappeared, Felix exhaled a long sigh of relief. Nevertheless, he didn't slow down his speed as the players were going to aim for his latest position.

Speak of the devil and he shall appear, as the moment Felix looked to his left, he noticed ten red auras running diagonally with him, probably seeking a tunnel that would help them reach the path that he was on.

Unworried, Felix merely smirked and entered a tunnel that was in the opposite direction, making their efforts absolutely pointless.

After running for a while, he saw again ten humanoid auras behind a wall, running in totally a different route than his.

A few seconds later, they disappeared from his vision, entailing that they were a hundred meters away from Felix.

This kept going on and on, making the spectators not know whether to laugh or cry. Find authorized novels in , faster updates, better experience, Please click #'s-players-are-making-a-move!_50833523887630274 for visiting.

The scene resembled a hide and seek game but the hider had a cheat that allowed him to spot the seekers before getting too close to him.

It was a totally unfair game!

The livid expressions of the players throughout all of this were enough to show that they weren't enjoying this in the slightest!

Chapter 219 - The Decisive 5 minutes!

14 minutes later...

"You useless pig! Why do you have tracking abilities, if you can't f*cking track shit!" Mr. Frosty could be seen admonishing a short man, who was wearing goggles.

The players near them didn't intervene as they were also tired and extremely annoyed by the tracker's continuous failures.

"It's not my fault that Landlord possessed that busted vision ability!" The short man glared at Mr. Frosty right in his eyes and yelled, "You know what? I had enough of taking crap from you and this meaningless chase!" He smashed his goggles at the ground, "I am f*cking done! You go find him by yourselves."

He wasn't bluffing in the slightest, as he truly turned around after and walked away from the team. The contract, which was binding him didn't have a term to stop players from giving up.

Unbothered by losing the only tracker in the team, Mr. Frosty displayed a holographic timer that was counting backward and said, "This is our last chance at securing the Crown. If we failed to locate Landlord in those five minutes of transmission, you can forget about finding him in the last ten minutes." He suddenly added with a tremble in his voice, "Don't forget that the volcano can erupt at any moment now."

The players' expression turned grave at hearing him mention this. They weren't stupid to forget about Meliodas's warning in the game hall, as it affected their lives.

However, none of them wanted to yield yet. Especially when the last transmission was going to start off soon.

That being said, everyone made a mental note to leave the volcano after five minutes, whether they took the Crown or not. They were about to enter the last 15 minutes of the game and the volcano could erupt at any moment.

Fortunately, there was a two minutes alarm before the eruption starts.

'Biohunter, Rosanna, do you have any plans to catch Landlord in the next 5 minutes?' Mr. Frosty sent a mind massage.

'How about we split up to cover a bigger area? If we carried on using the same approach as before, I doubt we will be able to catch Landlord.' Rosanna suggested.

'I am in favor of that. Plus, I doubt that Landlord still has enough energy to instantly eliminate every team he meets.' Biohunter agreed.

'You guys split your teams if you want, I am not splitting mine no matter what.' Mr. Frosty's agitated expression as he sent this message was enough to entail that he was still terrified of Felix.

'Coward. Your team is the biggest. At least split five players and you remain with the other nine.' Rosanna insulted without shame.

After all, she was literally the only player in the game that had no reason to fear Felix as he couldn't touch her due to the contract's constraints.

However, it was applied both ways, which meant she was most the useless player in the entire chase!

The only reason, she was still here was to fish for the Crown if the players managed to kill Felix. The Contract which she signed had nothing to do with the Crown.

Sadly, neither Biohunter nor Mr. Frosty knew that the 2nd legendary bloodliner in the game, who they honestly were putting their hopes on was just here to ride their success.

'Only ten seconds left before transmission. Wrap it up.' Biohunter informed them.

'Fine, I will do what Rosanna suggested.' Mr. Frosty gave in eventually.

'Remember. Do not engage when you meet up with Landlord, just surround him and make sure to block his retreat paths.'

By the time Biohunter's message resounded in the minds of Rosanna and Mr. Frosty, the golden beam emerged yet again in the sky.

This time, everyone knew that the game was going to be decided in those five minutes. Find authorized novels in , faster updates, better experience, Please click #!_50840118541476020 for visiting.

...

'Here we go again.'

Felix, who was walking casually like he wasn't being hunted by 35 players, sighed in exhaustion while gazing at the golden beam on top of him.

'Five more minutes and I will be out of this hell.' He wiped his sweaty forehead as he increased his speed, starting to sprint.

He felt like the heat was increasing gradually, turning the labyrinth into a furnace.

He believed that this was a sign that the volcano was on the verge of erupting, which was honestly quite understandable, as the two-minute alarm was barely enough to give the players a headstart to escape.

But now, after feeling the raising heat, everyone with a brain would understand that it was time to bounce!

Sadly for Felix, everyone was too committed in the chase to yield that quickly.

'Uhm? Did they split up?' Felix raised his eyebrows in surprise as he noticed five red auras approaching him from the left.

As always, he chose the nearest tunnel that was in the opposite direction from them. However, after running for a couple of seconds, he saw another five auras intercepting him from the front.

Exasperated, he pressed his lips together as he turned around, going back from he came from.

Too bad, he didn't move even two steps before seeing five auras rushing at him from behind as well.

'Shit! I will be surrounded soon!'

Felix understood that his situation was getting direr and direr, as he didn't doubt that the players weren't going to engage him but just block his retreat paths until the rest arrived. Then, they will all collapse on him at the same time!

He knew that he would be doomed when that happens!

'I can only make the first move!'

Without hesitation, he turned around and dashed rapidly towards the approaching 5 players from the front.

Two acid bombs were lying peacefully in his jacket's pockets. He wasn't planning on using the corruption inducement anymore, as his energy won't support it, and even if it did, Felix planned on keeping it only in dire situations.

"He is coming towards us! Enter a defensive position!" Surprisingly, Biohunter was leading the team that Felix chose.

The players in his team immediately activated their defensive abilities as they encircled a girl, who had two fingers placed on her left temple.

Felix, who just entered their line of vision, couldn't help but lower his eyebrows in restlessness at the sight of the girl within their ranks.

However, after seeing that she had her eyes open, he sighed in relief while snapping his finger, engulfing himself with a white aura.

"Good luck using your abilities on me." Felix chuckled while dashing towards them, making Biohunter's expression to turn unsightly.

The dumbstruck look the girl had, was enough to tell him that her mental abilities were absolutely useless if the target wasn't in her vision.

After all, how could she affect Felix's mind when she couldn't even see him?

Phew, Phew!

Alas, Felix didn't give them enough time to think about other solutions as he hurled those two acid bombs towards the girl.

Whoosh!

An abrupt wall of greenish flames rose in front of the bombs, making them evaporate the instant they passed through it.

"Not bad!" Instead of feeling worried, Felix laughed in excitement as he continued to charge towards Biohunter, who was standing behind the wall of flames.

"How about this? Dragon Hail Technique." Biohunter shouted as he started slapping the wall of flames with his palms over and over again, sending a hail of greenish small snakes, slithering in the air as they targeted the white sphere.

'Dragon my ass. If he saw the real thing, he will piss himself in fright.' Asna scoffed.

Completely engrossed in evading those snakes, Felix didn't pay attention to what she said.

He simply kept smiling foolishly, enjoying the feeling of fighting again instead of just throwing one corruption bomb and end everything.

Whew! Whew! Whoosh!...

An abrupt barrage of elemental abilities graced Felix from the front, wiped that foolish grin from his face, as he was forced to roll to the side reflexively.

In the end, this was a 1vs5 battle!

BOOM!

'F*ck!'

Unfortunately, he rolled in direction of one of the neverending hail of snakes, making him eat a direct explosion!

The flames didn't encase his body after, but the explosion itself did enough harm to Felix, forcing him to use revitalization while rolling on the ground, not planning to remain a split second in the same place.

Good thing he did so, as the moment Biohunter heard the explosion, he immediately switched from throwing randomly to targeting that specific area, making tens of green snakes rain on the ground.

Without getting ordered, the players all aimed their abilities in that said area as well, completely missing Felix.

This gave him a breather to recover his wits and stand back up. He gritted his teeth as the burnt marks on his body were pricking him during the revitalization process.

Thankfully, his injuries were merely on his skin, making the sleepiness inducement enough to heal him back to his peak in a split second.

'I need to get near!' Felix pondered on a way to help him put his opponents within his aura, as his bombs were clearly useless against that wall made of greenish flames.

He didn't want to waste his energy by throwing bombs on top of their heads, as they could easily dodge them.

Boom Boom!...

Felix kept dodging those randomly targeted abilities while surveying his surrounding, looking for something to help him out.

'Oh? That will do!' His eyes brightened up as he noticed a few medium-sized boulders near the wall of the tunnel.

An idea struck him after remembering an attack he was exposed to in the shuffle maze.

Boom Boom!...

Uncaring about the explosions happening around him, Felix dashed towards the boulders and hid behind them for protection.

However, he soon did the unexpected as he spread his arms wide and hugged one of the boulders!

The boulder was black and rugged, giving Felix a good grasp with his steel-like fingers.

'RISE!' He shouted in his mind while trying to lift it up!

The spectators were dumbfounded as the boulder was three times the size of Felix, yet he was still trying to lift it!!

"He must be nuts!" Meliodas yelled in shock what was in everyone's mind.

However, before anyone could mock Felix on his foolish attempt, they saw that the boulder was getting lifted inch by inch in a slow manner until it was raised above his head!

Felix puffed out his reddened cheeks while revolving in his position continuously. After sensing that he built enough momentum, He yelled as he threw it towards Biohunter and the rest.

WHOOSH!...

Before Biohunter and the rest could even comprehend the abnormal sound of the wind, the Boulder rushed outside of the white aura, heading towards them fiercely akin to a wrecking ball.

"DOODGE!" Scared shitless, Biohunter screamed as he jumped to the side, not giving a crap about holding the defensive formation anymore.

The players didn't need his warning, as each activated either their escape abilities or simply hurled themselves as far as possible from the blast zone.

BOOOOOM!

Immediately after colliding with the ground, the boulder shattered into pieces of all sizes and shapes, propelling them in every direction akin to bullets!

Argh! F*ck! Ouch!!..

Biohunter and the players, who simply did a basic dodge, weren't spared from getting showered by those rocks!

Whoosh...

By the time the dust settled, Meliodas and the spectators were awestruck by the sight of Biohunter and his allies, groaning on the ground while holding their bruised bodies. Thankfully, they were lying in a curling position before, managing to protect their vitals.

Only one player managed to escape safely as he dug a hole on the ground, which was barely enough to hide a single person.

Poof Poof...Poof!

Not fooling around, Felix threw a paralyze bomb on each player, taking advantage of the fact that they couldn't hold their breaths even if they wanted to. The painful bruises made it almost impossible to do so.

As he expected, Biohunter and the rest breathed in the inducement obediently and froze in their positions with twisted expressions.

Yet, nothing could hide the clear horror of having their eyes wide open, staring at a leg approaching their faces in kicking motion.

'Wait I want to buy my life.'

Bam!

'Please Landlord don..'

Bam!

'You will follow us soon. Mark my words, Landlor..'

Bam! Bam!

Utterly deaf to the Queen's voice, which was sending him their last words, Felix kicked their heads to oblivion one by one, making them explode immediately on contact!

He had no time to entertain their requests or wishes as the rest of the players never stopped sprinting towards him.

After dealing with them, he glanced at the hole in the ground and threw one acid bomb in it before bolting away, not planning to stay and see its result.

"Landlord once again demonstrates to everyone that his wits are his greatest weapon!" Meliodas commented passionately, "To actually throw a boulder to break through their defensive formation! Just marvelous!"

While the spectators were cheering, some of Felix's fans were at loss for words since the moment Felix threw the boulder.

Did he really just imitate *Boulder Explosion* By Pure Muscle? This question was repeating over and over in their minds, making them enter a dazed state.

This was the first time they saw someone imitate other bloodliner's abilities forcefully. Yet, when it was coming from Felix, they suddenly felt like it was to be expected!

"LANDLORD!..."LANDLORD!"..."LANDLORD!"...

They all broke from their daze as they started chanting and rooting for Felix after seeing that he was having difficulty breaking out of the teams' encirclement.

The battle with Biohunter's team lasted for 30 seconds. Yet that was more than enough for the team behind Felix to catch up and the others to reach their positions!

As Felix expected, they didn't approach him but kept waiting for everyone to make it before they attack all at once.

"What can Landlord do to escape from this wide encircleme.."

RUMMBLE!!

Before Meliodas could finish his sentence, a booming noise resounded on the screen, shocking everyone alike.

Meliodas instantly pointed the camera from Felix to the outside of the Volcano. The moment the spectators saw what was going on, they couldn't help but exclaim in shock and excitement!

"THE VOLCANO IS ERUPTING!"

Chapter 220 - The Volcano is Erupting!

RUMBLE!...

The Volcano, which was sitting peacefully throughout the entire game, was trembling none stop, making rocks and boulders all around it to start rolling downhill while colliding against each other.

Yet! This was nothing compared to what was happening inside of it!

Felix, who was escaping in the opposite direction of the labyrinth entrance immediately did a 180 degrees turn and bolted with cold sweat covering his back.

The players didn't give a shit about him or the Crown anymore after seeing the tunnels trembling like they were struck by a major degree earthquake!

Crack!

The ground before Felix suddenly broke into two parts, forcing him to reflexively jump the newly emerged chasm with a mortified expression.

'Holy shit!' After taking a glimpse beneath him while mid-air, his heart almost leaped from his throat at the boiling lava rising slowly upward.

Thud!

The moment he landed on the other side, Felix rolled forward once and used his hands to propel him back up to not affect his acceleration.

He knew that he couldn't afford to slow down as Meliodas told them that the alarm would last merely two minutes before the big eruption.

Sadly, this earthquake was the alarm!!

He, just like everyone else, got totally blindsided by the volcano's early eruption!

He always believed that it would erupt at the last 5 minutes or even 10 minutes. Yet it had to erupt precisely two minutes after the 15 minutes countdown began!

No one saw it coming!

Meanwhile, hundreds of meters in front of Felix, Mr. Frosty and his party were running for their dear life as well.

No one was bothering with the golden beam of light that was approaching them from the rear...Except for Mr. Frosty!

'If I am not winning this game, then no one is going to!' His expression twisted with spite as he glared at the golden beam.

'Listen up! use all of your destructive abilities at the ceiling after we enter the next tunnel!' Mr. Frosty sent this bone-chilling order to his party, making them all glance at him in shock.

Unbothered by their reaction, he sent another message, 'Are you resigned to losing this game in such a humiliating fashion?! If Landlord won, this game is going to be viral since he broke the record of holding the Crown by miles from the previous holder.'

He evaded a falling rock as he said lastly, 'I don't know about you guys, but I am not going to let myself be a stepping stone for Landlord's fame!'

After hearing the term stepping stone, no one hesitated anymore. Their expressions hardened while looking at the entrance of the tunnel that was getting nearer and nearer.

Mr. Frosty smirked faintly at their silent approval and created three ice lances above his head. The players activated their abilities as well and kept them prepared, waiting until they pass through the tunnel first.

"FIRE!"?The instant they entered it, Mr. Frosty yelled as hurled the three ice lances at the ceiling right above the entrance.

BOOM! BOOM!...

The players fired simultaneously with him, striking the same spot with tens of destructive abilities. Find authorized novels in , faster updates, better experience, Please click #!\_50862239216882263 for visiting.

FA-THUD!

The ceiling which was already collapsing slowly due to the earthquake, couldn't handle their combined abilities and collapsed on the entrance, sealing it shut!

"GOOD JOB!" Excited and overjoyed, Mr. Frosty did a fist pump while looking at the closed entrance.

While he was celebrating ruining Felix's chance to safety, Leader Emma almost had a heart attack after seeing them succeed in their scheme.

She knew that destroying this tunnel's entrance was going to doom Felix, as it was the only near shortcut to the labyrinth exit.

By destroying it, they left Felix with only two options, go back and take a longer route or dig a hole through the rubbles!

None of those options were viable in such a short amount of time!

Just as Emma assumed, the instant Felix's eyes landed on the mountain of rubbles, his lips parted in slightly as he froze before it.

Felix heard the loud noise of the collapse, but he didn't take it seriously as he thought that it was merely caused by rocks dropping on the ground.

After all, this earthquake was for warning them not to bury them inside the Volcano.

This made him discern that the players were the ones responsible for this!

'Shit! I need to take another route!' Not planning on wasting time moping about getting screwed like this, Felix turned back and sprinted while huffing through his nose, pushing his body's limits to the extreme.

'Queen, time!' He asked in agitation.

'1 minute and twenty-second are remaining.'

Her response made his heart sink as he was certain that he barely had enough time to leave the Labyrinth.

Don't even mention the volcano and leaving enough distance from it to not get smashed by the molten rocks, which would rain its premise!

Meliodas split the screen into two halves, one showing Felix and the other was showing the closest route to the exit that Felix was currently taking. He wasn't done yet as he swiftly added a timer on it, showing exactly the time needed for Felix to actually reach the forest from his position.

Five minutes!

A whopping five minutes was needed to survive the eruption for Felix! But he didn't even possess two minutes!

"It can't be!"

"This is bullshit!! Stop spewing lies, there enough time for Landlord to escape to safety."

"Sigh, he shouldn't have entered the volcano in the first place."

"Finally, that c.o.c.kroach is going to die." Unsurprisingly, Mastermania was watching the game in a VIP room all by himself. After all, how could he miss seeing Felix getting ganked up by the players due to his proposed bounty?

Alas, throughout the entire game he was served only disappointment after another. But at last, Felix met the only opponent, which was impossible to defeat even by him.

Mother Nature!

Mastermania's eyes were brightened up in excitement and eagerness to watch Felix finally meet his maker.

While the spectators were giving up on Felix and doubting his chances of survival, he wasn't losing heart yet!

His brain was working at full capacity to seek a solution to get him out of this shit hole. Meanwhile, his eyes were examining every single detail in the tunnel with full clarity, making him feel like he was seeing everything in slow motion.

The falling rocks, the cracking floor, the red fumes spewing from those cracks, everything was clear in his eyes, giving him whatever he needs to gain inspiration and create a plan that might let him live to tell the tale.

He didn't know if it was the doing of adrenaline or something else, but his brain was already occupied with his survival to bother about this matter.

Suddenly, his slits enlarged at the sight of a flat-surfaced long rock, resembling a surfboard stuck underneath a massive boulder.

'That's it!'

The moment he saw it, an insane plan was formed in his mind, taking root and refusing to leave!!

'Are you f*cking nuts?!' Asna immediately scolded him after reading his mind and seeing what he was planning on doing, 'It's not going to work! You will just get yourself killed.'

'Do you have any better plan?' Felix retorted while changing his direction, heading towards the surfboard-like rock.

'Nothing? Then be a good girl and don't bother me for the next minute. I need complete concentration.' Felix informed her calmly while having his hands on the massive boulder.

Asna went mum after hearing him say so.

"What is he doing?" Confused, Meliodas looked at Felix pushing the massive boulder instead of running away.

THUD!

After pushing with everything he got, Felix exhaled a long breath through his mouth as he watched the boulder fall to the side.

Not taking a single second to relax his muscles, Felix lifted the surfboard-like rock and put it underneath his armpit.

It was long and a bit thick. But still, with Felix's superstrength, he didn't feel like it weighed that much. Probably, it was just the adrenaline still being pumped, making it seem easy.

'Queen, time!' He asked again while carrying on his journey.

'1 minute!' She replied.

'1 minute before the full eruption, this meant I have even less to get into the perfect position.'

Instead of fretting about it, Felix lowered his head and charged recklessly through the falling rocks, not bothering anymore to dodge small sized ones.

Thud Thud!...

His head and shoulders were smashed by small rocks every once and a while, making Felix grimace in pain. Instead of bearing through it, he activated an aura and used revitalization to heal his wounds while still on the move.

29 Seconds later...Felix sighed in relief the moment he exited the labyrinth, stepping into the long straight tunnel, which was leading upward to the volcano's exit.

He lifted his head slightly and the light of the sky on the other side of the tunnel was shown before him.

It was so near yet so far.

Without further delay, Felix turned on his infrared vision and looked downward but slightly behind him.

'Holy!' He sucked a deep breath after seeing that everything was in red and orange!

The floor was about to be literally lava and Felix had to find high grounds as soon as possible!

'There!' He started sprinting towards a large-sized boulder. It wasn't the ideal one for his plan, but it was the biggest one near him.

After reaching its side, he climbed on the smaller rocks, which were stacked near it until he got close enough to throw his surfboard-like rock on top of the boulder without worrying about it breaking after contact.

Whoosh!

Next, he jumped easily on the boulder and immediately looked behind him. The boiling lava could be seen rising slowly from one of the many chasms in the ground.

RUMBLE!

A sudden additional earthquake struck the tunnels, making Felix lose his balance and almost fall down.

Yet, Felix's focus was entirely on the chasms behind him, which were spewing boiling lava everywhere, filling the tunnel behind him first, before rushing fiercely towards the one he was at.

Without asking the Queen, Felix knew based on the increased speed of the lava, that the eruption has begun!

The entire reason the sea of lava underneath the volcano didn't rush in a few seconds explosively, was to give the players those minutes to back off.

However, after they ended, nature was back in course!

'Good luck Felix.' Asna wished him luck softly while holding her breaths in worry.
