

MY SLAYER SYSTEM: RISE TO SUPREMACY

Chapter 451: A Competition!

The new glide the core members of the Fang hunters were in didn't waste time as it traveled faster than the normal glides. And in under a day, they were finally on the forbidden planet.

It was a world of eternal twilight, its sky forever shrouded beneath the crimson glow of two moons.

Their eerie light bathed the land in a dull red hue, casting long, ominous shadows over the jagged terrain.

The air itself was heavy, thick with an unseen force—a raw, primal energy that crackled with the presence of countless werewolves.

The land was vast and untamed, stretching across regions both deadly and magnificent. Colossal black trees, their bark hardened like obsidian, stood tall in the endless forests of the Blackwood Abyss.

Their roots twisted unnaturally, some said to be alive, feeding on the corpses of the unworthy. Beyond the forests lay the Bloodfang Peaks, a mountain range that speared the sky with jagged cliffs.

These mountains served as the training grounds of the strongest Alpha-class werewolves, their caves home to warriors who had survived brutal rites of passage.

In the far south, the Crimson Wastes spread endlessly—a barren desert where the exiled and defeated roamed, their bodies ravaged by both the scorching sun and the monstrous creatures lurking beneath the sands.

This was a place where only the strongest endured, where rogue werewolves fought among themselves for dominance, hoping to one day be strong enough to return to their packs.

"This place is kind of dark." Emily muttered as they looked around the place.

"At least, there's still a glow that can allow you see properly as if it was day." Peter replied as they all descended from the glide.

"And the Falcon X is successfully camouflaged." Jade announced as the Aeroglide was now invisible amongst the colossal black trees.

"Falcon X? Is that what you are calling this thing now?" Alex chuckled.

"Hey! It's not a thing, okay?" Jade snapped with a huff.

"It kinda is." Peter added with a slight frown as he stepped forward towards where the glide was supposed to be. "Woah! Did you make this thing disappear?" He asked and then...

Bang!

Peter's head connected with something hard, ripples shown in front of him as he rubbed his head slightly.

"Nope! It is just invisible." Jade replied.

"Yeah, noticed." Peter said rubbing his head hard.

"What if someone comes this way? Wouldn't they discover the ship? Then our cover will be blown." Kate said as she twisted her head from side to side scanning the place.

"The Falcon is linked to a device with me. It will inform me when it reads any signs of life coming within its range." Jade replied with a proud smile.

"So where are we headed?" Paul asked as his fingers twirled around the hilt of his sword.

"According to the map here," Jade said as he looked down at his wrist that was donned with a watch that has a small screen where when he tapped on it, a small hologram appeared in front of his face.

"We have a long walk ahead of us, it seems like all the werewolves are focused on one particular point. They keep circulating around that area." Jade muttered.

"I think it has to be that massive mountain right?" Alex asked. "I mean, when we were heading here, we all saw some towering spires carved in a massive black mountain right?"

"Well you are right." Jade said moving his hands in the air while his focus was around his wrist. "The few werewolves forces here are all gathered in one spot around the massive mountain."

The rest all nodded at this and soon, it was time for them to make a move. The group walked through the forest like area for a while and up ahead, the massive mountain was coming into view and so, they hid in a small forestry area.

This one didn't have colossal trees like the previous forest but it was still enough to hide their presence as they scanned the mountain.

"I feel like that mountain is not natural. It looks man-made." Peter muttered while staring at the mountain that surrounded the Fenrir's Dominion like a wall of some kind.

In the middle of city were towering spires that served as watch towers. They were unable to see anything else due to the massive mountains. The only thing they could see was the spires that rose so high that anybody could see it from far away as long as you were on the planet.

"So how do we go through the mountainous gates?" Kate asked as she saw a huge double gate in front of the mountain that no doubt led inside the werewolves' city.

"I will handle that." Jade said as he continued tapping on his watch when several silent drones zoomed past towards the gates.

They were about ten drones in total and all at once, they lunged into the gates hooking themselves to it like magnet sticking to a metallic object.

"Before we all go ahead," Jade said as his fingers hovered on his watch. "I need to ask you all for a favour. The werewolves seem to have a lab here and I wish to gather as much information as possible before we destroy the place.

So help draw the attention of all the werewolves away towards you all, deal with them and when I'm done, we bomb this place to the ground. Hopefully, we won't have to deal with whatever is here that has the same strength as the Alpha."

"Why would you want to gather information from the werewolves? We would be getting rid of them all soon enough, so I don't think there's a need for that." Peter said with a raised eyebrow.

"Destroying knowledge is something we shouldn't do because it can help us in the future; besides, you all keep bragging about how strong you all are; especially you, Peyer. So these forces shouldn't be too hard for you all, right?" Jade asked with a mischievous smile on his face.

"Hahaha! That's right!" Alex laughed as he snapped his fingers with a dangerous smirk on his face. "Peter, you have always been saying that you are stronger than me and just a little under Jake, right?"

This debate have been going on for years now so why don't we have a little friendly competition?"

"What competition?" Kate asked with a raised eyebrow.

"Who would deal with the most werewolves here. I mean, I would win anyway, but I might as well give you all a little bit of an advantage." Alex grinned.

"Are you so sure about that?" Emily asked. "Is General Paul included in this as well?"

"Hahaha..." Peter laughed as he stepped forward, his hands tightly clenched. "Oh you are so on."

"What is wrong with you all?!" Kate unknowingly shouted in anger. "This is extremely dangerous, we could all die. Infact people are dying back on Earth.

The main forces of the werewolves are heading to Earth along with the Alpha. Who even knows if they have already launched an attack.

And once Earth falls to them, we have very much lost this war and here you all want to turn this into a game?"

SILENCE!

There was a few seconds silence until Jade's tinkering broke the ice with him raising an eyebrow.

"Just relax, angry bird. Are you on your period or something? Just because we all know that you are quite weak... I mean compared to the others, doesn't mean that you will ruin the fun for the boys." Jade shrugged.

"Do you know how an arrow feels in someone's head?" Kate asked with her eyes burning with pure rage. Her hands tightly clenched on her bow as she glared at Jade.

"I will allow y..." Kate's voice trailed off as her eyes opened wide.

"What's wr... Crap!" Jade muttered as he slowly turned around to see a pair of glowing yellow eyes staring back at him.

It was a werewolf that was patrolling when it heard their voices and came forth.

Chapter 452: Create a big bang!

"What's wr... Crap!" Jade muttered as he slowly turned around to see a pair of glowing yellow eyes staring back at him.

It was a werewolf that was patrolling when it heard their voices and came forth.

Everybody exchanged a quick glance at each other before turning back to face the werewolf that was staring at them all.

The reason why most of them had glanced back at each other was they thought that seeing the first werewolf will signal the start of their little competition.

They all looked at the werewolf as if it was a prey while the werewolf's claws gleamed as if it was it also ready to attack them.

Even though the humans currently outnumbered it, the werewolf still wanted to stand its ground and that's because the werewolves were not beings that ran away when faced with a threat.

And it's not as if the werewolves were bothered with learning the faces of the humans that were a threat to them or anything.

"I get the first pick!" Alex bolted forward, Qi swirling around his feet aiding his speed.

But before he could get to the werewolf, something whooshed past his face and then lunged deep into the werewolf's head impaling a gaping hole in it causing it to fall down with a sickening thud.

"What the hell?!" Alex roared as he glanced at what had wheezed past his face and he saw it was an axe.

"One to none." Peter smirked as he strode over, grabbed the axe by the handle, flicked the blood away and walked back with a grin on his face.

"Couldn't you all had attacked it faster?" Jade asked, his hands crept on his chest which was heaving in and out rapidly, sweat drenched his face.

"Any more seconds, I thought I would have died."

"You are welcome." Peter said, walking past Jade and back to the rest.

With that, the group began treading towards their destination slowly. The huge gates now in front of them, the drones Jade had deployed earlier still lunged deep into the gates.

"I thought you wanted to destroy these gates earlier." Sophia who had been silent for most of the trip suddenly spoke up.

"You don't rush greatness. So don't rush me." Jade said as his fingers moved rapidly until he took a single step back and so did the others. "Remember, draw the attention of all those werewolves away."

"Yeah got it. Go in with a big bang. Just blow the damn gates already." Peter impatiently said as he twirled his axe in his hand.

"Here goes nothing." Jade said as he finally tapped a button, the drones lunged deep in the gates beeped loudly for a few seconds and then...

BOOM!

The gates blew wide open, the doors swung far back. Their eyes laid on a different terrain compared to the one they were on few minutes back which was the colossal forest area.

They were in the middle of a huge city. The outer walls of the city were fortified with layers of enchanted obsidian, reinforced with lunar runes that pulsed beneath the surface, forming an unbreakable barrier.

Anyone who touched these walls without permission would find their life force drained, their body collapsing into dust.

At the heart of the city stood the Moonfang Citadel, the ruling seat of the werewolves. This massive structure was a fortress within a fortress, its halls wide enough to fit entire battalions of werewolf warriors.

Flaming torches of blue fire lined the walls, their eerie glow casting long shadows upon the floor, while massive statues of ancient warlords loomed over all who entered.

The werewolves did not rely on technology the way humans did. Instead, their civilization was built upon a fusion of runic magic and raw physical might.

The city's defenses were powered by blood-infused sigils, ancient symbols that granted their warriors heightened abilities in battle.

Gargantuan war beasts patrolled the lower districts, creatures bred specifically for war, their hulking frames covered in thick armor-like fur.

Staring right at them, were a dozen omega werewolves, twenty beasts that didn't look to be below the advanced tier, and didn't look to be above the legendary tier.

"Uhm guys..." Sophia whispered as they all stared at the werewolves and beasts. "Does killing beasts count in this competition?"

"GROWLL!"

"Okay new rules!" Alex said as he unsheathed his sword from his back. "Kill anything killable on this planet. The one with the major kills, wins."

"The werewolves' lab is just a few metres away from here." Jade said, his gaze fixated on his watch.

"Sophia, go with Jade." Paul said, finally stepping forward. His hands which were crossed finally uncrossed as he grabbed the hilt of his sword on his waist.

"But why?" Sophia asked. "You all might need my help here."

"No we don't." Alex said as the werewolves were now getting ready to charge.

"We do need your help, but Jade needs your protection more. Wouldn't want the weakling to die before getting what he wants." Peter said.

"Hey! I can protect myself!" Jade shouted.

"Just shut up and take the damned help." Kate rebuked angrily.

"Fine! But you all better be safe when I come back. Especially you, Peter!" Sophia said as she walked forward towards him and then, her lips locked onto Peter's.

"Oh wow! When did this happen?" Emily asked as the duo finally disengaged from the passionate kiss they just shared.

"We don't have time for you both to play cuddle and we definitely don't have a bed which you both can use." Jade remarked.

"Just shut up and come with me." Sophia chided as she grabbed Jade and dashed away but Jade had one final warning for the group that were left behind.

"These are not all of them, they are spread around! So create a big bang that will draw them all out." Jade said as he along with Sophia finally disappeared from the streets and right on cue, the werewolves and the beasts dashed forward.

"He wants a big bang," Alex said while stepping forward.

"Let's give him that." Paul said as he raised his hands to the sky, the air trembled, the General's eyes glowing an unnatural orange.

And then, two huge boulders made from Qi appeared in the air hovering above the charging werewolves.

Snap!

Paul's fingers snapped loudly and the boulders were sent crashing down with terrifying speed that in less than a second, it made impact.

BANG!

BOOM!

The whole place trembled loudly that the dark streets they were on, quaked violently as Paul smirked at the result of his attack.

Chapter 453 453: Got Company!

BOOM!

The whole werewolf city quaked from the impact of something hitting the ground and in the process, the werewolves which were spread thin, along with whatever beasts were in the city rushed out towards where the sound came from.

In one part of the city, Jade and Sophia were seen hiding inside a building that was surprisingly empty, werewolves rushed out towards the cause of the boom.

"Looks like the others are busy." Jade said as he looked at a werewolf zoomed past them in a flash.

"Come on, coast is clear. Let's move." Sophia said as she bolted forward while grabbing onto Jade's arms.

"I'm not a kid that you need to hold onto his hands to cross the streets." Jade grumbled as Sophia weaved between buildings skillfully while holding onto Jade.

"How old are you?" Sophia asked without turning around.

"Seventeen." Jade replied.

"I'm nineteen and a half. So yeah, you are a kid to me." Sophia said as she kept on running. "By the way, how are we going to communicate with the others?"

"I got that covered. I snuck in a few of my mechanical spiders that is linked to each other and back to me. So communication won't be a problem." Jade replied.

"You have mechanical spiders now?" Sophia asked.

SILENCE.

Jade didn't reply as they kept running and soon, they reached another side in the massive mountain that had a massive door that was almost as huge as the double gates which they had blown off earlier.

This giant door seemed to lead to the supposed lab which Jade said was in the werewolves' fortress.

They didn't encounter any trouble or any beasts and that was because of the distraction the others were causing outside.

"How do we open this up without causing a huge noise?" Sophia asked as she eyed the door.

Jade didn't reply and instead, he walked around the door until he saw a passcode operator off to the side.

"Bingo." Jade grinned as he tapped his watch, it suddenly surged, moved and formed a full on mechanical encasing around his arm that displayed a few numbers on the surface.

"What? You want to hack the passcode?" Sophia asked and Jade lifted his head to smile at her.

"This is the only way." Jade said and then turned back to his arm, moving his fingers on the screens like a blur.

"How long will it take? Thirty minutes? Ten minutes? Or five minutes?" Sophia asked as she nervously tapped her foot on the ground as the bangs were growing louder.

"Bingo." Jade said as he swiftly moved to the passcode operator and inputted a four digits passcode and a single beep was heard.

The door slowly opened up to the side revealing a long hallway that looked to branch off to different places or rooms.

"You unlocked it in what? Five seconds?" Sophia asked, her eyes in awe.

"Nope! Three." Jade said as he now placed his hands down.

From his sleeves, a dozen robotic spiders rushed down and then spread out moving into the branched hallways and surveying the doors.

"I take my words back, we do need you." Sophia said.

"Tsk!" Jade just causally shrugged while looking in front of him as if he was reading something in the air. "What the hell is there? And why the hell are they there?"

"What do you mean? What is it? Trouble?" Sophia asked as she nervously scanned around the place.

"A quick one." Jade said as he slowly stood up, put his hand into his pocket and pulled out a ring.

Placing it on his finger, he glanced back at Sophia. "How strong are you? Can you handle four omega werewolves on your own without the others?"

"Why are you asking?" Sophia asked, her rapier gleaming slightly as it suddenly appeared in her hands.

"Because I think I might have uncovered something massive." Jade grinned.

Back on the streets of the Lunar bastion, Paul had just finished pulverizing a dozen werewolves and ten beasts with two huge Qi boulders therefore unleashing a massive boom that rang out in the whole city.

"Is the competition still on?" Paul asked with a wide grin. "I just dealt with twenty-two enemies."

"Tsk! Big deal." Peter said as ten beasts that managed to get through Paul's strike dashed forward towards the team at immense speed.

"What is this?" Alex asked as he pointed his sword towards the charging ten beasts. "Just ten beasts? Come on! Bring hundred of them out damn it!"

"First kill the ten beasts before you brag." Peter scoffed as two of the beasts suddenly lunged towards Alex who leapt back, his sword slammed into its sheath which was on his back.

Without saying anything, his legs smashed into the ground beneath him. Fissures ran deep as small slabs of black stone got kicked up which he grabbed with a single hand and crushed them with pure strength.

"I wouldn't want to stain my sword with your filthy blood." Alex said as the slab of stone got reduced to a few pebbles which he grabbed and tossed towards the two beasts that lunged at him again.

Bang!

The pebbles shot forward and slammed into their heads. Creating a gaping hole in them causing them to fall with a thud.

"Just two?" Peter asked as he bolted towards four beasts, his axe gleaming behind him slightly.

A beast swung its tail towards Peter raising up a storm of dust but he swiftly leapt back and swung his axe forward slicing its head.

Another one tried to get behind him but he quickly sidestepped avoiding the beast's claws and then whacked it in the face with the back of his palm sending it flying away from him.

"Woah! I have grown stronger than an advanced tier beast." Peter smirked as he bolted forward, his hands held down as he grabbed his earlier thrown axe and then he swiveled around to hammer it into a beast's head.

A thunderous boom rang out as black blood spurted out of its head while it dropped dead.

The fourth beast lunged at him and he was about to retaliate when a loud bang resounded as a pebble wheezed past his face and struck the beast squarely on the head.

"Hey! That's my kill." Peter shouted as he turned towards Alex who smiled widely.

"My weapon killed it, it's mine." Alex replied.

"I..." Peter's words trailed off.

"Watch out!" Kate's voice interrupted them as she quickly grabbed her bow and unleashed four different Qi arrows that whoosed past Peter and struck four beasts killing them at once before they could attack Peter.

"And will you look at that," Peter announced as he turned towards the dead beasts and back at Alex. "Kate got a higher kill than you."

"And you too." Alex replied with a scoff.

"I killed four beasts, she did the same. How does she have a higher kill streak than me?" Peter asked with a frown.

"How the hell do you have four kills?" Alex asked.

"Remember? I killed a werewolf back in the forest. And you said we can kill anything killable on this planet." Peter shrugged.

"Tsk!" Alex scoffed when the sound of running broke their conversations.

"And will you look at that," Paul said as he stepped forward, his sword now drawn from its hilt as what was running finally came into view.

"We got more company." Paul completed his words as they could see about three hundred werewolves with beasts in the mix closing in on them.

Chapter 454 454: We are going to die!

"A quick one." Jade said as he slowly stood up, put his hand into his pocket and pulled out a ring.

Placing it on his finger, he glanced back at Sophia. "How strong are you? Can you handle four omega werewolves on your own without the others?"

"Why are you asking?" Sophia asked, her rapier gleaming slightly as it suddenly appeared in her hands.

"Because I think I might have uncovered something massive." Jade grinned.

"Whatever. Let's go." Sophia said as they quickly ran silently down the hallway and then, they took a sharp turn to the left towards where Jade said he had uncovered something massive.

"Over here." Jade whispered and they hid behind the wall with Jade staring out slowly to see four omega werewolves patrolling in front of a huge double doors.

His mechanical spider moved around the door silently. It would have crept in through the cracks but it was sealed tight and so, it waited for Jade while the werewolves were unaware of its presence.

"What's wrong?" Sophia asked, her voice low as she stared at Jade's worried expression.

"Remember I asked if you could handle four omega werewolves? Well, we are here. Do something." Jade replied with a small smile as he moved back and let Sophia forward.

Peeking out, she was able to see the patrolling werewolves that only grunted a few times acknowledging their presences and then kept on moving around.

"Okay. I can totally handle and kill them. But I would create a loud noise during the fight which might attract any leftovers that are currently still in this building." Sophia considered her options as she turned back to look at Jade who tapped his feet nervously, a small mischievous smile on his face.

"What's with the cheeky smile?"

"Nothing. I just want to see how the famous daughter of the most smartest man in the entire world would handle this situation." Jade chuckled quietly.

"Tsk." Sophia scoffed as she glanced at her rapier and then back at the walls.

Then back to another sharp turn that led straight to another hallway. A smile crept on her face as she stabbed her sword into the wall cleanly carving out two small pebbles.

"What do you want to use that for?" Jade asked with a raised eyebrow.

"Just watch and learn." Sophia said and without revealing herself, she held one of the pebble, inputted a tiny bit of Qi into it, twister her wrist and sent the pebble hurling forward at blinding speed towards the sharp turn that led to a deep dark hallway.

The pebble flew with amazing speed and it landed in the hallway with a loud sound that drew the attention of the werewolves.

The beasts glanced at each other and without saying anything, two out of the four werewolves left their post to go inspect what had caused the sound.

"Ready?" Sophia asked as she gripped the second pebble, inputted a tiny fraction of Qi into it and then hurled it forward at blinding speed.

The pebble lunged deep into one of the left werewolf's head that it tore a silent hole through it and then it fell with a sickening thud.

The last werewolf turned around in panic wondering what happened when...

BANG!

Sophia who had infused her legs with Qi dashed forward at blinding speed towards the werewolf who before it could react, her rapier flashed in front of it and the next instant, it fell with a silent thud.

"Impressive." Jade said as he did a silent clap while walking forward, his gaze scanning around at the werewolves. "I see you are smart but not as smart as your dad or me."

"Don't gloat." Sophia rolled her eyes.

"Oh I will... later." Jade said with a smile as he walked towards a passcode operator in the door. "Time to ge..." he stuttered as the door suddenly opened after a few short seconds of tinkering.

"Have you considered working for the Josh family? Your brain and skills will be appreciated." Sophia said as the door was slowly opening up.

"No thanks." Jade plainly replied as the door finally opened up to let the two walk inside calmly until...

"What the actual f*ck!" Sophia exclaimed as she looked around the room, her heart thumping loudly in fear.

Jade who stood beside her was shivering not because of cold but pure fear. All hairs on his body stood up as he stared at a monstrosity in front of him.

The room stretched out like an underground coliseum, its arched ceiling rising nearly thirty feet high and its walls built with reinforced black alloy laced with glowing mana circuits.

The space was cavernous—wide enough to accommodate a dragon lying at full length with its wings partially unfurled.

Strange mechanical arms and rotating instruments hung from above, suspended by hydraulic systems, and occasionally hissed with pressurized steam.

Along the walls were control panels blinking with a mix of crimson, blue, and green lights—each feeding data into holographic displays that hovered in mid-air.

The air was cool, sterile, and pulsing faintly with magical energy that thrummed beneath the metallic flooring.

In the center of the lab stood a massive cylindrical glass containment tube—thick, rune-inscribed, and reinforced with layers of metal rings bolted into the ground.

The hum of machinery was constant, broken only by the faint thudding of the heart monitor connected to the creature inside.

The room wasn't what gave Jade and Sophia the chills, and neither was it the glass containment but more like what was inside it.

Inside the enormous glass tube, a majestic yet fearsome dragon lay coiled in a sedated slumber.

Its scales shimmered like obsidian edged with dark crimson veins, pulsing faintly as though alive with internal magma.

Nearly thirty feet long from snout to tail, its massive body had been tightly curled to fit within the chamber.

Its wings, now folded and restrained by thick magical bindings, twitched occasionally as if reacting to some residual instinct.

Sharp horns curled back from its skull, and rows of jagged spines ran down its neck to its back.

A metallic muzzle was clamped over its jaws, connected to tubes that delivered a continuous stream of sleeping gas laced with mana suppressants.

Its breathing was slow but powerful, each exhale fogging part of the reinforced glass with a faint hiss.

Its eyes—though closed—occasionally fluttered, revealing a hint of deep amber slits beneath, hinting that despite the sedation, this was no ordinary beast. It was ancient. And dangerous.

"Wh...what is a dragon beast doing in the heart of the werewolf base?" Sophia asked with a loud gulp as her heart kept thumping loudly.

"No, don't tell me." Jade said as he rushed towards a side of the room that had screens and computers lining a wall.

Without wasting time, he placed his mechanical arm on a screen and then called out...

"Copy and filter all information and make it easy to understand." Jade ordered into the air.

A robotic voice was heard inside Jade's ears after the command.

"Do you want the information broken down?"

"Did I stutter? Yes damn it!" Jade screamed in anger.

"What's going on?" Sophia asked as she looked at the panicked Jade who had sweat drenching his face and in a minute, his hand slid off the screen.

His skin suddenly turned pale as he turned towards Sophia, his steps faltered as he nearly fell down but he quickly caught himself.

"What's wrong? What did you find? And what is a dragon doing here?" Sophia asked again. "I thought dragons were extinct."

"Soph..." Jade softly called out, his eyes moist. "We are going to die."

Chapter 455: Competition over!

"And will you look at that," Peter announced as he turned towards the dead beasts and back at Alex. "Kate got a higher kill than you."

"And you too." Alex replied with a scoff.

"I killed four beasts, she did the same. How does she have a higher kill streak than me?" Peter asked with a frown.

"How the hell do you have four kills?" Alex asked.

"Remember? I killed a werewolf back in the forest. And you said we can kill anything killable on this planet." Peter shrugged.

"Tsk!" Alex scoffed when the sound of running broke their conversations.

"And will you look at that," Paul said as he stepped forward, his sword now drawn from its hilt as what was running finally came into view.

"We got more company." Paul completed his words as they could see about three hundred werewolves with beasts in the mix closing in on them.

"I was feeling useless while watching you all." Emily said, her katana shone with an ethereal orange glow.

"You are not useless babe." Alex said as he sharply turned to look at Emily.

"I know love." Emily smiled as she walked forward until everybody were now standing side by side. "I mean, I'm tired of standing on the sidelines."

With a roar, Emily charged forward leaving the others behind, her sword glowing brighter as the werewolves and beasts all numbering around three hundred dashed forward.

"If this is all of you, then I'm sorry, you are all a goner." Emily shouted as she swung her sword forward, a huge wave of Qi shot forward and in the blink of an eye, a dozen beasts were gone.

"Woo! That's my baby." Alex cheered from the side.

"Tsk! Funny how your girlfriend is being more useful than you." Peter said, Qi coursing through his body as he dashed forward, the ground he stood on earlier shattered beneath the impact.

His body speeding forward at tremendous speed. Letting his hands down, his axes slid down his sleeves just in time as he swung them in an X shape blocking the claw strike of a werewolf and then...

Swoosh!

Peter shot out two spears made from Qi towards the werewolf impaling its head in a second. Before the werewolf's body even hit the ground, he dashed towards another.

Swinging his leg out, it met with a werewolf's head sending it flying with a thunderous boom.

"You kids haven't learnt anything in so many years?" Paul asked as he lifted his hand to the air, a dozen beasts dashing towards him.

The beasts were of the same type as they pushed off running faster, with the air feeling like it was aiding them as they ran faster.

"You kill them with skill not strength." Paul said as he swung his hands down and from the air, a loud whooshing sound was heard as twenty Qi swords crashed down on their heads killing the beasts at once.

"And for the record, these twelve beasts are added to my kill tab. And for the record again, I'm ahead of you all on the leaderboard!" Paul cupped his hands around his mouth.

"Not for long!" Alex roared as he dashed forward, his giant sword unsheathed from his back as he leaned back avoiding the claw strike from a werewolf.

Then a Qi sword shot forward slamming into its head. Quickly pivoting on one foot, Alex's sword met with another claw strike causing a loud ringing sound to be heard, the ground cracked before his legs whipped out whacking the werewolf away.

"I didn't think you were the competitive type." Kate who was beside Paul, her bow and arrows in hand which she was sending out with deadly precision said.

"I'm not. But that is one way to get them to work harder." Paul smirked and then snapped his fingers again sending four Qi spears impaling four werewolves. "Another four kill guys! Try to keep up!"

"Smart." Kate said as she kept on calmly sending arrows flying one after the other.

"I guess I'm not doing my job properly since you are still here and not dashing forward." Paul grinned as he swung his sword forward sending a wave of Qi crashing into two beasts tearing them apart.

"Unless you can beat me at archery, I don't need to compete." Kate replied as she swiftly leapt in time to avoid a werewolf from stabbing her before she sent three arrows loose.

"Oh really?!" Paul smirked as he clicked his fingers again and the next instant, Qi arrows began raining down from the sky. "How about now? I technically sent Qi arrows impaling werewolves with deadly precision without a bow."

"Keh!" Kate laughed as she hung her bow on her back and strode towards Paul and then glanced back at the battlefield.

"I didn't want to use this, nor did I want to compete. But sorry to say general, you are annoying." Kate said as she raised her hands to the sky and slowly, a huge bow formed: it's strings and handle glowing with a yellow energy.

"Top this!" Kate said and three huge arrows shot out from the bow crashing down in the midst of the battle, dust, ground and debris kicked up as the whole place quaked.

The battlefield was thrown in disarray, screams of pain and agony from the beasts and werewolves rang out.

"Hey watch it you Hawkeye girl!" Peter roared as he quickly rolled over on the ground just in time to avoid a werewolf from falling down on him.

"I'm sorry." Kate apologized with a cheeky smile as the sudden shot of giant arrows sent the battle in disarray.

Peter and Emily had fallen down due to the quake but now, they were back to fighting with all the strength and speed they could muster.

Slowly, the battle was coming to an end. With just a squad of five, the army of three hundred werewolves and beasts were now almost dead.

"And here goes the last one on my side." Peter said as he leaned backwards, blood trickling down his cheek before he swung his axe from below sending a wave of Qi crashing into the werewolf killing it.

"Same here." Alex replied as he leapt back, his sword sheathed and then with a loud clap of his hands, a reverberating boom rang out disorienting the werewolf before he swiftly shot forward.

A Qi sword appeared in his hand which he swung forward decapitating the werewolf in one fell swoop.

And with that, the battle was now over as the fighters all smiled widely while Kate along with Emily fell on their backside in exhaustion.

"Is it just me or is my core now reduced to half of what it once was?" Kate asked as she grabbed her chest.

"At least we got rid of the threats. Now we just wait for Jade to gather whatever information he wants to gather and then we blow this whole place up." Peter smiled.

"And for the record, I'm the winner of this little competition." Paul said, a grin on his face.

"Well, it isn't really over right? I mean the competition." Emily said through ragged breath.

"I mean, there are no more werewolves heading our way so it's over." Paul shrugged.

"Well, I came out as the second best." Peter shrugged.

"Who gave you that? I did best." Alex shouted with a frown.

"You want to argue? I'm better than you? Stronger than you and a little under Jake." Peter smirked.

"Says the weakling that ran away when he was faced with the threat of a Beta werewolf." Alex scoffed.

"You fool! I faced it head on." Peter reported back.

"Whatever! I'm still better than you. And this shows that after Jake, I'm the strongest." Alex shrugged.

"Says who?" Peter asked.

"Says our competition!" Alex replied.

"I do..." Peter's words trailed off as...

"Guys!" A loud voice echoed in all their ears.

"Huh?! Why the hell can I hear Jade's voice in my ear?" Alex shouted as he frantically hit his ears.

"Listen to me, we are all going to die."

"Die? Has Jade hit his head on something?" Kate asked as she grabbed her ear and felt the touch of something robotic.

"What do you mean?" Paul asked as he folded his arms calmly when...

ROARRRRRR!

A loud, ear piercing and disturbing roar that was heard on all the streets of the huge city was heard heading their way.

"All of you, run!" Jade's voice screamed in their ears.

"Run?" Peter asked when the roar rang out again and he looked up, his mouth fell agape, eyes widened. "What the?!"

"Move!" Paul quickly shouted as a huge ball of fire crashed down from the sky towards the squad while they quickly leapt back in time.

BOOM!

The whole streets shuddered, houses crumbled as balls of small fire was thrown all around burning with bright intent malice.

Chapter 456: A humongous problem!

While the Fang hunters were out conquering planets and trying to take down the werewolves' planet, they were unaware of the doom that was about to befall the human race.

"Hey! Gray right?" A feminine voice called out as she stopped a man who looked to be in his twenties and he had fiery golden hair with his eyes gleaming green and he had a tattoo of a phoenix on his arm while wearing a long golden robe over his clothes that looked like a cape of some sorts.

"Yes? And you are that famous female news reporter." Gray said as he turned around to glance at Erin who smiled at him. "And this is the first time you aren't moving with your cameras and drones."

"That's because there's nothing to report on." Erin smiled back as they began taking a stroll together.

The two of them were at the Fang hunters' main base; Aurora Academy. Gray had come here during the time Rex, Bane and Humfree fought against the Beta werewolf.

Ever since then, he hadn't left the place at all. Since all the core members were out, Head General Humfree was still restrained to his bed after the severe injuries he suffered, Gray decided to stay back so he could control the guild till when someone important got back.

While he let his own core members take control of the phoenix guild till he got back. Meanwhile, Erin came here along with Druig because she had a feeling that something big was going to happen soon.

And since the Fang hunters were usually the center of attention, she decided to come to their main base just in case something big did really happen.

"How do you feel ever since that day of the duel after you lost to Jake? What made you submit to him instead of growing your own strength?" Erin asked as they continued walking around while occasionally greeting some people that walked past them.

"The same reason I had to submit and surrender to him is the same reason Head General Humfree left the academy in Jake's hands despite being the one who created and groomed it to this stage." Gray replied with a small smile.

"I don't understand." Erin said with a raised eyebrow.

"I saw something in him. Something that can only be seen in the rarest of people nowadays. Strength, determination, bravery and resolve. We have all seen him do strange and miraculous things that were thought impossible.

He was the first person to kill a Beta werewolf in the whole world at such a young age. And honestly, I feel like without him here, humanity might just lose this war."

"Which breeds the question, where is he?" Erin asked.

"Out conquering planets and from the reports I heard, they are done. But they are headed for another mission. A dangerous mission at that." Gray replied with a shrug.

"What kind of mission?" Erin asked.

"No idea." Gray shrugged again with a small grin.

'I wonder what kind of mission Gray is talking about. I hope to see Jake soon, and I just hope this damned war gets over soon.' Erin sighed inwardly.

"What are those?" Erin asked as she quickly pointed to some tall robots patrolling around the walls of the academy.

"Those are mechs. They are created by Jade and are piloted by humans in it. Specially designed for those weak enough that they can't fight even omega werewolves." Gray replied.

"That's so cool!" Erin exclaimed with a little jump. "I wonder where Druig ran off to. I would have started a recording now which will be shown to the people later."

"Yeah. The recording can be d..." Gray trailed off as his watch began blinking rapidly with red lights.

"What's wrong?" Erin asked with a worried expression on her face.

"Crap! This is bad." Gray said and without warning, he dashed away from Erin towards the main base of the Fang hunters.

"I wonder what is wrong with him. Did something happen or is something about to happen?" Erin mumbled, her heart thumping loudly as she dashed off to look for her camera man.

"Head General Humfree!" Gray shouted as he burst through Humfree's resting room.

The room was dimly lit, with golden sunlight filtering through heavy drapes that barely swayed from the faint breeze outside.

The scent of old wood and medicinal herbs lingered in the air, mingling with the faint coppery tang of dried blood.

A single oil lamp on the bedside table cast flickering shadows across the walls, where faded portraits and old weapons hung like relics of a bygone era.

Humfree lay in a broad, sturdy bed carved from dark oak, its posts worn smooth by time.

Crisp, white linens were stained with patches of crimson, and fresh bandages wrapped around one of his shoulders which was missing an arm—signs of the brutal skirmish he'd barely survived.

His breathing was slow but labored, every rise and fall of his chest betraying the pain simmering beneath the surface.

Beside the bed, a cane leaned against a battered armchair, its cushions frayed from years of use.

A small table nearby held a basin of cool water, bloodied cloths, and an untouched bowl of broth, long gone cold.

The fireplace at the far end of the room crackled softly, its warmth chasing away the chill creeping in through the stone walls.

Despite the silence, the room pulsed with unspoken memories—of battles fought, comrades lost, and victories that now felt too distant to celebrate.

Humfree's sword rested on a mantle above the fire, its edge dulled and its hilt wrapped in faded leather, as if waiting for the day its master might rise again.

"Gray?!" Humfree muttered as he slowly sat upright on his bed to see Gray bolt forward, his face drenched with sweat. "What's wrong? Any problem?"

"Head General... not to bother you or anything, but there's a literal humongous problem heading our way." Gray said while swallowing a huge lump of saliva.

"Humongous problem? What kind of problem can't you handle?" Humfree asked with a raised eyebrow.

"Remember when Bane sent us a message that the werewolves are heading to Earth with their Alpha?" Gray asked, his heart thumping loudly.

"Yes... and he also said that it might take a few days or a day in the worst case scenario. Although it has been two days now though. What happened?" Humfree asked.

"Well, the werewolves are on Earth now and they are currently heading for here. They are heading towards us for one reason or the other." Gray quickly said.

"Wait, what?!" Humfree shouted out in shock.

Chapter 457: Take revenge!

"Up!" A voice boomed.

"Yeah!" multiple people shouted out at once.

In a big and wide courtyard, a few hundred people were seen training with a single man in front, hands behind his back as he examined the people in front of him.

"Train like you mean it, push past your freaking limit. Imagine the werewolves in front of you and destroy them." The man shouted out a command again.

"HA!" The whole multiple men shouted at once as they thrust their weapons forward.

"Impressive." Another voice boomed as a man walked through the courtyard, his upper chest bare, only a black pant was on his body with a brown shoe.

A large scar ran across his face as he kept walking forward. His crimson hair fluttered a bit.

"Sir Rex!" Everybody including the man bowed down slightly as Rex revealed himself fully, hands crossed against his chest and a small smile on his face.

"I can see the dedication and sheer power you all are putting in your training and I'm very much impressed." Rex said as he faced the crowd, hands behind his back.

"Seeing you all like this wants to make me train and spar with you all."

"Ah! No sire." The instructor quickly said with a nervous chuckle. "We all know that there's no one in the entire faction that can match up to your strength. You could easily decimate thousands of men alive."

"Oh come on! I'm already weakened after that grand battle. And I promise to pull back my strength." Rex said and then he took a stance in front of a thick wall that was used as a punching bag for those practicing Qi usage.

"Let me show you," Rex said as he clenched his hands into a knuckle and just lightly swung it forward into the wall.

His knuckles connected with a small, mini bang and that was all. The wall was intact as Rex turned back to the instructor with a smile on his face.

"See... I do know how to reduce my str..."

Crack!

Bang!

Everybody's attention suddenly turned back towards the thick wall which Rex had punched and the next second, they saw it crumble down which made them all gulp loudly.

'He wasn't even using a fraction of his strength, no Qi, no full strength, nothing and he managed to destroy a wall which even a double A ranked adventurer would struggle to break unless they went full out.' the instructor thought with chills running down his spine as he glanced at Rex.

"Ok, I see your point now." Rex pouted as he turned to leave when the doors to the courtyard burst open.

Raze was seen dashing forward, his watch blinking furiously with a red light.

"Raze? What's wrong?" Rex asked as Raze suddenly slid in front of him, his heart thumping loudly.

"We got trouble." Raze quickly said.

"Trouble? What trouble?" Rex asked as he turned around leaving the courtyard along with Raze.

"The werewolves, they have gotten to Earth and their current destination is the Fang hunters' main base." Raze said, his face drenched with cold sweat.

SILENCE!

A thick silence hung through the air as Rex was seen halting his steps, his heart thumping loudly with each passing second.

"Tell me that the Alpha isn't on the glide heading there." Rex pleaded as he slowly turned towards Raze who with his expression, Rex got his answer.

A short sigh escaped Rex's mouth as he turned towards Raze with a small frown on his face.

"Gather eighty percent of our men. Both weak and strong, leave the rest back here and let's head out to the Fang hunters' city! Let's have our final standoff against those beasts there." Rex ordered with his hands tightly clenched.

Meanwhile, Bane could be seen in a room with multiple screens, tubes, small mechanical hands walking alongside him and his son; Jay Josh as they were busy working on some prototypes.

"Dad, the strike team you had sent out to delay the werewolves, how are they fairing now?" Jay asked as he passed Bane a little screw.

"They are doing their best for two days now. But I doubt they can last any much longer which is why, I'm trying to upgrade my tech after the last battle with that Beta werewolf." Bane replied, a small monocle on his eye as he patched some things.

"Can we win this war?" Jay asked, a small sigh escaping from his mouth.

"Currently, no. But with Jake, maybe." Bane replied bluntly without thinking twice.

"Dad..." Jay croaked out, his eyes moist. "For years now, I have been trying to act brave so I can be able to fit into your shoes bu...but at this point, I can't. This war, what... what if we lose?

Wh... what... what if something happens to you or that stubborn sister of mine?!"

Hearing Jay's words, Bane's hands froze as he turned towards his son who quickly wiped his tears clean with his lab coat.

"If I said I'm not scared, I would be lying to you and myself. Every single day after the first war, I have been scared of not only my life, but of yours and your sister's.

But what can I do? Kek! I'm a world leader after all, I have to put on a brave face and soldier on. So quit crying like a toddler and hand me th..."

Beep! Beep! Beep!

A red light was seen blinking on one of the screens in front of the duo and Bane quickly rushed towards it with a frown on his face.

"What is it? Any issue?" Jay asked as he slowly strode over towards Bane who froze, his hands hovered over the keyboard, eyes dilated as if he saw a ghost.

"This is bad, really bad." Bane said as he swiftly turned towards Jay.

"What's bad?" Jay asked as he gulped hard fearing for the worst.

"Gather all strong fighters, pick a lot of Aeroglides and let's head over to the Fang hunters' base right now! The war is about to reach its climax and at this point, the fate of humanity hangs by a thin thread." Bane ordered, his heart racing.

Meanwhile the ones that have sent the humans into panic, were currently seen heading towards Aurora using their gigantic Aeroglide.

"Alpha, we will be touching down at the Fang hunters' base in just twenty minutes." Ulric said.

"Good." The Alpha smirked as he stood up from his crimson throne, eyes glowing red. "Today, we destroy the humans totally and I will take revenge for them killing my brother and sons."

Chapter 458: Evacuate the city!

Beep! Beep! Beep!

A loud blaring alarm rang through the whole of Aurora Academy and soon enough, a voice boomed in all corners of the city.

"Listen everyone! Those outside doing whatever you are doing, I advice you stay locked in." Humfree's voice boomed through different speakers from his room.

"Damn it Head General, we don't have time for this." Gray shouted as he snatched the tech used to project Humfree's voice outwardly.

"Listen up you all! Not to cause panic or anything, but we are about to be attacked any moment from now. Civilians, stay in your damned house, adventurers, fighters and all strong personnels, meet me outside the academy gates.

This is not a drill, I repeat, this is not a drill. We are going to be attacked soon and I need everybody's strength so come on, meet me outside." Gray ordered through the tech.

"But what if the fight spills outside the academy to the city? Civilians might die." Humfree said as he tried to get out of his bed but he was too weak to.

"That's right." Gray mumbled and then he grabbed the tech again. "Alright you all, new plan. Countless Aeroglides will come down to the city to take all civilians away from the city to a safe place.

All pilots, pick up your damned glides and head over to the city to take the people to safety. Some strong adventurers will accompany you all and ensure orderliness."

"Good call. Now watch how the people panic." Humfree scolded.

A few moments ago, Gray had just come in to inform Humfree of the attack and so, he quickly grabbed a tech on the side of the wall to inform the people.

"What next?" Gray asked with sweat dripping down his face.

"We evacuate the people, stay here and fight." Humfree said as he pushed himself off the bed.

"We? No offense but you only have a single freaking arm. How are you going to help? Besides, the core members of the guild are out there, Jake is nowhere to be seen, in the whole guild, it's just me that's strong enough to lead the army." Gray said as he held out his hands in front of Humfree stopping him from moving away.

"Wrong, not just you." Humfree said with a smile on his face. "Put a call through to all the branches of the guild. Phoenix guild, iron fist and also Raven wing's. Tell them to send back up as soon as possible."

"No need." A feminine voice said as the door to Humfree's room opened up to reveal a female with purple hair, two bulky men beside her and then, a young guy who didn't look older than 22 walked in too.

His slick black hair wavered in the wind as he stared at Humfree with his blue eyes which shone of determination.

The female was Helen; the daughter to the leader of the Raven wing's guild, one of the bulky men was her bodyguard from childhood known as Berg, while the last man was the Rave lord, leader of the Raven's guild and the father of Helen.

The young guy was Andrew; Blip's son from the iron fist guild.

"How the hell are you all here so fast?" Gray asked as he turned towards the people in front of him.

"We were quite close by. Like really close when we received the news and decided to come here." Helen replied as she causally walked towards Humfree.

"The news? How did you all get the news so fast?" Gray asked with a raised eyebrow.

"Jade had distributed a tech around the whole branches of the Fang hunters which would alert everyone of any danger. And so, here we are." Andrew shrugged.

"That kid is really helpful." The Rave lord said with a slight chuckle.

"I don't know how the iron fist guild was unable to detect him in time." Andrew sighed as he turned towards Gray and Head General Humfree. "So what's the plan?"

"Did you bring any men with you?" Humfree asked with a raised eyebrow.
"Because there are only a thousand men left in the guild after that last attack."

"Kek Kek Kek!" The Rave lord laughed in amusement. "He asks if we brought any men. We brought a literal army of two thousand."

"And from my side, I brought one thousand, five hundred men." Andrew said with a slight yawn.

"Good. Now we help in the evacuation and after that, we fight like our lives depends on it, literally." Gray said with a short sigh.

Knock knock!

A short knock interrupted them as a female and a male entered the room, faces grim as they stared at everybody.

"We heard the news. We know what's going on. Just so you all know, we aren't running away. We will stay and film everything to the world." Erin declared.

"Wait, we are?!" Druig shouted as he turned towards Erin with a confused and worried expression on his face. "I thought we would get off this city along with the civilians?"

"Are you such a coward? These brave people are about to fight for the entire world and you want to run away? Instead of showing this bravery to the whole world." Erin snapped in anger.

"Bu... we are talking about the Alpha here. The same one who killed a world leader." Druig retorted.

"Does it matter? Look Druig, if you want to leave, do that. But I will stay here and report on this to the world, with or without your help. Besides, don't you know of the saying? The cameraman doesn't die." Erin chuckled.

"Yeah, but the reporter does damn it." Druig sighed. "Fine, I will stay."

"Do we get a say in this?" Helen asked after the duo were done bantering.

"Nope! So where do we set up?" Erin asked with a smile on her face.

'I knew that my gut feelings were right. There's something about this guild that attracts trouble. One could say they are a magnet that attracts trouble to them.' Erin thought.

"What are you all waiting for? Let's go and have our last stand against the werewolves!" Humfree ordered with a roar.

"Wrong. We..." Gray said as he pointed to him and the others behind him. "Will handle this, you will rest."

"That's right Humfree..." The Rave lord said as he walked towards the Head General, hands on his shoulders. "Rest up. Goodnight." He said and the next instant, his hands moved so fast that Humfree was unable to track him as the Head General was now seen slumping into his bed.

"Is he dead?" Druig asked with worry etched on his face.

"Nope! Just unconscious. Now come on, let's go." The Rave lord said as he dashed for the door along with the others with the aim of standing their own against the werewolves.

Chapter 459: Play with us!

Twenty minutes later!

The whole Aurora city had been evacuated clean of any civilians. The streets would have bare if it wasn't for the thousands of men in front of Aurora Academy which was about fifty metres away from the city.

The thousands of men were about ten metres away from the academy as they baited their time, waiting for the attack to start.

In the air, a small glide was seen where Erin and Druig were setting up and waiting for just the right moment to begin shooting. On the ground, the powerful and strong members of the guild stood.

These were Gray, Rave lord, Helen, Berg and Andrew. Each of them with their weapons in hand as they baited their time.

"How long do you think they will take to get here?" Helen asked as she stared at the sky, her daggers in her hands.

"I feel like they will be here any moment from now." Gray said as his sword was seen in its sheath on his waist.

'Damn it! I don't have my system anymore, how am I supposed to handle this? I only have my Qi, fighting experience and skills on my end. For fuck sake, where the hell is Jake?!'

'I shouldn't have brought Helen here. What if something happens to her? How would I be able to forgive myself?' the Rave lord thought as he turned towards Helen who didn't take her gaze away from the sky.

'I have sworn to always protect Helen right from when she was a child till now. And I will do my utmost best to fulfill that till I die.' Berg thought, his hands clenched on his sword tightly.

Andrew sighed inwardly as he clenched his hands tightly. 'I joined the Fang hunters because I wanted to atone for what my dad did by turning into a werewolf. And now, I'm about to face the root cause of all these problems.

Jake, I had come here because I wanted to atone more for my sins and you are nowhere to be found. I promise, if you don't come back in time, I will skin you alive.'

"Uhm guys... can you hear something?" Helen asked as she suddenly gulped loudly.

"It sounds li..." Gray stuttered as a deep frown appeared on his face, his sword rattled around his waist.

"They are here." Berg said.

"Everybody! Get ready!" The Rave lord ordered as he unsheathed his sword.

"Druig, are you ready?" Erin asked as she turned towards her cameraman who quickly deployed his drones in the air.

About six drones were deployed hovering in the air waiting for when the battle would start meanwhile, the personal camera in Druig's hands was quickly turned on as Erin faced it, a mic in hand.

"We will be going live in, 3...2...1... we are live." Druig announced with a gulp and right on cue, in every corners of the world, Erin's face was being displayed.

Wherever you are, at home, in school, on the road, in the kitchen, as long as you have a screen with you, you were able to see Erin.

"Greetings to everyone. I'm coming live right from Aurora city. That's right, home and base of the Fang hunters' where they are about to experience an attack." Erin said and right on cue, the display switched to the thousands of men who stood bravely, weapons in hand and ready for whatever would come.

The usual online commenters quickly took to their keyboards to express their concerns.

"Wait! Did she just say an attack? Which guild or power would be stupid enough to attack the Fang hunters? And isn't three thousand, five hundred men an overkill?"

"What if this is not an attack from another guild or faction?"

"You...you mean an attack from them?"

"I think this is going to be an attack from the werewolves."

"But why these many men unless..."

"The Fang hunters are going to be cooked! Where the hell are the strongest core members and the werewolf slayer?!"

"This is bad."

While the commenters were pouring down their worries, the Fang hunters were ready, waiting for what was to come and in due time, they could finally see it.

An Aeroglide large enough to fit hundreds of thousands of men in it and it slowly descended causally as if it owned the land and the world.

"Ready?" Gray shouted to the men behind him as he quickly drew out his sword.

Slowly, the ramp was let down and a young teenage guy was seen with his slightly lean build, short green hair and smily face. Was Ulric Nightbane; the leader of the Delta pack.

His demeanor calm and collected as he stood a few feet away from the ramp. His hands behind his back as he stared out at the humans.

"I was supposed to make a grand speech but seeing this amount of you lots, I'm lost for words." Ulric said with a smile.

"How about you start with who the hell you are! Are you the Alpha werewolf?" Gray asked as he pointed his sword forward.

"Me? Hell no! I would never dream of receiving that title from the strongest of us. I'm just a regular member of the werewolf army. The leader of the Delta force." Ulric said with a calm smile.

"Then you are no use for us. Now we want you to take that shitty transport of yours and get the hell out of our planet." Andrew roared in anger.

"I know you." Ulric said as his gaze landed on Andrew. "Aren't you the son of one of our werewolves? Right! Blip's son. You know, it's a wonder how the hell you are not a werewolf which goes to show how useless you are and so, don't interfere."

"What do you all want? Where is your Alpha?" The Rave lord asked.

"The great Alpha is currently preparing your gifts so he can't see you all now. But in the meantime," Ulric said as he snapped his fingers and slowly, werewolves were beginning to descend from the glide.

They trickled out two at a time and in a few seconds, they were about a hundred thousand werewolves standing beside and in front of Ulric.

"Play with us for a while." Ulric smirked.

Chapter 460: Ultra cooked!

While the humans were about to go into the battle of their lives, the prominent core members of the Fang Hunters were out on the werewolves' planet with an aim of destroying the whole place so they wouldn't have a place to come back to.

While the others were out creating a big bang, Jade and Sophia managed to sneak into one of the werewolves' lab and while inside, Jade uncovered something which shook him to the core and made him go pale.

"What's going on?" Sophia asked as she looked at the panicked Jade who had sweat drenching his face and in a minute, his hand slid off the screen.

His skin suddenly turned pale as he turned towards Sophia, his steps faltered as he nearly fell down but he quickly caught himself.

"What's wrong? What did you find? And what is a dragon doing here?" Sophia asked again. "I thought dragons were extinct."

"Soph..." Jade softly called out, his eyes moist. "We are going to die."

"Die? What do you mean?!" Sophia asked in panic as she turned to face the sleeping dragon who was obviously still being sedated.

"The...the...crap! We all need to leave this planet as soon as possible otherwise we are all going to die." Jade said, his heart thumping loudly as he was unable to even swallow his saliva properly.

"Stop speaking in freaking riddles and come straight to the the point. What the hell is going on?!" Sophia snapped in anger.

"Re...re...remember when I said that there was a black aura energy that had the same strength and power as the Alpha werewolf?" Jade asked and then he began taking deep breaths.

"Yes?" Sophia said.

"This...this is the black aura I detected." Jade said as he pointed towards the sedated dragon.

"So? Why did you now go all pale?" Sophia asked with a raised eyebrow of confusion.

"That's because this isn't an ordinary dragon, it is an S tier beast." Jade said, his heart thumping continuously.

"Wa... wait! I don't think I heard you well. Do you mean this dragon, I mean this very one." Sophia said as she pointed straight at the sedated dragon.

"This is an S tier beast? Are we talking about the same S tier? The most strongest tier in existence. The same tier that even the world or big three might not be able to handle, the same S rank that is at the pinnacle of the beast's tier. Th..."

"Yes Sophia! Yes. The same S tier is what this beast's rank is." Jade said as he grabbed his head that felt like it was spinning.

"Shit! We are really going to die!" Sophia shouted.

"Re... relax." Jade said after taking more deep breaths. "I read that as long as this dragon is being sedated and the liquid isn't drained, it will remain unconscious."

"Really?" Sophia asked a sense of relief washing over her.

"Ye..." Jade trailed off as the door to the room swung wide open and two omega werewolves walked.

"I knnwes twat swomthing was off." One of the omega werewolves struggled to say.

"As if this day couldn't get any more worse." Sophia said as she quickly took out her rapier sword. "Come at me!"

"Gwadly!" The werewolves shouted at once as they bolted towards Sophia who took a stance in front of Jade.

One of the werewolves swung its claws forward while Sophia pivoted sideways avoiding it and then swung her sword to deflect another claw strike.

Leaping back, she avoided a kick to her rib before she bolted forward and clashed with another werewolf sending a small shockwave in the room.

"Be careful! Don't wake the f*cking dragon up!" Jade shouted in panic.

"If you can't help," Sophia grunted as she ducked quickly avoiding a swing to her head and then hammering her sword into the side of the werewolf sending it skidding before leaping to the side and then sending a roundhouse kick flying into the second werewolf sending it tumbling.

"Don't complain and disturb me." Sophia said as she wiped her brows from sweat before swirling her Qi to her feet and dashing forward to meet with a werewolf which was just standing up before her sword slammed into its head sending it crashing back into the ground.

"You forgot one here!" Jade screamed as the second werewolf dashed towards him but instead of running, he tapped his mechanical hand a couple times and then the palm glowed a bright light.

Boom!

Jade sent a blast hitting the werewolf in the chest and sending it skidding a few inches.

"Crap! Thought that will send it flying." Jade muttered as he saw Sophia dealing with the other werewolf.

"Since you are still alive, means you can handle the werewolf. I will be with you shortly!" Sophia said as she quickly moved to the side just in time as the werewolf's claws skimmed past her face drawing blood.

"I might die!" Jade shouted as the werewolf bolted towards him, grabbing him by his shirt and flinging him down so hard that the ground trembled.

"Kuh!" Jade coughed out blood as he felt his head spinning in pain. "Damn! I think something broke in me. I hope it's not my little soldier though."

Before Jade could think of doing anything, the werewolf lifted its foot and sent it flying towards his head.

"Give me a break damn it!" Jade said as he swiftly rolled over in time to avoid the foot before shooting a blast from his palm towards the werewolf that sent it skidding away from him.

Springing up to his feet, he tapped his mechanical hand a few times causing a blade made from energy to appear in his hands as he bolted forward.

Swinging it forward, it sliced through the air cleanly but the werewolf had easily avoided it before hammering its foot into him causing a loud crunching crack to fill the room.

"Shit!" Jade cursed as he fell on one knee in pain.

"Kick it hard towards me!" Sophia's voice rang out and Jade didn't waste any time in executing the order.

A robotic boot immediately appeared around his legs which he swung forward into the werewolf's legs before it could even move towards him. The kick was enough to send it flying towards Sophia who took a stance.

One foot in front of the other, Qi coursing through her hands. With a loud snapping bang, she sent her fist flying forward causing it to crash into the werewolf and hurling it across the room with blood spurting out of its mouth.

The body smashed into the ground hard, it broke beneath its weight but it was still alive as it slowly stirred up but...

"Goodbye." Sophia said as she snapped her fingers and a huge Qi sword went flying forward and crashing into its chest and coming out the other end.

A wide grin appeared on the werewolf's face as its life slowly diminished from it but with the last of its strength, it moved its hands and slammed it into a wall that had a big, red button on it.

And then it fell down with a thud.

Beep, beep, beep!

A loud blaring alarm rang out in the room and the sound of water draining was heard in the room, then cracks that rippled in the room.

Hearing these sounds, Jade slowly rose up as Sophia walked towards him with worry etched on her face as they turned towards the cause of the sound.

The giant tube that contained the dragon was being drained of the green liquid in it and in a few seconds, the dragon's eyes snapped wide open and without wasting time, it tried to stand up.

Cracks spider webbed around the giant glass and then...

Shatter!

The glass shattered sending fragments of glass flying around that Sophia had to dive forward to protect Jade from the splinters.

"ROARRR!"

A loud, ear piercing roar rang out in the room as the dragon opened its huge wings and flapped up breaking through the roof of the room and then, zooming away.

"Remember when you said this day couldn't get any worse?" Jade asked as he gulped loudly while looking at the giant hole in the roof.

"Well, it has just gotten much worse and in the process, we might just die."

"We are all ultra cooked." Sophia said as she fell to her knees looking up at the giant hole in the roof.
