

Supremacy 51

Chapter 51: Moving Stardust Movie

"So you are telling me you can't read the common language, even though you were exposed to it for over 6 months?!" Felix rubbed his eyelids at this sick joke he was hearing. After all, if they couldn't even read the language how were they supposed to watch the movie?

Embarrassed, Olivia scratched her cheek with a finger, while looking at her toes. "We were busy with the family tradition revival projects and all the fun things that were happening in the UVR." She coughed, as she looked at her sisters, "So we really did not put too much focus on learning the language, because all the TV streams were subtitled or dubbed."

Sarah extended her finger and added to support Oli, "Also, we did not think we would be able to enter the UVR this early. We believed there is still at least 2 years before we get our hands on an AP bracelet."

The other cousins just kept nodding their heads to whatever they said.

Felix gave them a bitter smile and explained why he was upset, "How are you supposed to watch the movie if you can't even understand what they are saying?" He sighed, "I can add dubbing but that will reduce the immersion inside the movie. You may not understand now, but the moment you enter, you will realize the huge difference between listening to the actor's real voices and hearing AI toneless voice."

"UVR Cinema is in a different league than our Cinema." He spread his hands, "There is just no way to compare them."

The girls weren't even a bit sad from what he just said. They honestly didn't care if the immersion was lowered or even removed since this was their only opportunity to enter the UVR and have fun in it before they get theirs in the far future.

"Don't worry! I promise you that I won't complain about movie quality. I am content with just the dubbed version."

"Me as well."

"I never expected to enter the UVR today."

"Let's just pick a random romance movie! I want to see how other humans' romantic culture is."

"What are you talking about?! We did not get this chance to waste it on a lackluster romance movie." The tall ginger girl highlighted two movies on the list and said, "It is much better if it was an action or fantasy movie, like those. So when we enter the movie, we will feel like we are inside a magical world."

"Yes she is right, I want to watch a fantasy movie, I am sick of romance and drama."

"I believe Sci-Fi is going to be amazing here, why don't we watch that?"

"No fan..."

"You always pi..."

Felix just watched them argue about the genre of the movie for over 5 minutes to no positive outcome. Each two wanted to watch a genre and neither one of them budged from her choice.

Felix sighed and sat back on the couch, planning to continue reading the list. He didn't interject or gave them advice on which movie to watch since if it was up to him, he would definitely recommend a historical movie about the human race.

Ask anyone in the cinema about the best genre, and their first choice would be history. Their choice was quite understandable, as there were tons of good movies and series that were based on real-life events. The majority of those movies either earned trophies and awards or were nominated for them.

The history of the human race was a mine full of gems to be dug by the producers.

'How good would it be if >Human Uprising< was already made?' He sighed, "I would have dragged those girls by their hairs to watch it. Sadly it will be released 1 year from now."

Suddenly an idea inserted itself in his mind, turning it into mush, 'What If I invest in those upcoming blockbuster movies that earned billions of SC?'

He then started to ponder on it deeply with a hint of elation in his eyes. He already had the information and details. The only thing he lacked was the capital to invest. But that wouldn't be too hard to get if he made his second bet.

This was even better for Felix, as the viral games, he remembered that happened in this year was only Wally's and the next one. But for others, he had absolutely no clue.

Felix didn't have that much free time to spectate the games in his previous life, due to his early trashy bloodlines which forced him to focus only on integration to not get left behind. He only remembered Wally's game and this one was due to their unique characteristics.

This meant Felix had no choice but to find another method to earn coins, and investing in successful movies and series was actually the smartest move to make in his condition. It had only positive results.

Besides earning a massive amount of coins, the process itself was clean and had a known origin. Felix knew that someday, his grandfather and the elders would find out that he was a multimillionaire in the UVR. At that point, his excuse for betting couldn't be used against those shrewd fogies. However, if he had an investment company, responsible for investing in his cheating knowledge, they would have nothing to say but beg for him to share a piece of the pie.

Just as he was trying to recall the movies and series which were about to release soon, he felt someone waving his hand near his face.

"Whats up Oli?" He asked.

"Felix we came to a decision." She smiled and handed him the list that had a movie marked with a green light. "We picked the Sci-Fi movie Moving Stardust. It has romance, drama, action and comedy, everything that we wanted."

Felix cringed the moment he heard the movie name. He removed that disgusting list from his face and asked them with a serious expression. "Are you sure about your choice? You can pick another I don't mind waiting."

All the ladies shook their heads in disagreement. "This is what we want, all other movies either lack something or has too much of it."

"Are you 100% positive? I really advise you to reconsider." Felix decided to push one more time if they still declined his goodwill, then he wouldn't bother himself anymore. After all, it was their funeral, not his.

The ladies shared eye contact with doubt clearly on their faces. Nonetheless, they still stood their grounds and decided to go for it. In their minds, they simply wanted to begin asap, since there was a time limit to their stay in the UVR. It wouldn't feel good to get dragged in the middle of the movie, due to wasting time on picking the perfect one.

"Alright as you wish." Felix gave a half shrug and said, "Wait for me here I am going to buy us the tickets."

He stood up and went to one of the tickets booths that had the least number of people queueing up.

Before long his turn arrived and immediately requested, "11 tickets for Moving Stardust please."

The counter employee's polite smile stiffened, at that name getting mentioned in his presence. He moved closer to Felix and advised sincerely, "Brother, I think it is better to pick another one, so you won't pollute yourself and those flowers with you."

Frustrated, Felix shook his head and replied, "It is not my choice, it's theirs." He semi-spread his arms, "I advised them not to pick it. But they were really stubborn about it. So I can only play along."

The employee said nothing more and just handed him the tickets. He sighed in pity as he looked at those girls chatting about the content of the movie with expectation. 'You should have at least watched the trailer. Rest in Peace.'

His attention was brought back to Felix, as he heard him say, "Please add one blocking glasses and ear closing buds."

He gave him the protection gear and wished him good luck on his battle.

Felix returned to his cousins, and gave them each a ticket, then informed them, "The movie won't start until 15 minutes. You are free to do as you please."

He wore those buds on his ears and activated them. He then lay on the couch and closed his eyes, planning to take a quick nap over the duration. In his mind, the silence was a hundred times better than their nonsense chatter.

...

15 minutes...

Felix and the ladies stood all by themselves in front of a desolate-looking gate written above it, -Moving Stardust entrance-

When compared to other gates that had hundreds to thousands of people lining up to enter, theirs was truly a bit sad to look at.

"The moment we open this door we will enter the movie world." He faced them with black glasses on and clarified, "At that point, you can interact with everything you see. heck, you can even kiss the female lead or the male lead. But I advise you to not pull that bullshit in any Cinema you visit if you don't want to get beat up."

He pulled a small remote control from his pocket and put it in their line of sight. "This is a control device that you can use to either zoom in, create a seat, fly, and all the other things you wish to do inside."

He put it back in his pocket and explained that to get this device, they just had to call in their minds 'Remote Control' and it shall materialize. The ladies did as he said, and suddenly each of them had a remote control in their hands.

Felix retreated from the gate and extended his hand in a welcoming matter. "Who wants to do the honor and push the door?"

His polite action got him labeled as a gentleman by his cousins. But honestly, he just didn't want anything to do with this movie, as he felt that even stepping into its world was a great sacrifice.

Sarah pushed it open without waiting for her sisters to make a decision. She had no patience for another round of bickering. The moment the gate was wide open, they all got sucked in without leaving a single yelp behind.

Immediately after their feet touched the ground of the movie world, a sudden beam of light projected on them, scaring those beauties out of their wits. Felix hushed them down and clarified that it was just a trying to scan their tickets.

After seeing that his cousins were not paying attention to him anymore, Felix sneaked behind their backs and ordered the AI of the remote control, 'Create a seat at the corner of the world and activate the glasses and earbuds canceling feature. Finally, make an alarm when the movie ends.'

Felix instantly teleported away from his cousins, who were staring and touching everything in awe and fascination. Especially Sarah who was playing on the grass like she never saw it before in her life. Her love for the UVR might even turn shit into gold in her eyes.

Unfortunately for them, this world was their worst nightmare. They only realized so after the plot of the movie began.

...

30 minutes later...

At the extreme left corner of the movie world, Felix sat on a comfy chair with a cup of his favorite orange juice. He forgot about his cousins, as his mind was currently busy contemplating his investment plan.

He recognized that his massive library of movies and series was game-changing in the film industry. He knew which movies would make a splash in the UVR and which movies would turn to be a flop. However, the majority of those successful movies already had a giant production company behind their backs. This meant, they would not let any foreign investor get a piece of their pie, especially Felix who had absolutely no reputation within the industry.

This left him with only a few movies that were not being favored at the start but turned into instant success later. In other words, hidden gems.

He could totally shower them with his coins, and expect massive returns later on. This method would bring him coins, networks, and some reputation as an investor, without the stress of wondering if the movie would turn into a hit or a flop.

After creating an outline for his plan, he decided to check on his cousin's mental health. 'Teleport me to my companions, and remove the canceling feature.'

Few moments later, he arrived next to his cousins who were curled up like balls with tight shut eyes and hands covering their ears. They kept crying out loud to make it stop. Yet, no savior had arrived at their rescue. Until now at least.

"I can't take this anymore."

"It's one thing to watch a cringy movie and another thing to live it."

"Please someone turn off the dubbing, I don't want to understand anymore!"

Felix expected as much, however as soon as his eyes landed on Sarah who was cheering with her fists in the air, he didn't know how to react anymore.

His vision kept switching between her and the main character who was a princess carrying two girls with one arm while fighting 10 bandits with another. Yet, Felix wasn't even bothered by this fucked up scenario, as he saw as much before. What annoyed him to death was the constant love dialogue between the three, like the MC wasn't in a death or life situation.

If just a scene of the movie was like this, god knows how the rest was like.

He kept going back and forth between them with a perplexed expression. He truly couldn't believe that Sara was actually capable of watching this unique masterpiece with enjoyment.

Heck, even the makers couldn't handle their creation and tried to burn its existence for their viewers' mental health. But somehow it got leaked out right before so, leaving this deadly predator roaming free in the UVR Cinemas.

'Now you are telling me that my own cousin is loving this? I don't know if she just doesn't have a taste in movies, or her overwhelming curiosity towards the UVR is blocking all the negative stuff from her vision.'

'Whatever it is, I will never hang out with her anymore.' He covered his eyes, not wanting to see any more of this absurdity, and ordered the AI to kick everyone out except for Sarah. He hoped that the ending would wake her up.

A few seconds later, Felix and his cousins were thrown outside of the gate.

Chapter 52:Elemental Stone Absorption

Irritated and somewhat amused, Felix chuckled at the sight of his cousins lying on the floor with a deadpan expression. He clapped his hands twice to bring their attention to him. Yet, the only thing that moved was their grey dead eyes, as they stared at him with a hint of blame and despire.

Felix didn't take their looks seriously and just dragged them by their legs or hands in the direction of the lounge, since they were lying on the pathway, blocking others from accessing the gates. He kept going back and forth and each time he dragged two with him.

The spectators neither laughed nor mocked them, as they understood that the girls' reaction was thoroughly justifiable after knowing the name of the movie they came out from.

They only nodded their head to pay respect for Felix's willing sacrifice and gave a look of condolence towards the fallen ladies.

....

In the resting lounge, Felix was talking to Olivia who recovered the quickest from the mental blow.

"How did you find the worst movie in the history of mankind?" He asked with a chuckle.

"You know I don't like saying bad stuff on other people's works." She frowned her eyebrows and said sternly, "No matter how horrible their creation is, in my eyes, they still put a lot of effort into making it. So don't expect me to answer you, since my only response will always be, not bad."

"As expected from your bubbly personality." He smiled gently and patted her head, "No wonder you were born with a plant element. One of the kindest and supportive elements in the universe."

Olivia pouted and slapped his hand away from her head since he started to treat her like a child again. "Stop complimenting me, I won't take your side no matter what."

She crossed her arms and humphed, "After all, you knowingly sent them off to get brain-damaged, when you could have informed them about the movie details."

"How is this my fault? I clearly told them to pick another one, but they refused." He added out loud so the girls would hear him as well, "Moreover, Sarah said she didn't care about the quality of the movie, and all of you agreed with her before." He smiled innocently, "So I simply respected your choice."

Olivia who was never good at arguing could only accept his excuse with a nod, while cursing him in her mind. 'Shameless Felix, you can just say you wanted to prank us like always.'

After seeing that she gave up on bickering, he changed the subject by informing his cousins to recover their mentality for the next hour until Sarah exit the movie.

"Uhm."

Absent-minded, they gave an inaudible tone as a response, while focusing on deleting any memory of that filth from their minds.

...

One hour later...

Sarah got kicked out of the movie as well. But, compared to others who felt their soul got devoured inside; she just skipped towards them with a happy expression.

"That movie was too good. How I wish I had prince charming saving me like that in real life." Her eyes sparkled with worship, as she folded her hands like a fangirl.

The people around her who had an auto-translation program activated in their Bracelet understood her, but couldn't process what she just said properly.

Their bodies froze, as they kept checking the gate she came out off, trying their best to believe that it was just a fantasy. However, Sarah's scolding voice made them realize that she was not joking at all.

"Why did you guys leave the movie? Felix paid for the tickets, and it is really not polite to waste his money like this."

The moment she finished speaking, the entire area descended into a deafening silence. Felix did not wait for others to break out of their daze, as he sneaked away from the area, to not associate himself with Sarah. He wanted nothing to do with the upcoming public humiliation.

"Miss I believe the one who paid won't mind trading those few coins over the safety of your friend's mental health."

"Indeed, no one is abnormal as you miss, to like that abomination."

"Stop trying to harm your friends, it is not cool."

"Leave! We don't want your kind near our children!"

The entire crowd instantly turned against her after knowing that she was part of that creepy fandom who loved to recommend those types of movies to naive people.

Yet, Sarah just looked at them with a finger pressed on her lips and titled head. Her confused expression clearly showcased that she had zero clue what the hell they were saying.

A bonus of not learning the common language.

Felix did not wait for things to get ugly and ordered in his mind for the Queen to log them out.

.....

Felix was the first to wake up. Meanwhile, the ladies still had their eyes closed shut.

Without delaying for even a second, He bolted outside of the room, barefoot and still in his pajamas. He knew that escape was a must if he wanted to avoid the upcoming headache of dealing with his cousins after this failed outing.

...

Inside the Cafeteria...

Felix was eating his lunch while thinking of the movies he was planning to invest in.

One of them was the upcoming >Human Melodies your purchase has been successful. In 5 minutes a servant shall deliver the item to your room.<

After reading it, he turned off his laptop and put it to the side. He stood up and went to the toilet to take care of his bowls.

...

5 minutes later, a light knock resounded in the room.

Felix bolted towards the door, opened it, took the box from the servant who was about to say something, and closed the door on his face while yelling his thanks.

The servant could only scratch his cheek at this sight and leave. More deliveries were waiting for him anyway.

Meanwhile, Felix sat on his bed while holding a small black box. He crossed his fingers and opened it up gently. A grin crept on his lips as he took a small green pebble that had the size of a peanut outside of the box.

Without further ado, he requested Asna to try and absorb the poisonous energy of the stone.

Asna replied with a gloomy humph but still did as he asked and started absorbing the energy while yawning with a hand covering her mouth.

The process didn't even take a part of a second before the stone shattered into small pieces.

Delighted and elated, Felix's eyes couldn't help but brighten up at this sight. "How is it, did you succeed? And if you did why don't I feel anything different? Did you absorb all the energy leaving nothing to me or what?"

Asna got annoyed by his barrage of inquiries and replied with a disdainful sneer. "Stop asking stupid questions, you moron. Do you honestly think that I Asna origin of laws can't even absorb this trashy energy?" She raised her voice, "And how dare you insult me by providing me with this pathetic amount and saying that I took it all. It was not enough to even fill a single body pore!"

Felix laughed sheepishly as he realized that he acted a little bit too excited since he also knew that the energy content of a low-grade stone was quite a trash to even humans, don't even mention Asna.

"Alright, this was merely to test if we could absorb energy without a beast bloodline, and not enhance my poison affinity." He smiled and dusted his hands from the small pieces of the stone.

"Oh now that you mentioned poison affinity, I have some bad news to deliver." She covered her mouth to hide that wicked smile behind and explained, "My previous estimate on the period needed for enhancement to reach a 100% Affinity Rating was quite off by a mile since I used my own race elemental trashy resources to calculate, not your human race elemental stones."

Felix's heart sank to the depth of the abyss, as he knew that whatever was about to come was not going to please him at all.

"Now that I absorbed this shitty stone, I can claim with certainty that to reach 100% rating from 59% it will take 10 years of absorbing this low-grade energy."

"Congratulation sweetie over this great news." Asna never knew that revenge could be served so fast.

Felix's eyes almost rolled back in his head as he leaned on the wall for support.

'This can't be happening. Ten years to just finish 41%? Then how long it will take to finish other promised elements that I don't even possess?!'

Asna rubbed more salt on his wounds mercilessly, "30 years or more."

Felix clutched his heart in pain as he realized he would need to only use high-quality elemental stones and treasures. Things that were either too expensive or simply couldn't be bought by his trashy reputation.

"My beautiful future has just got bleaker."

He cried out in despair with his knees on the ground while staring at the ceiling of his room. He truly began to regret even doing this experiment.

They were not lying when they said that ignorance was a blessing.

Chapter 53: Shapeshifter Penis

The bottomless pit of his bloodline path was getting deeper and deeper, and if he didn't keep up with it, he would be buried sooner or later.

Frustrated, Felix massaged his temples over this sudden headache that threw all his plans down the drain. He assumed before, that if bought those low-grade stones with merit points, he could save up his coins as well as enhance his rating until it reached the peak, in about 6 months or so.

But now everything went to smoke, as he needed a large number of coins if he wanted to obtain higher grade stones.

Although he had solid channels to buy at least medium and high-grade stones, they would still cost him a leg to obtain them in large numbers, since there was always a high demand for them. Especially uncommon elements such as poison.

Now that he prepared a bloodline for his awakening, he shouldn't be bothered about it for a while. But elemental stones were a must-have resource for everyone due to its versatile effects and benefits it provided.

Such as, recovering lost energy after releasing abilities. Not to mention its uses as a basic material for creating most substances and potions.

Of course, those potions and substances only utilized high-grade stones or above, as for mid and below those were used only by low leveled bloodliners.

This meant, that the demand for those stones could never outweigh the supply, and for Felix to secure a stable channel of getting them at first hand, he needed authority and massive capital to support it.

The only way to obtain at least one of those was for the investment plan to be carried out no matter what, and also put substantial emphasis on it. Otherwise, he would always keep slaving himself to secure coins for stones, and this was going to definitely delay his bloodline path immensely.

A few minutes later, Felix stopped moping over the matter and went to pour himself a glass of water from the kitchen. After drinking the glass of water, he sprinkled some drops on his face and slapped his cheeks lightly.

"Come on Felix, this is but a minor setback. Don't let it and that witch affect your mentality." Refreshed, he wiped his face and asked Asna, "If I brought you middle and high-grade stones, will you be able to calculate the duration needed to reach 100% rating?"

"No matter what stone or treasure you bring, as long as they have elements, I can calculate everything about them, whether the duration or the amount needed." She smiled smugly.

"Alright let's get it over with now. I don't want any more surprises emerging." he lay on the bed and closed his eyes.

'Queen Log me in please.'

...

16 minutes later, inside a small-sized shop called Fuzzia Stones.

Felix sat on a chair, holding a mug of coffee with one hand while talking to a handsome man with a pupilless whitish third eye in the middle of his forehead.

"Sir Felix it's not that I don't want to sell you, it's just that the amount you are asking for is way too low." The young man shook his head and explained, "Our shop does not make those kinds of deals. We only sell 100 medium stones or above, nothing less."

"Come on, I just want to take one medium and high stones home to sample them. If I liked your products, you can expect me to be a loyal customer." With a straight face, Felix asked shamelessly for 2 stones like a beggar.

Speechless at Felix's repeated request, the young man facepalmed. "Sir, we are not selling wedding cakes here for you to sample. We sell stones that are made naturally under extreme conditions." He joked, "So how the hell are you going to sample them when everyone is selling the same type of stones?"

Undiscouraged by his 3rd refusal, Felix got up from his seat and put his arm around the young man's shoulder. He leaned closer and whispered in his ears, "Come on brother Jadie, if you did me this favor, I will tell you where to find the shapeshifter penis." He smiled, "I know someone who is selling it currently. But I don't guarantee it will remain there forever, so you need to rush."

Too bad, his attempt to entice Jadie backfired, as his hand that was on Jadie's shoulder was twisted in a different direction.

'Crack!'

The sound of bones snapping resonated in the small shop. Before Felix could even yelp at the sudden agony, he got lifted by his collar like a sandbag.

"How the hell do you know that I have problems down there?" Jadie tightened his grip on Felix's collar and threatened, "No one knows this information. So you better speak little bastard before I torture you in my basement."

Although Felix's legs and broken arm dangled in the air, his expression on the other hand was indifferent as ever. He simply eyed the livid Jadie and bullshited his way through like always, "I didn't know that you had problems down there. I only told you this piece of information, since you are a man, and I know that no matter if a man is healthy or sick, they will desire the shapeshifter penis."

A bit embarrassed, Jadie changed back to his polite businessman's expression, as he put Felix down and fixed his wrinkled collar for him.

After he returned Felix to his original state, he rubbed his hands together and coughed, "Brother Felix don't mind me just now, as I always get infected emotionally whenever something related to my manhood is mentioned."

"No need to say more brother Jadie. The less I know about your personal life, the better our business relationship will be."

Felix returned to his seat and asked the Queen to heal his arm. It might cost him a quite sum, but it was worth it in his eyes. After all, the information he relied on to entice Jadie was going to get him not just his request but an extra worthwhile trade. That was his real target.

He understood clearly, that Jadie was desperate to treat his erectile dysfunction by any means possible, and the shapeshifter penis Felix saw before in Looby's shop was one of the best-known ways to bypass the condition entirely.

He would be a fool to not take advantage of Jadie's scandal in his previous life to his advantage.

"Now what I want to know is." He took a sip from his coffee mug and smiled, "What are you willing to trade for this piece of information?"

"I can accept your request while also adding a 10% discount to 1000 medium and high stones you buy from my shop."

Jadie didn't waste even a second before giving him the best offer possible to Felix. He could have negotiated for better, but he was in a rush to get the information from Felix.

Simply because he spent decades trying to locate a potion, substance, medicine, or anything to treat his condition, but to no avail. He was left with only making a plea for the shops to contact him the moment one of those items appeared in their stock.

"I hope you are satisfied with my price."

Satisfied and content, Felix nodded with a smile. "It is enough brother Jadie, and no need for a contract between this friendship deal. I will gladly make the first move and tell you that what you seek is at Looby Bloodline Shop." He gave a half shrug and added, "I have no idea how that bastard obtained it. But, I saw it there the last time I went to buy something."

Joyful, Jadie laughed and extended his hand for a handshake. "You truly deserve my friendship with your quick thinking. Since we are not doing contract let's shake hands on it like gentlemen."

"Just what I prefer brother Jadie." Felix shook his hand with a chuckle as well.

Jadie transferred the serial number of the stones to Felix without hesitation and offered, "I can take care of the shipping as well if you want."

"No need I want to use the wormhole express." He explained, "But before doing so I want to add as many items as possible, so I can deliver them all at the same time to lower the costs."

"Good thinking brother Felix." He curled his lips in disgust and said, "It is always better to ship as much as possible using those blood-sucking worms express."

"Indeed."

Felix put the mug on the table and stood up, planning to leave. He had no reason to remain anymore and delay Jadie from running his errand. He clearly saw a hint of rush in Jadie's eyes, but he didn't say anything to not appear disrespectful. So Felix decided not to extend his welcome and bounce.

Every favorable action could earn him extra brownies with Jadie. He knew that this man was one of the few individuals he had to hug their thighs if he wanted a stable platform to get his stones from.

"Alright, I will see myself out." He bowed his head slightly and said, "Goodbye brother Jadie until we meet again."

"Goodbye, and my shop will always be open to you." Jadie said out loud while waving his hand towards Felix's retreating back.

The moment Felix closed the door, Jadie's eyebrows instantly frowned as he tapped on his bracelet, trying to call on Looby.

A few seconds later, Looby's voice resounded in the shop. "To what do I owe the pleasure?"

Livid at hearing his nonchalant tone, Jadie smashed the table into two, like it was made out of moldy wood.

"Didn't I tell you to inform me the moment you obtain the shapeshifter Penis?" He roared out loud, almost causing internal bleeding in Looby's ears. "So why the hell am I hearing about it from a stranger?!" He lowered his volume and threatened, "Explain yourself or you can forget about me recommending your shop to my VIP clients anymore."

"Sir. Jadie, it's not that I forgot to tell you, but that another VIP told me to reserve it for him." His voice cracked from fear of losing his VIP clients. "He offered triple its price. So I can only sell it to him to not offend him."

"I don't give a shit if he paid triple, I can pay quadruple, and if you are still indecisive, you can create a small auction between us to bid for it fair and square." He comforted, "I doubt that VIP will take it on you for it."

"Alright, that works for me just fine!"

Looby replied eagerly over the large pie that just fell in his lap. He knew that by informing Jadie himself, he could have got the same result. However, he still didn't, as he had signed a contract with that VIP forbidding him from mentioning any details about the shapeshifter penis to anyone.

But now that Jadie found out about it from another source unrelated to him, he was more than glad. Heck, he wished he knew the name of that stranger to give him a good kiss on the cheek.

"Good, now make it happened ASAP! And call me when you are done." He threatened him openly, "I tolerate no games or tricks. So you better not bullshit me with that VIP. Otherwise, you would not like the outcome."

Looby did not dare to make a fart after hearing his threat, since he understood that Jadie had ways to find his real address. "You got it, sir. Three days from now you will hear from me about the date of the auction."

Jadie immediately hanged up after getting the confirmation he wanted.

Afterward, he stared at the shop entrance in deep thought, 'Did he really not know about my secret, or he found out about it somehow and lied?'

"Whatever it is, this problem of mine will be fixed once and for all. At that point, it won't matter if he lied or not since there will be no issue in the first place."

He glanced at his crotch that was lying dormant and unexpectedly put his hands inside his pants.

"Soon the dragon shall awaken with multiple shapes and forms." He grinned, "Beware ladies for I am about to come!"

Jadie already began counting his eggs before the chicken even laid them. Hopefully, his dream wouldn't get shattered by the other VIP.

After all, he might be just as desperate as him.

Chapter 54:Awakening Mock Practice

In the family headquarter, at the gym...

Felix was currently running on the treadmill, wearing tight sportswear and air pods on his ears. His breath was steady and had only a few sweats drops on his forehead.

Running next to him was Olivia who had the same outfit on. The only difference was that her struggle to finish the run was clearly shown through her heavy breaths.

Although a month already passed by, she still wasn't used to running 5km each day, plus doing other exercises at once.

A few minutes later, Felix got off the treadmill and started to stretch on the ground, preparing to do 100 pushups, 100 squats, 100 sit-ups.

He felt that 50 for each exercise was just a waste of time for him, as it was not actually helping his body fitness improve at all. So, he doubled the amount on day three since the camp started to this point in time.

"Felix, how do you feel about the pain tolerance that's going to start tomorrow?" Olivia stopped the treadmill and sat down next to Felix.

Confused, Felix removed the air pods and asked, "Did you say something Oli?"

Olivia repeated what she said and added with a hint of fear in her eyes, "Also do you think they will shock us with electricity to build our tolerance or just beat us with sticks as I saw in videos?"

"What's going on that mind of yours to think like that?" He facepalmed and explained, "Did you forget about the UVR? They can simply use the party feature and take all of us inside. Then buy the awakening package from the Queen AI."

"What does it do? Are we going to practice awakening?"

"Exactly like you said, but with more depth."

He pointed at his back and Olivia understood what he meant. She laid her hands on it and began to push him down the floor, helping him stretch. After a couple of pushes, he thanked her and continued his explanation.

"To awaken in real life there are only two paths. One, succeed and emerge as an awakened, or die in your own agony while slowly watching your flesh dissolve. However in the case of awakening in the UVR, the pain degree can be controlled, and the process can be canceled whenever things start to get ugly."

"So this is how it is going to be?! Just like a mock exam." She crinkled her eyes and nose and said, "Now my cousins who can't even handle the pain from the practice won't dare to awaken for real, right Felix?"

Her happiness was understandable, as before 70% of her cousins were destined to die based on what Felix said, but now with this mock practice, she believed that no one would continue on treading this path, knowingly that awakening was impossible.

After all, it was only common sense to not risk awakening for real, when the mock practice wasn't passed successfully.

However, Felix sneered at her naive thoughts, "Stop fooling yourself Oli, at this point, no one is going to back out no matter what happened. They will always think that they are the chosen ones destined to awaken. So they will go for it either officially or hidden, even if they couldn't handle 1% pain from the practice."

"Can't I just inform them that to have better chances, they will need more pain relief bottles?" She murmured with her shoulder sloshed.

Felix replied calmly while doing his pushups, "Be my guest, just don't get your hopes up, since whether you informed them or not, the maximum bottles they can have is still two. That's only if they were lucky and bought them at the start."

"So nothing can be done then? I really don't want to see my sisters die." She chewed on her lips and stared at him with watery eyes.

Annoyed by her whining, He stopped doing his pushups and point a finger at her head, "Focus on yourself first. I doubt you will be able to awaken with even 20% duration." He scolded her, "So before putting death flags on others, remove the one on your head first."

Olivia immediately held her tongue after realizing that Felix was right. Just because she only had a 20% duration, it didn't mean that the pain degree would be lowered. This meant that she was still standing on a thin line, as her pain tolerance was absolutely horrible. So, she stopped worrying about her sisters and focused on finishing the rest of the exercises.

...

Tomorrow morning at 09:00 AM...

Juniors and the upper echelon of the family all gathered on the 35th floor.

"Children you did well the past month. Some excelled at the training, while some performed subpar. But what's important is that all of you took the training seriously and worked hard. So you deserve a round of applause from us elders and your parents."

'Clap' Clap'

Applause rained down on the embarrassed juniors immediately after Robert finished saying his piece. The juniors could only scratch their cheeks or avoid looking at their parents' proud expression. They honestly felt like the applause was a tad over the top, as the majority of them actually straight-up didn't finish 50% of the exercises each day. In their eyes, the applause was exactly like being cheered on for obtaining a participation reward.

Regardless, most of them still had a hint of pleasure at this shower of approval, as the moment Felix went to that island and revived his project, they were getting nothing but punishments and disappointed looks. So, participation reward or not, they would gladly take it with open arms.

They were that desperate for a win.

"Abraham, why don't you take it from here?"

After the applause died down, Robert passed the hot potato of informing them of the next hellish training to Abraham, while sneaking behind the Elders with a tired expression.

Abraham who was minding his own business peacefully turned speechless after seeing Robert's shameless action. 'Fucking hell, we should have realized that drawing straws to be the informer was a bad decision when this old fart was playing with us.'

Irrked, Abraham stood up with black lines on his forehead and trod towards the podium to cover for Robert.

'Reining the drawing straw agreement is really a classic move from Brother Robert. I expected nothing less from such a business genius.' Albert mused at Robert who was being served coffee with a polite smile.

"You have successfully passed the first fitness training task. But this was just the easiest one of all the upcoming tasks, so don't get too full of yourself, and keep working diligently."

He coughed and said at a faster pace. "Now that's out of the way. It's time to start the next task, which is the awakening mock practice, or in other words, the pain tolerance training."

"To not waste time we will start right away." He nodded his head at the elders to make a move first. The elders tapped on their bracelet, showing that sentence Felix showed to his cousins before, and stood in front of the four lines that were made by the juniors.

"This task will be carried out inside the UVR, and before you get excited, you should know that you are merely entering the white personal room of the user, not the UVR world itself. So don't get your hopes up."

The light that shone in the eyes of the juniors was extinguished as fast as it appeared. Uncaring about their disappointment, Abraham began explaining how the party feature of the AP bracelet worked. His explanation was almost exactly as Felix's, quick and straight to the point. The juniors began doing exactly as he said, by memorizing the sentence and lying on the ground after.

"Begin the process."

As soon as they heard Abraham's thunderous declaration, the elders started touching the juniors' foreheads.

A couple of minutes later, the last junior closed his eyes and stopped moving just like the rest.

....

Inside the white room of Elder Charlotte, Felix leaned on the wall and yawned in utter boredom at Charlotte's detailed illustration of how the awakening mock practice was going to be. It turned out, that Abraham didn't explain the process, as he planned for the elders to do so inside their rooms.

"Alright, I think everyone has some idea of how the integration process is going to be now." She clapped her hands to wake up Felix who was dozing off and asked, "Who wants to go first for a quick demonstration?"

However, the juniors acted deaf at her question, as each of them avoided eye contact with her. Felix chuckled softly at this sight, as it reminded him of the time he was acting in the classroom after the teacher asked a question.

Meanwhile, Charlotte didn't find this sight funny at all, since the last thing she wanted was cowards on the group she was responsible over for the next month.

"Kids, the pain is going to be set at 5% of the real thing. So if you don't have the guts to practice the awakening. Do us all a favor and just back off from now to save us resources and time, okay?"

Her taunt bore fruits, as the juniors who were all hesitant to be the first to go, all started raising their hands and voices to be picked after being looked down upon like this.

Pleased, Charlotte pointed at one randomly and informed him, "Prepare your mentality and relax your body. The moment I push the injection needle that is filled with 1% beast's bloodline in your heart, the process will begin."

The junior couldn't help but sweat buckets from his body pores, as his eyes landed on that long needle that was about to penetrate his heart. He wiped his sweaty palms with his sleeves and calmed his heartbeats a bit.

Regardless of his fear, he understood clearly that he couldn't back down from this demonstration. After all, if he was terrified of even a needle, there was no need to bother continuing treading on this path, since those needles were going to be needed in each integration! So, he could only gulp a mouthful and nod at Charlotte to begin the process.

Without further ado, Charlotte pushed the long needle deep in his heart and injected all of its content directly inside.

The junior felt a momentary pain from the penetration, almost causing him to yelp out loud. But that was it. The bloodline that was injected in his heart did nothing but spread apart and travel through his bloodstream, reaching every nook and cranny of the body without harming him at all.

Just like a peaceful guest coming to visit.

Minutes slowly passed, and still, nothing happened. The juniors watched in bewilderment at their cousin, who had his eyebrows frowned in worry and confusion.

Just as he wanted to open his mouth to ask the elder what was going on.

"AAAAAAAAAAGH!!!!"

An ear-piercing shriek escaped from his mouth, scaring the shit out of everyone near him. No one expected such a high pitched scream to come out of a rough-looking young man like him.

Speechless, Felix glanced at his cousin who was wailing with tears and snort in his face, while flaying his limbs around, like a fish captured in a net.

'If this is how you act when dealing with only 5%. Are you going to levitate in the air when you take 100%?' He covered his eyes at this embarrassing sight, not wanting to see anymore.

'If everyone is like him. Then we will lose at least 80% of our juniors in the process.'

Meanwhile, Charlotte's eyes were emitting waves of despair at this sight. She was truly about to lose faith in those juniors if everyone's pain tolerance was the same as him.

'I hope others perform better. Otherwise, by the time they try to awaken for real. only dead bodies will welcome us.'

Hopeful, she switched her sight from the junior who passed out due to pain, marking the failure of the process, to the rest, who had horror clouding their faces.

They knew that fainting meant instant death! So for their cousin to actually fail awakening from just 5% of the pain, they couldn't help but feel a sudden chill at the thought of awakening for real with 100%.

It was only now, that the true face of awakening was shown to them in all of its glory and obscurity that the world council was hiding from them.

Chapter 55:New Approach to Practice Awakening

"Drag him to the side, and sit down." Charlotte didn't wait for them to break into chatter after that sight. She had no plans to alleviate their worry and fear, as their stay inside her room was limited to 4 hours, thus she had to make the best of it.

"We have no time to waste by going one by one. So you will all start at the same time."

She saw that her order wasn't taken into consideration, as each junior had their eyes either fixed on their cousin who was twitching from time to time, or at their toes counting how many they have.

Irritated, she frowned her eyebrows and decided to at least motivate them. Otherwise, their anxiety would affect their awakening process. "We will start with 5% and 10 minutes, and if you fainted during it, it means you are out." She extended her hand widespread, showing five fingers and added, "But if you managed to stay awake until the duration passed. You will be rewarded with 500 merits. Understood?"

"Understood!"

They replied with a little bit of vigor. But, their nervous expression did not change much. After all, no amount of merit could encourage them to look lightly at the integration process, following the horrifying scene they just regarded.

Felix sat down first in a meditation position and waited for Charlotte to make a move. His cousins soon did the same, while looking at the long needles, hovering near their hearts. Gulping noises resounded in the room, each time the piercing tips of those needles gleamed under the light.

Suddenly, one of the females couldn't handle the view anymore and fainted with eyes rolled at the back of her head.

'Thud.'

The moment the body hit the ground everyone stared at her speechlessly, not knowing why the hell was she here when she had Trypanophobia.

Helpless, Charlotte rubbed her eyelids and kicked her outside of the UVR. After all, she was not qualified to awaken if she couldn't even handle the image of a needle. Nonetheless penetrating her heart with it. She would probably get a heart attack immediately if that happened.

Trypanophobia was not a condition to be taken lightly.

"Queen AI carry on please." Charlotte requested politely for the queen to handle the process.

As expected from the Queen, her ways were always efficient and quick, as she didn't give anyone a chance to overthink, before she penetrated their hearts.

A few minutes later, a symphony of high pitched shrieks marked the beginning of the awakening process.

Meanwhile, Felix sat composedly with his eyes closed, without moving an inch or letting a single fart. In his eyes, this pain compared to the experiences and hardships he went through in his previous life was merely a joke.

No one could understand the tortures he had to face in his path before becoming a 3rd stage bloodliner. So, he took like a champ. A clear contrast to the rest who were threshing and twitching around, like fish on land.

'As always, the only reliable junior in the family is Felix.' Charlotte smiled pleasantly at the sight of Felix sitting like a stone statue. She then glanced at the others who either fainted on the floor with foam on their mouths or still wailing like pigs getting slaughtered.

'This is going to be a long month.' She sighed.

...

10 minutes quickly passed by. But, for those who still did not faint, it felt like 10 years. The moment the last second ticked by, the pain instantly vanished leaving them feeling empty inside, like everything was merely a dream.

"Alright from the 9 of you 3 has passed successfully, while the others failed miserably." Composed, Charlotte informed them of their results. However, only Felix was actually listening to her fully, as the others just kept staring at the ceiling absent-mindedly.

Charlotte unbothered by their lackluster response, kept on going, "For those who passed, they can either choose to repeat the same practice with others who failed, or upgrade the pain percentage and duration."

"Can I upgrade my practice to reach half the power of the real awakening?"

Suddenly the cousins who were playing dead were shaken out of their daze forcefully by Felix's bold and insane request. They didn't dare to believe that he had actually asked to upgrade from 5% and 10 minutes to 50% and 15 minutes!

Such a large upgrade was simply what a masochist would ask for!

On the other hand, Charlotte's eyes gleamed with delight at his request. Her cold unmoving lips couldn't help but widen a bit. Yet, what came out of her mouth was the total opposite of her creepy expression.

"Are you sure Felix? You should know that there is no need for a rush since you guys still have a whole month to get used to the process." She asked with good intentions.

"Yes Elder, I am positive." He suddenly paused and added with a long exhale, "I believe that even though the training plan you made for us is good, it will not be enough to handle the awakening one month later." He suggested with a polite smile, "In my humble opinion, it is much better if we used half the power to practice each day during those 25 days. And during the remaining 5 days, we try to awaken for real with 100%!"

This method was quite deadly, as many juniors wouldn't be able to handle the agony and keep constantly fainting until they either give up on awakening once for all or preserve until the real awakening day.

At that point, those who stuck with the constant torture would have higher chances of succeeding for real, since the pain duration would actually get reduced by the potions!

"I hope you take my opinion into consideration, as this babysitting plan of yours is truly not going to achieve much, but provide us with fake hope that we can awaken." He gave a half shrug and added, "But in reality, we will just end up dying in our pool of blood."

Felix knew that it was out of his character to go beyond his way and help others. However, Olivia's sorrowful expression on the treadmill popped out in his mind just before he wanted to stop speaking. In the end, he decided to give them that freebie due to her.

If the elders considered his advice, they should have at least 40% of juniors succeed. Yet, the best part of his plan wasn't even that, but the fact that the rest who never had chances to awaken in the first place, was going to be slapped by the reality that fate had other plans for them than to be part of the awakened race.

At that point, giving up was certain, and the moment they do so, the elders were going to retrieve their bloodlines bottles, since they couldn't waste resources on commoners.

'Well, I have nothing much to lose if I saved the future lives of those morons. They might actually feel like they own me a favor.' Felix mused in his mind after saying his piece.

Charlotte's eyes were on the verge of spewing beams of light, each time she heard his voice, like angels singing heavenly music in her ears.

Felix recoiled a bit at the creepy way she kept looking at him. But soon his tense shoulders eased up as he heard her say, "What you said is exactly what I had on my mind, and I even shared this plan to the elders and parents." She scoffed, "But the majority refused, as they believed that it was too much for them to handle at the very beginning."

"So I could only follow their decision and use this childish plan of upgrading the pain slowly." She sighed in dejection.

However, that expression didn't even stick for one second before it got replaced by a devilish glint that sent cold shivers on everyone's back.

"But now that you suggested it, and with me supporting it, they will have no choice but to follow our plan." She chuckled and said, "Otherwise their face will be slapped after they see you practicing with 50% while their children with 5%."

"Elder Charlotte, we are only thinking about their safety nothing more. If not, we would have never mentioned it." Felix rubbed his hands and grinned as well.

Charlotte laughed sadistically for the first time while staring at the juniors who were shivering on the floor in fear from the voices of this evil due.

"Hehe, dear Felix I share the same view as you. This is all for them. Too bad no one appreciates our goodwill."

"Indeed!"

Both of them shared eye contact and licked their lips as they stared at those juniors, like sheep waiting for slaughter.

....

3 hours later...

Back in reality, every junior woke up with a pool of sweat underneath them. They rubbed their bloodshot eyes and sighed in relief after finishing today's practice. It was truly a hell on earth.

Meanwhile, in front of Charlotte, 8 juniors opened their grey dead eyes with numb expressions, like they just got out of a three hours torture.

Sadly, that was exactly what happened inside Charlotte's room. After Felix gritted his teeth and took half the power of awakening without letting even a squeal, his cousins underestimated the pain greatly. After all, if Felix didn't even scream, the pain mustn't be that bad right?

Wrong!

Their naive thoughts caused them to faint instantly the moment the process began. They didn't even last for 3 seconds before foam came out of their mouths like they were shocked by electricity. What's even worse, was the fact that they had to wake up and start all over again!

This continued for three hours straight until they returned from the UVR with this shape. If it wasn't for few breaks here and there inside the room, their brains might have short circuits.

The elders and seniors began to notice the weirdness of Charlotte's group. Since the other groups were either sweating or in worse cases trembling. Meanwhile, Charlotte group appeared like a pack of zombies not responding to anything.

Only Felix had a normal expression on his face as he conversed softly with Charlotte and laughing from time to time.

"What's happened inside? Is the batch you took that bad to not even handle 5% pain for 10 minutes or what?" Abraham approached them with a confused expression.

"oh, not that." Charlotte shook her head and answered casually, "I just used the plan I proposed the last time, but got turned down by you softies, that's all."

Abraham and the seniors' expression instantly turned dark after hearing her reason.

"What the hell Elder Charlotte!! you have no right to do that to my child. Even if you are an elder, you should still follow the rules of the family and abide by them. Otherwise, you will be removed from your position!!" A fuming mother pointed her shaky finger at her.

Other parents all started shouting out loud in support of the mother's claim. Their fury was understandable, as every one of those 8 juniors kept looking at the ceiling or the ground absent-mindedly while chuckling like retards from time to time.

Charlotte didn't bat an eyelid at their tantrum. She just crossed her arms above her chest and said in utter contempt, "First of all, I only followed my plan after Felix suggested the same thing to me as well." She smiled in his direction, "He like a true man just gritted his teeth and didn't let a single yelp after taking 50% of awakening pain for over 15 minutes." She refocused on the parents and asked, "So tell me, if he can do that, why can't your wastrels do the same? Is he made of metal or his pain sensors are dead?"

"No! it is simply because he can take hardship while they can't." She insulted their children in front of their faces, not caring about holding back.

Felix neither blushed nor flushed, he simply kept blinking at Charlotte with expectation for more compliments.

Charlotte chuckled at the sight of his shameless begging for flattery. But she had to disappoint him by continuing to address the parents' fury.

"I will tell you right now that I will hold no responsibility after your kids die during the awakening, due to your soft approach inside the UVR, where they can't even die."

She turned around, planning to return to her room. However, her calm voice kept ringing in the ears of everyone. "You can either break them during the awakening mock practice or give them false hope that awakening was achievable by your mild approach."

"It's up to you, not me."

Chapter 56: The Assembly Fell into Mayhem

The parents weren't able to say anything, as she left them stranded in the middle of the argument like this. Actually, even if she stayed, they didn't have any solid counter-argument to add on. Especially, when Felix whipped out his phone and started playing in a game like he never entered the UVR with their children.

In the end, they didn't want to embarrass themselves any further. So they just let it go and stopped mentioning this issue anymore. After all, it wasn't like their kids were dead or anything.

Abraham decided to intervene at this point to change the subject, by asking Felix with a hint of disbelief in his tone, "Did she say the truth? You managed to handle 50% without issues?"

"It was nothing much, to be honest." He lifted his head from the phone and smiled, "I believe that my cousins can handle it as well if they got exposed to that pain. Some of them might only need three times while some will need more. But in the end, I trust in their tolerance to help them pass through it successfully."

"You just need to give them a chance. Am I right guys?" He spread his hands with a sincere smile, as he looked at his cousins.

In the eyes of the elders and seniors, he really resembled an angel who had his cousins well being set as a priority. However, the juniors only saw the devil in that form, trying to drag them to hell with him. But, they could do nothing about it and just get dragged with a smile on their faces.

"He is right! We want to change the plan as well, and start training the same way as he does. He is no better than us, if he could do it, we can achieve it as well."

"We just need a little bit more time than him that's all." A short red-haired cousin trembled, each time a boastful sentence came out of his stiff lips. In the end, he couldn't handle saying more and passed the ball to his cousins.

"Right guys?"

The rest had no one to save them from this shit hole that Felix threw them in. They understood that only by accepting his flattery would they save face for their parents. Thus, the poor lads could only support their cousin with fake bravado.

"Indeed, 5% was nothing, I didn't even faint."

"Even though I passed out, I firmly believe that I will not faint next time during 50%."

"Honestly, I was planning to ask for a 50% upgrade as well. But I thought it was too high profile." Nonchalant, a young man said with his head lowered, too engrossed in cleaning his glasses with his T-shirt.

"Fuck, why don't you say that while lifting your head James. I dare you."

"Imagine fainting at 5%, yet daring to say such bullshit. You really love slapping your parent's faces don't you James?"

"Enough insulting him guys. He passed out over 30 times during the past four hours in my group." Sarah whirled her finger at her temple and said, "So I believe that really messed up his head."

"Damn 30 times in four hours? He must have broken some world record with that! Meanwhile, I only fainted 15 times."

"At least you passed out 15 times." A cousin sighed in dejection, "I only fainted 4 times before managing to handle the pain."

"Me only 3 times..."

"I believe if I had time, I could have reached 9."

"..." Noah

The elders and the parents all turned speechless after hearing them humble brag about the number of times they fainted.

They expected them to live up to Felix's challenge and accept the same method he used. But why the hell did it turn into a competition between them over the amount of fainting?!

'Have they finally realized that competing with Felix is meaningless and it's better to just contend with each other? I think they need another confidence boost.'

Worried about this messed up sight, Abraham pondered with narrowed eyes at the family's future leaders, laughing and flattering each other's fainting number like morons.

Suddenly he saw them lifting the arrogant James and throwing him in the air while chanting his name out loud.

"What the fuck rascals?!" He slapped the podium with his palm and scolded, "You still dare to celebrate after your trashy performance?! You really are getting bolder by the day."

"Elder, someone made an online search and found out that James truly broke the world record of fainting in a short amount." Kenny who stood silently throughout the entire farce made his entrance with a polite smile. "So they wanted to celebrate this achievement."

Midair, James removed his glasses and lowered his head to clean them. "Elder, you told us that we need to find something unique that sets us apart from the rest." He smirked arrogantly, "Well I found my talent in this life, and that is being the best at fainting worldwide."

"Heh, I can already see myself making tours around the world, showcasing everyone my gift. This is my path in my life, and I am glad I found it this early."

The juniors couldn't help but put him on the floor and distance themselves from him after hearing his retarded dream. They truly began to believe that he had a screw loose after fainting that many times continuously.

Unbothered by the dumbstruck and worried gazes everyone was giving him, James wore his glasses back on and left the floor with that confident smirk still planted on his face. He was truly not bullshitting them!

Meanwhile, Felix had absolutely no idea what was happening around him. Since the moment he answered Abraham, he wore his air pods and focused on playing his league match under the curses of his teammates for going AFK.

Furious elders, embarrassed parents, humble bragging juniors, Felix playing on his phone, and finally James who walked out of the floor arrogantly to pursue his dream.

This gathering could not get any weirder. So the elders just excused everyone and ended the assembly early, on this uncanny note.

.....

Indifferent, Felix threw his broken phone in the garbage bin immediately after entering his room. The toxicity of League's community was truly one of the deadliest poisons in the universe.

Without further ado, he went to the bathroom first, planning to take a quick shower. So he could make a phone call to the wormhole express after.

It turned out, the lady boss already contacted him earlier this morning, to inform him about the shipment arrival in her shop.

That meant, he finally could use the serial codes of the pain relief potions without a problem. He was simply waiting for them, so he could make one delivery that includes everything he bought in the UVR all at once.

...

10 minutes later...

He sat on the couch, wearing only a bathroom robe on. He was obviously impatient to not even dress up first, before making the call.

"Fuck me, I don't remember their phone number."

Annoyed, he asked for the all-knowing Queen to give it to him. Suddenly, a long list of phone numbers was displayed before him, each for a different race. His eyebrows twitched, as he forgot to mention that he wanted the human branch one.

'Sorry, can I have the one for humans?'

'As you wish sir Felix.'

The Queen left only one number on the long list and even highlighted it with green light, so he wouldn't miss it. Felix smiled and thanked her.

Although, Felix could simply just order her around and she would obey since she was merely a basic version of the real Queen. He still felt that it was improper, as she was always nice to him, especially in his lowest during his previous life. So, he always treated her like a real person and only made requests, not orders.

Ring ring ring...Clack

"Hello, this is Wormhole express human branch. How can I help you?" A warm enthusiastic female voice resonated in the room.

"Hello, this is Felix Maxwell, from Planet Earth that exists on the borders of the Alexander's Kingdom. I called your company to ask for a few items I purchased in the UVR to be delivered." Felix gave a professional straight to point response.

"We are happy to do business with you, sir. I just need your AP Bracelet ID number first to obtain your personal details." She paused and requested, "Can I have your permission to do so?"

"Of course, be my guest."

A few moments later, she informed him, "Alright, we have your planet coordinates as well as your home address. Do you want us to deliver your items to your current address or you want to change it?"

"Leave it be. I want my stuff to arrive here." he replied.

"Good, now that we got that out of the way, I need to ask if you have the serial codes of the purchased products, or they are still in the sellers' hands?"

Without answering, Felix swiped his finger left on the hologram and sent all of his items serial codes, from potions to stones.

Pleased by his cooperation, her voice got a bit warmer. "Finally we need to discuss the delivery method and their prices. If you are not familiar with them, I can explain in detail each one benefits and their required payment."

"No need, I want to choose the basic 7 days delivery plan." Felix didn't bother hearing her explanation of those VIP methods that he couldn't afford even with his current capital.

"As you wish sir. Based on the current number of items you provided us, the delivery price shall be 550.500 SC. Do you give me permission to deduct it from your bank account?"

She requested with a tone lacking in the previous warmth. It seemed that she wasn't pleased by his commoner choice.

"Go ahead,"

Composed, He gave her his permission. Yet, his hand that was clutching his chest in pain, said otherwise.

'Fucking blood-sucking wormpires, asking for half a million to deliver 30 items or less.'

'Peep!'

His bracelet vibrated slightly, entailing that the payment had been successfully transferred.

"It was a great pleasure dealing business with you sir. I hope you have a nice day, Good Bye." She instantly hanged up after getting the money, not waiting a single second to hear his response.

Felix wasn't mad even a bit at her disrespectful way of treating him. He understood that every basic customer like him was treated like this by every company. Whether in the UVR or the universe.

You only get shown respect when you slap them with your massive donger bank account.

He stood up from the couch and went to order lunch. Yet his thoughts were on a completely different matter.

His mind was trying its best to find a way that could help him avoid his family after he awakens 7 days later. He never planned to wait until the end of the month and do it with his cousins, as the faster he awakened the earlier he would reach greater purity in his integration and began his climbing journey on the SG individual ranking ladder.

If he went and did so, he must hide thoroughly, since it was quite impolite to awaken without informing the elders and his grandfather after all the care they showed him.

The way of hiding himself was what annoyed him the most. He simply couldn't disappear for 23 or 24 days straight. The elders weren't fools to not figure out that he was hiding from them.

'Fuck it, I will show my best form during those 7 days, and pretend that I was sick after. As long as I don't obtain a high profiled mutations, I should be safe.'

Felix stopped bothering too much about it and just decided to go with the cheesiest trick in the book.

As his thoughts became clear, he remembered his free loading tenet. "Asna where did you go again? I thought you had nothing to watch. So why didn't I hear anything from you the entire day?"

A few minutes later, no response came through. He repeatedly called yet still nothing.

This time he wasn't mad at her lackluster response, as he figured out pretty quick that she was probably asleep.

His guess was right, as Asna was really sleeping peacefully on a mist made bed, with dark eyes from mental exhaustion.

It was only a natural result after she spent 6 months binge watching movies and series without a pause.

No matter if her body needed sleep or not, the consciousness always needed a break from time to time. Otherwise, she would turn insane.

Sleep was truly a gift one should treasure dearly, as some people couldn't even enjoy such a basic human need.

Chapter 57: The Delivery Has Arrived

Eager and quite impatient, Felix roamed around the living room with his hands folded behind his back. He couldn't sit still for even a second, as his items were about to arrive in a couple of seconds.

A week had already passed by in the blink of an eye.

Felix already stopped going to the awakening mock practice after successfully enduring 100% for over 20 minutes continuously! His result showcased that he was absolutely ready to awaken for real. Thus, there was no point in torturing himself with the rest.

Meanwhile, the same couldn't be said about his cousins, as they weren't able to even endure the basic 50% for 5 minutes before passing out. This constant daily torture forced 10 juniors to quite the training camp, and return their bloodlines bottles to the family.

The only one who performed only below Felix was Noah, as he managed to endure 50% for 20 minutes! However, the process wasn't smooth or pretty like Felix's. In fact, by the end of the duration, he flat out fainted for 12 hours straight.

The sight scared the elders out of their wits, as they believed that his brain must have been damaged in some way or form. Thankfully, his cold personality was still the same after he woke up.

However, the situation he caused, managed to raise some warning flags on the elders' heads. They realized that it was a bit too much for the juniors to get tortured like that every single day without a break. So, they changed the schedule from 7 days of practice to only 4 days.

...

"What's going on? Am I really unlucky to get an amateur Wormpire, or something happened during the Delivery?"

Irritated and somewhat confused, Felix scratched his cheek and glanced again at his bracelet. It turned out, his delivery was delayed by a whopping two hours, which was honestly unacceptable behavior.

Felix didn't pay half a million to be treated like this. It was one thing to get hanged up, on his face by their customer service. But another, to have his delivery messed up like this.

"You asked for this."

Finally, he wasn't able to handle it anymore and decided to rant on their customer service about this shitty way of treating their customers. However, just as he tried to dial their phone number, his finger froze in its place.

'Took you long enough.'

Felix's eyes brightened up at the sight of wind rushing from the windows furiously towards the center of his living room. Yet, the weird part was that not a single object or furniture got displaced. It was like the space in the room froze everything inside, even Felix's body.

A few seconds later a small crack emerged midair in the exact spot where the wind was rushing before.

Bewildered and speechless, Felix sized up the small crack that was forcefully getting stretched by a fat blue scaled worm that kept wriggling its body to enter the room, but to no avail.

After a few more attempts, it gave up and just remained stuck in the spatial crack with half of its body dangled, almost touching the ground.

"Hello is anyone there?" The space receptors of the blue worm kept flickering around, trying to sense any lifeform presence. Suddenly, it paused its actions after noticing Felix sitting on the couch.

"Cough, I could use some help, sir." It lifted one receptor and pointed at Felix. "I doubt that you want to sleep while looking at a fat worm stuck in your room. Don't you kind sir?"

Although its way of asking was polite, Felix was still as unresponsive as ever. He simply kept staring at this human-sized worm with a deadpan expression.

'Should I take a video of this humiliating failed delivery, and blackmail the company?'

Felix was beyond livid after seeing the unprofessional farce in front of him. He truly felt like he was cheated out of a half million. However, his rationality retook control and shook his head to remove that stupid idea from his mind.

'No thank you, I still want my life.'

It was never a good option to offend the Delivery Companies that had his own private information, as they could easily know his hidden persona in the UVR, based on the items he bought.

Even though they were heavily restricted by the SGA laws to not spread his information online, they could always find a way to "mistakenly" give it to others.

Hell, even on earth, massive companies were selling data of their users to each other on a daily basis. Don't even mention those greedy Delivery Companies.

This was the reason he chose the Wormhole Express Company in the first place. As he knew that it was one of the best Delivery Companies in the universe that took pride in three things; fast delivery, secure information, and professional service.

But if he blackmailed them. He would have left them with no choice but to drop all pretense and annihilate him.

"Hellooo! I know you can hear me! I am talking straight in your mind." The fatty worm kept yapping constantly in his mind, not letting him a single moment to think.

'Although I can't blackmail the company. This annoying fatty is another matter.'

Felix licked his lips and approached the spatial crack, unworried about being affected by it. After all, the space worm race had complete control over the element of space. thus, as long as the fatty was near him, the crack couldn't devour him and his room.

"Stop drooling on my carpet fatty, lest I put a lamp close to your skin." He threatened the blue worm immediately after seeing his acidic drool ruining the carpet.

Fatty who was about to open his mouth to thank Felix shivered at his threat and closed its tiny mouth shut.

Satisfied by his submissiveness, he patted his head like a pet.

Before fatty could sound his displeasure at this downgrading treatment. Felix grabbed his receptors and brought it close to his face.

"Now you little shit. I am extremely pissed that the company sent an amateur like you, instead of a professional." He extended three fingers near his receptors and admonished him, "First you were late by 2 hours. Second, you got stuck inside your own spatial hole, like a moron, and finally, you begged your customer for assistance!"

"You literary broke two of your company's main pillars on one delivery."

The fatty couldn't even argue back, as everything Felix said was correct. He knew that he messed up this delivery pretty badly. So, he kept his silence obediently not daring to anger him any further. In his mind, he just needed to listen to Felix's rant for a while and everything should be back on track.

Unfortunately, Felix's rant was merely the beginning of his nightmare.

"If it was another customer, they won't hesitate to report your performance to your supervisor. But luckily, you met me." Felix let go of his receptors and smiled, "An easy-going person who let bygones be bygones. But you are still required to give some compensation over the damages you caused me."

The fatty wasn't an idiot to not realize that his fate was in the hands of Felix's. But, to get blackmailed like this, still left a sour taste in his mouth.

"What do you mean I caused you damages?" He scoffed and said, "Besides some burnt marks in your carpet. I broke nothing else. So I can gladly pay its damage if you willed me to."

"How about 600 SC for a new carpet? quite a generous price don't you think?" He offered with a hint of mockery in his tone.

Unbothered by his hidden insults, Felix brought a chair near the crack and sat on it, backward.

"Who said anything about physical damages? what I meant is the harm you caused to my mental health!" His shoulders slumped down, as he continued lying through his teeth. "You had no idea that I planned to awaken today. I was just waiting for my items to arrive to start the process. But now after this farce, and especially seeing your ugly face stuck in my room like this, how am I suppose to awaken?"

"You ruined my mental preparation for awakening that took me years of effort to build. But now I don't know when I am going to build it again or how long it will take, and this is all because of you little shit." He pointed his finger at him and asked, "So tell me how are you going to compensate me?"

The Fatty worm realized that he had no way out from this shit hole but to pay a heavy bribe to shush Felix. Otherwise, his job as a deliveryworm was over.

He would rather pay him than lose his job. As in his race culture, being a lazy unemployed worm meant only one thing, that was getting isolated by everyone until he commits a Star Suicide.

So, he could only sigh at his dog shit luck and inform Felix of his bribe. "I will give you my Spatial holding chip. It's the only valuable thing I have in my possession. Just get me out of here. My skin is getting rough from this long sunlight exposure." He shuddered and said, "My wife will beat me up if she saw it."

Amused, Felix chuckled slightly at the fatty worm, who was trying desperately to hide from the sunlight. Those space worms weren't being nicknamed as Wormpires for no reason. In fact, if it wasn't for the many similarities between them and the vampire race, no one would have mentioned it in the first place.

However, Felix still didn't give him a hand. He just grinned wickedly and watched him squirm around in anguish.

The bastard truly deserved it, as he tried to fool him by saying that the spatial card was the only valuable thing in his possession.

Maybe, if others who lacked knowledge would dance in joy after getting the card. But to Felix, it meant nothing, since he could simply buy it from the UVR.

What he truly wanted from the worm was actually him!

"I will take the card in compensation for the physical damages you caused to my carpet that was gifted by my late parents. The only gift they left me after passing away. God bless their souls."

Felix kissed two fingers and pointed them in the air with a mournful expression. He truly had zero shame to use his dead parents as a source of blackmail. But honestly, with his parents' personality, they pretty much would have expected nothing less from him.

"Stop being so shameless! Who would believe that this trashy carpet is a gift by someone?" The fatty finally couldn't handle it and snapped at him. "I refuse to accept such blatant blackmail."

"Take it back, and apologize to my parents. Otherwise, forget about reporting you to the company, I will report you to your own Worm Tribe for humiliating my family like this." Felix crossed his arms over his chest and added with a bone-chilling tone, "I have everything recorded."

Frightened and quite spooked, the fatty's receptors immediately withdrew inside his scales after realizing that Felix even knew how to report to his Tribe.

If Felix did as he said. The fatty losing his job would be the least of his concerns, as he would get disowned by his parents and exiled from the tribe!

Since family was a sacred and glorified based on their tribal worm race culture. It should never be dishonored by anyone. Otherwise, exile awaits the offender.

'Who the fuck is he?! I thought this planet should be filled with uneducated country bumpkins. So why the hell does he knows my race traditions.' His mind was in an utter mess, not able to comprehend who the fuck he was dealing with.

"So are you going to agree to my physical compensation or not." Felix knocked on his head, to force his receptors out.

A few moments later, the fatty nodded silently, not wanting to speak anymore. God knows if that prick was going to put him in another trap by twisting his words.

Satisfied, Felix patted his head again. "Good boy, now moving on to my mental damages that your reckless actions caused." He smiled warmly and said, "I simply demand an easy-going request that you can fulfill without losing anything."

The fatty flinched at his warm tone, as he expected from this demon nothing less but to get ripped off heavily.

Alas, Felix's request turned even worse than what he expected.

Chapter 58:Sending Off Fatty Worm (2 in 1)

"I want to obtain your lifelong free delivery contract." Felix grin widened, as he laid out an ultimatum that shattered Fatty's wishes of Felix going easy on him.

"Give me a fucking way out, you heartless devil!" He broke out of his silence with a deafening roar.

"How dare you ask for my contract that can be used for my protection!"

"Stop acting as I abused you. My request is quite fair if you think about it." Felix cleared his ear nonchalant and clarified, "Since if I reported you to your supervisor you will definitely lose your job. hence, the contract that you are protecting now will be taken as well."

"So in my opinion you only have one option, and that is to accept my deal and keep your job. At least your wife won't starve." He suggested, smiling.

If fatty had eyes, he would have already started sobbing over being exploited in this inhuman manner. He was just a simple honest working worm, what did he do to deserve this heartless treatment?

Too bad, no one was here to rescue him from Felix's clutches, thus the only thing he could do was curse to vent some of his aggrievedness. "You are the real wormpire! You blood-sucking monster. I curse you to die at your awakening. I will never deal with your race anymore."

Felix's thick skin blocked all of his curses easily. "You can curse me for eternity, I don't give a crap." He stood up from his chair and extended his palm under the worm mouth. "The only thing you need to do now is to stop wasting my time and give me the contract to sign."

Fatty mumbled a few extra curses under his breath, then opened his mouth unwillingly, showing a set of razor-sharp teeth and a black hole that kept whirling in his throat continuously.

Without warning, he spat an AP bracelet with some drops of acidic saliva on it. Felix swiftly retracted his palm, dodging those drops reflexively.

'Smack!'

Livid at this messed up the attempt to harm him, Felix smacked the fatty right in his shiny head. He knew that fatty did it on purpose, as an act of revenge.

After all, the black hole in his throat led to a clean oversized dimension inside his body, where all of his shipments were being stocked. There was absolutely no way for the items inside to get tainted in any way or form. Otherwise, the worm race wouldn't have become the best, in this delivery industry.

"You little prick, you better ask the Queen to show me the contract asap!"

Felix cleaned fatty's AP bracelet from those drops and put it on the chair. Then unexpectedly, he went to pull the curtains of every window in his room.

"Closed them off you demon!! My skin is cracking!!" Fatty wailed in anguish after getting exposed to a heavy dose of sunlight. He wasn't lying though, as his smooth moist scales were showing signs of getting dry up.

"Contract!!"

Felix merely crossed his arms next to the window and observed him getting tortured like this. His personality might appear shameless and playful in front of his close relatives and friends. But deep inside, he was as psycho as Asna. Otherwise, he wouldn't have dared to blow his soul up before.

Something only insane individuals would attempt to do.

"Queen, please present him my lifelong free delivery contract to sign." Unwilling, Fatty cried out loud.

'Sir Bodidi, I can clearly see that you are being blackmailed. Should I activate the protection protocol and inform your emergency contact?' Queen AI suggested with good intentions.

However, Bodidi refused the protocol and rushed her. 'No, just do as I say fast! If a word gets out of what happened here, my life is going to be over. So just go ahead and give him the damned contract to sign.'

'As you wish sir bodidi.'

Suddenly an aqua holographic contract hovered above the chair. Felix smiled and closed off the window's curtains.

"That wasn't so bad right?" he smiled warmly, as he approached the sulky worm.

"Choke on my spit!"

Unperturbed, Felix ignored him and focused on the conditions and terms of the contract, reading them with his eyes. A few moments later, he grinned gleefully, as he spotted the two conditions he heard about in his previous life.

//Term 4.5: The Delivery must reach within a minimum period of three days, and always takes priority.

Term 6.3: All items delivered will be free of charge, no matter the weight or the amount. (This condition doesn't include paying for Empire-wide/Universal-wide customs taxes.)//

No wonder he fought tooth and nail to force the fatty to give him this contract. Just those two terms alone were enough to make his life much easier, don't even mention the rest of the terms.

Delighted, his grin kept getting wider and wider, as he continued to scroll down the page. Suddenly, his grin stiffened after he noticed a condition he never heard about before.

"The signatory must provide absolute safety to the contract provider from hunters' aggression. Failing to a bid by this term will result in paying a fine of 20 billion SC." His loud voice kept getting softer and softer, each time he read a word. By the time he reached the whopping 20 billion fine, his voice resembled a mosquito buzzing sound.

Silence abruptly engulfed the room, as Felix was lost for words at the mere sight of such a dastardly condition. Only now, did he realize that his information on the lifelong contract was utter garbage. He couldn't believe that he actually wasted coins to buy false Intel like this.

In his previous life, he was interested in getting contracted by a deliveryworm after becoming a 3rd stage bloodliner. So he wouldn't bother about paying constantly the heavy shipment prices. However, the Intel about the conditions of the contract was heavily protected by the wormhole company. Thus, Felix had to buy it in the UVR from Intel gatherers.

However, the f*cker who sold it to him explicitly said that the only downside about the contract was the need for Party B to help Party A to get more clients for their delivery job.

Felix at that point easily believed in him, since he knew that the wormhole express company rewarded resources to their junior deliveryworms, based on the number of deliveries achieved in a year. It was common knowledge in the UVR.

But in reality, he actually needed to provide 24/7 security for Bodidi, protecting him at all costs. That was clearly an impossible task for him. Hell, Felix wasn't confident that he could protect himself, don't even mention others.

"What's the meaning of this 20 billion SC?" Felix frowned his eyebrows and said, "I don't think your life is worth even a couple of millions."

"This is what you get from asking something you can't afford, you poor pepper." Bodidi didn't hold back in his belittling at all, as he added, "I never seen before a thick-skinned commoner like you who lusts over free delivers from my race. Something we only do to strong and rich individuals, who could afford to protect us from hunters!"

'I see!'

Felix nodded his head a few times in understanding, totally ignoring bodidi's belittling. He quickly figured out the real reason why those contracts even existed in the first place, based on bodidi's words and the public knowledge he had.

The worm race was one of the best if not the best space elemental controllers in the universe. They could create wormholes, freeze space, create dimensions, and even had a hand on creating the spatial card. However, their strength was abysmal compared to other races. Heck, even humans bloodliners could flatten them easily if they managed to capture them.

That created a race that had amazing utility abilities but trashy combat prowess. This meant, they were juicy targets to hunters from all different races! Whether to be enslaved in secret and be used to privately open up wormholes or just harvest their body parts for potions and substance creations.

What was messed up about this, was the fact that hunters never targeted space worms seniors, as they knew that it was neigh impossible to capture them or even approach them. Their space element control was no joke.

However, the same couldn't be said about the juniors like Fatty bodidi. They were still learning how to harness the space element. If it wasn't for so, Bodidi wouldn't have been stuck in his own spatial crack like a retard.

The hunters took advantage of their lackluster control and targeted only them, striking exactly during the delivery work hours. As they knew that amateurs like them always left hefty trails behind after opening a wormhole.

They took advantage of those trails and laid ambushes on one side of the wormhole bridge, waiting patiently for their prey to arrive at their destination or return from it.

Their operation didn't have even a 5% success rate, but it was enough to kidnap or kill an amount that managed to raise warning flags on the space worm seniors' heads, leaving them no choice but to implement this lifelong protection contract, that offered free shipments for eternity, as long as the signatory protected the safety of their junior.

The moment its implementation was announced, every individual who had absolute confidence in his reputation and strength rushed to sign it as fast as possible. After all, to have a dedicated deliveryworm that served no one but them in the universe, was truly a birthday wish being fulfilled.

Just like that, the hunting was lowered to the bare minimum. Which was quite understandable, as the majority of those hunters were simply commoners looking for instant richness. However, if it meant offending an individual that had authority over their life and death. The hunt wasn't worth it anymore.

On the other hand, there was Felix, a weakling who had neither strength nor reputation to scare off the hunters. Thus, he knew that unless he found a way to salvage this situation, he could forget about obtaining the benefits of the contract.

"Can we modify the contract as we please?" He lifted Bodidi's bracelet in his hand and brought the hologram close to his face, trying to find any loopholes to take advantage of.

Fatty sneered at his attempts and answered, "Yes we can, but no matter what you say I will not lower the price tag."

He laughed wickedly, sounding like two sharp razors grinding on each other. "Hell, I hope you sign it. So I can commit star suicide on your sun. Just so you can drown in debt."

An unpleasant memory instantly resurfaced in Felix's mind after hearing the star suicide term.

He was traveling with his clanmates to an undiscovered galaxy for exploration, based on newly bought news from the UVR.

But unbeknownst to them, the wormhole that was supposed to take them to the new Galaxy ended up being a star suicide wormhole that was opened by a moron worm who was sick of his life!

While humans kicked the buckets by themselves, the space worm race opened up a path directly to a star, to burn themselves into crisp!

A truly glorifying and dramatic way to die.

In a normal situation, there should be no problem with this. But sadly, the wormhole they opened would stay active until it either gets turned off by the owner, or the energy that sustains it runoff!!

This reckless selfish behavior by them caused multiple tragedies of galaxy explorers getting turned into ash after entering one of those wormholes, thinking that it was their path to treasures and new resources.

Unfortunately, Felix's crew fell into the same trap.

He could never forget the brightness and the hellish heat of the star that welcomed them with open arms at the other side of the wormhole.

A surprise that could make the toughest man on the universe piss his pants in fright.

If it wasn't for their spaceship's high-grade alloy, and captain inhuman reflexes by activating all of the ship's thrusters to travel away at the speed of light, they would have been roasted alive.

Furious at this bastard who reminded him of that traumatic experience, Felix started beating him ruthlessly. "Who are you trying to threaten you retard?! You couldn't even open a hole that fits you to do your job properly. Don't even mention opening one that can harm others."

Unexpectedly, Bodidi took Felix's punches with his hard scales like a champ, not even feeling a slight itch.

"Yes, that's it, to the side, please. That's the spot, keep adding more pressure please, and use your legs if you need to."

Felix never once felt more urge to rush awakening and gain some strength, just to beat this fatty to plump.

"Listen up you little shit. My patient has run out." Felix tapped on his bracelet and showed Bodidi his company's customer service number.

"I will modify the contract from lifelong free deliverers to only twenty. But in turn, the protection bullshit must be removed. If you don't agree, I will straightway complain to your company. At least they will refund me my coins over your shitty delivery."

Bodidi knew that Felix was not messing around anymore. So he tried his best to negotiate for a bit of leeway.

"Twenty times is too much!" He shook his head and offered, "Make it ten and you have a deal."

Aggressive, Felix pressed dial on the number and said, "I hate wasting time on negotiations. So make it 17 times and that's it. Don't even think of lowering it again."

"F*ck! Fine, hang up already!"

Felix truly gave him no option to further his negotiation after seeing that bracelet ringing.

"Queen modify the contract please to those terms." He sighed reluctantly.

Queen did as requested efficiently. A few seconds later the contract terms changed and Felix immediately used his UVR ID number to sign after checking that everything was loophole-free.

After doing so, his aggressiveness and bully personality withdrew back, allowing his playful personality to grace the stage.

"Ayio, brother Fatty, you look uncomfortable in this position. Let me help you out." He smiled warmly and grabbed Bodidi from his space receptors, trying to drag him inside.

However, just as he pulled, Fatty wailed out loud in pain. "Fuck, stop it!! I don't want to enter your demon lair anymore. Just take your items and push me outside the crack."

He swiftly opened his mouth and spew out a small chip that resembled an earthling's phone memory card.

Felix let go of his receptors and picked it up. Without delay he installed it on a small entrance in his AP Bracelet, then he displayed a hologram before him that showcased the icons of all of his purchased items.

Relieved that not a single item was missing. He closed off the hologram and grinned cheerfully. "Glad to do business with you, brother fatty. I will call you the next time I need your talents." He patted Bodidi's oversized belly and suggested sincerely, "I advise you to cut some weight, or else you won't remain long in the company."

"Fuck you! I am not your brother you devil. just push me away. I don't want to see your face ever again." He cursed him while wiggling backward trying to exit himself.

Unfortunately, nothing much changed, as his body didn't budge even an inch.

Felix stared at this miserable sight and decided to give him a hand. So, he pushed him with all of his strength. Yet, his attempts turned out to be futile, as the fatty's weight was at least 8 times Felix's.

"Can't you just close the bridge and cut yourself in half?" He tilted his head slightly and said, "I believe you can easily recover your other half without an issue."

As a worm based being, Bodidi still enjoyed some basic evolutionary benefits, and one of them was the worm's uncanny rejuvenation speed. Even on earth, worms could recover their bodies after being split in half. Don't even mention the elite space worm race.

"You bastard, if I wanted to do so, I would have done it without needing you to tell me." Bodidi snapped, as he waved his receptors around. "But I would rather get blackmailed by you than feel that pain again." He said, shivering. He was clearly remembering an unpleasant memory.

"As you wish, let me get some help first." Felix shrugged his shoulders and explained, "I don't think I will be able to push you all by myself."

"Turn off the lights before you go!!"

Too bad, Felix hastily closed the door, leaving him all by himself dangled in the middle of the room like that.

....

Felix headed straight to Noah's door, planning to ask for help since he was the only one who could help him without too many questions asked.

He knocked two times on his door and waited patiently. A few seconds later Noah opened the door and eyed Felix expressionlessly.

Felix took the cue and explained why he came. "I need a favor to ask. Can you come to my room? I will give you extra pain relief potion if you agreed."

Noah thought about it for a while, then nodded slightly. He had nothing to lose anyway.

...

5 minutes later...

both of them were pushing Bodidi's body outside of the crack again. This was already their 6th time, and each time they did so, he budged slightly backward. Their arms were already turning sour.

Fortunately, this time their efforts were successfully rewarded by the joyful voice of bodidi's on the other side of the bridge.

"So long losers!"

Felix and Noah did not take it to heart, as one of them, was happy that this farce finally ended, and the other didn't care about anything, besides his little sister.

"Thank you, brother Noah. Here is your reward."

Felix tapped on the relief potion icon on his hologram and immediately the bottle materialized in his hand under an aqua blue shimmer. He then handed it to Noah, who watched the process with a hint of surprise in his eyes.

But that was it, he neither asked nor stayed. He simply took it, nodded his head in appreciation, and excused himself from the room without asking about the entire weird situation of the fatty worm.

"Good luck on awakening, and if you needed anything just call me." Felix smiled after seeing him closing the door softly.

Noah was indeed the perfect handyman for those issues. No questions, or bullshit, just straight-out does what he was asked, and leave after being paid. If it was Olivia she would probably have scolded Felix for blackmailing Bodidi.

Felix removed all of those useless thoughts from his mind and glanced at the epic tier 4 bloodline icon with a glimmer in his eyes.

"It is time to awaken." He smirked and walked to his bedroom.

Chapter 59:Awakening Successfully (2 in 1)

Felix stood next to his bed with a hologram in front of him, showcasing the details of the spatial card that he just blackmailed from fatty.

//Model Name: XL 9th Generation.

Model Number: MG4P2LL/A

Serial Code: F17PQQL2G5MD

Device Compatibility: AP Bracelet 4th generation and above. (Doesn't support devices below.)

Capacity: 30 square meters.//

Satisfied, Felix nodded his head after reading the capacity of the spatial card. 30 square meters was the same size as an average motel room.

He knew that he earned a bargain, since to buy just a few square meters, the price wouldn't shy from a couple of millions.

The spatial cards were not sold for the commoners who didn't have even a couple of thousands in their bank account, but for the bloodliners, rich people, celebrities, and authority figures.

So, for Fatty to actually possess one of it, it simply meant that it was given to him by his company to hold small items like Felix's. Since his dimensional space was used mainly for oversized shipments.

Such as containers, machines, and even corpses of dead beasts. Hell, some professional deliveryworms could actually deliver a whole spaceship inside their bodies.

"I wish you good luck dealing with the aftermath of losing it Brother Fatty."

He chuckled at Fatty's upcoming misfortune and clicked the withdrawal button on all of his items. He pointed his bracelet at his bed and a sudden blue light projected from it, flowing like ripples of water. As the light touched the bed, 20 items or more started to slowly materialize on it.

Felix stared at this captivating scene with a hint of praise in his eyes. No matter how many times he saw it, His respect for the metal race never diminished. It wasn't just him who felt that way, but actually every user of this convenient tool that enabled them to hold as many items as their card allowed them to.

Felix could only bow his head in respect for the metal race never-ending lust for the truth of the universe, that pushed them to continue researching anything that had value.

If it wasn't for so, they wouldn't have bothered to combine their technology with the space worm abilities to create such a sophisticated device. Heck, even the AP bracelet was created by them.

The entire universe technology was being carried singlehandedly on their shoulders. If they advanced forward, the rest advance with them. If they stopped their groundbreaking inventions, the universe would halt as well.

After a few seconds, the process had ended, and all of Felix's items were laid neatly on the bed.

"Asna wake up! it is time to awaken."

"Just 5 more minutes." Asna murmured softly while hugging her pillow.

"I can't wait a single second more! Wake up, WAKE UP, WAKE UP!" Felix started to annoy her to ruin her sleep. He already waited more than enough. It was time to awaken, and he won't tolerate any further delays.

"FINE, I am up, just shut up already."

Irritated she threw her pillow away, as couldn't continue sleeping under his annoying voice. So, she woke up with bloodshot eyes.

Clearly, the time she slept wasn't enough to cover for her mental exhaustion.

"Good, you have 5 minutes to prepare yourself."

Eager, he removed his T-shirt, exposing his well built upper body, and picked only the items, which were needed for awakening. The four pain relief potions, the Tier 4 bloodline, rejuvenation potion, and lastly the Double Percentage potion.

He then arranged them on the floor next to where he planned to awaken. After doing so, he went to his closet and took an oversized injection needle that he purchased yesterday from the street pharmacy.

"Hopefully it's not faulty."

He opened its package and tested it by drawing his own blood to check if it was working properly. After all, the last thing he needed was penetrating his heart with it, but failing to inject the bloodline inside.

Following the successful test, Felix placed the injection needle inside the bloodline bottle and extracted a whopping 20% of its content all at once.

The bottle was marked with accurate measurements, on one side there was a Metric system that displayed measurement down to the milliliter. Meanwhile, the other side showcased the percentage numbers.

All of this just to help the bloodliners from not screwing up their awakening or integration after so.

"This amount should be enough."

Although 20% was quite a large amount to awaken with, Felix wasn't worried at all, since he bought the double percentage potion just for this reason.

If he drunk it after injecting the 20% in his heart, the potion would do its wonders and half the upcoming pain waves from 20 to merely 10.

Felix was confident that he could handle 10 waves of pain for merely 6 minutes after drinking the four pain relief potions.

This strategy of his was used by the majority of bloodliners to secure for themselves the first passive ability, and also bring them closer to the lesser purity stage. After all, the moment they reached 15% the first passive ability should be unlocked automatically.

Calm and peaceful, he sat in a meditation position with the injection needle close to his heart. He took a long inhale and called for Asna, "Are you ready?"

"go ahead, I will keep a lookout," Asna replied in utter boredom.

"Here we go."

He smiled and stabbed his heart with the injection needle, forcing all of its content inside his heart.

Without delay, he took advantage of those precious few minutes of calmness and drunk all the potions needed to facilitate the awakening process.

After drinking them he relaxed his muscles and closed his eyes. 'Only a minute left before the first wave strikes. I am thankful to mom and dad for having me and thank....'

Before he finished his awakening ritual or whatever that was. He got interrupted by a noisy exclamation from Asna.

"What the hell am I seeing?!"

Just as Felix wanted to scold her for ruining his focus, he closed his mouth shut as he listened in disbelief to her random bullshit.

"Felix, you need to hear this!" Her bloodshot eyes had a hint of images that were being displayed at the speed of light.

"I'm forcefully reading the memories of this bloodline as we speak, and I just found out that there are actually three bloodlines mixed in it!!"

She closed her eyes and reopened them again. But this time, those images were gone. She massaged her eyelids and clarified what she meant in a faster pace.

"The first one is from the heavy anaconda and the second one is from the Green Mamba. Yet, the most terrifying one is the bloodline of an ancestral beast called the Midgard Serpent or in the language of his worshippers Jörmungandr!!"

Felix immediately lost it and scolded her. "What the fuck are you talking about? This is not the time to joke around Asna. I will be bombarded by waves of pain soon. So leave me alone!"

Asna didn't have the time to explain everything to him since the process of awakening would begin soon. So, she just said one thing that tempted Felix to take her words seriously.

"The Jörmungandr is the poison element primogenitor. It was born at the beginning of the universe with full control on the element of poison."

Astonished and honestly quite disbelieving in the nonsense he just heard, Felix' calm focused eyes couldn't help but bulge out. However, Asna quickly changed the subject and asked him urgently.

"Tell me quick! Do you want me to filter the other two bloodlines, leaving only 1% of the ancestral being that I found, or you want to continue with normal awakening." She rushed him again, "Decide fast as the moment integration starts I can't do much."

"Do it, I trust in your judgment." Felix agreed without hesitation, or even pausing for a second to check if Asna was just pulling a prank on him.

"Good, you won't regret it." Asna smiled happily after not hearing those words for eons.

Without wasting any more time, she filtered 19% of the AnoMamba bloodline from the pure 1% J?rmungandr bloodline and then unexpectedly stored it inside his body.

It seemed like it still could be removed from the body without issues, which was honestly quite understandable, as Asna's cosmic social status was so high within the universe, even the J?rmungandr bloodline could only obediently be manipulated by her. Don't even mention those low tiered bloodlines.

But this control and oppression were valid only because this was just a bloodline. Otherwise, If the ancestral beast was here in his flesh, Asna social status wouldn't mean shit to him.

He might show respect but not total obedience.

Shortly after, she finished manipulating the bloodlines and informed Felix, "I am done; now you won't deal with ten waves of pain but just one, since you will awaken with only 1%."

Felix sighed in relief after hearing that. At least there was some good news after his whopping 20% got butchered to merely 1%.

However, before his relief took root, a sentence from Asna sent him to the depth of the despair. "Even though it's just 1%, you should expect the pain to at least triple, as well as the duration."

"Good luck, I'm cheering for you." Asna clapped her hands cutely after delivering such heart-wrenching news.

"You Bi..Arrrrrugh!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!"

His curse was cut in half by a high pitched shriek that escaped from his mouth, marking the beginning of his awakening.

All of Felix bravado and toughness he showed before in the awakening mock practice was no more, as he kept thrashing on the ground with his hands smashing everything that near him. If the bottles weren't made of tough glass material, they would have been shattered by him already.

Fortunately for Felix, his pitiful wails and cries were being confined inside his room, as it was soundproof.

The only spectator to this pathetic charade was Asna, who already found a comfortable lying position on the misty couch with her arm hugging a bucket of popcorn.

Her wide smile and delightful eyes were clear proof that she was enjoying watching Felix getting tortured like this.

....

Inside Felix's body...

Immense changes were occurring on his nucleus cell that hosted the human DNA code. Yet, currently, this sacred code was being tempered by foreign genes that invaded the majority of Felix's cells and started to fit themselves somehow, without killing their host.

This was the main reason why the integration process was always painful without any way to stop it. The only thing that was possible was reducing its duration, or in other words, hasten the process to end faster.

A simple analogy of what was truly happening to Felix's body now was to simply consider the human body as a vase made of clay.

The awakening process tries to reshape the already made vase without breaking it into pieces. Either by adding an extra handle or making the base wider or thinner. It all depended on the bloodline unique characteristics.

Thus, resulting in mutations that could range from either having a different hair color or growing an extra limb or a tail.

Those mutations could get removed only by replacing the bloodline with another. But even this method wasn't successful all the time. As in some cases, the mutation might stay permanently after the bloodliner etched an ability in his human 1% bloodline.

A plausible reason for why so, was that the ability held the same genes of the mutation itself. For example, if a bloodliner had a third eye in the middle of his forehead, and he decided to keep an ability that could be activated only by that third eye, the mutation was going to remain permanently following its ability.

It was just common sense.

Now Felix's body had already started to display some mutations after a couple of minutes in this process.

Firstly, his height increased by 3 cm all at once, pushing him to reach 180 cm. He could finally call himself "tall" proudly.

Secondly, his hair got longer and glossier. Then its color began to transform from blond to a spring light green with a hint of dark purple shade at its tips.

A breathtaking combination that could make girls trade everything in their possession to have a single strand.

Yet, the biggest mutation only took place after nearing the end of the awakening, and it happened to his eyes.

As his pupil turned into dreadful slits with dark violet irises surrounding them, resembling a field of midnight rose, circling around an eerie smooth crack on the ground.

Those mutations could be said to be a quite lowkey when compared to having bone claws or a bushy long monkey tail.

After his eyes transformation, nothing else changed from his body, since 1% bloodline wasn't able to change much.

To do so, one must use a higher percentage of a bloodline during the awakening or in replacement. In fact, if Felix continued with the original plan and used a 20% bloodline, serpent scales were definitely going to cover his body.

That was one of the main reasons, he wanted to awaken by that large amount. Since he knew that those scales were going to add an extra layer of defense naturally. But now, he could only obtain other mutations, in his first replacement.

.....

A few minutes later, Felix's body that was twitching like he was having a seizure, stopped moving at once. If it wasn't for his chest that was rising and falling slightly, anyone would have assumed that he failed to awaken.

After a while, Felix slowly opened his muddled eyes, while lying naked on a pool of sweat mixed with some blood that originated from his eyes mutation.

'Finally, it ended. I can't believe I almost fainted during the process. Thank god Asna intervened and called for me.' He thought with agitation at such a close shave.

He truly was blindsided by the pain getting tripled from what he was used to. Yet, that wasn't even the real reason he struggled to survive the awakening, but actually it was the long duration that increased from 6 minutes to a whopping 16 minutes!

Felix's best record in the mock practice was pulling through 1 wave of pain for 20 minutes. However, the awakening that he just went through was the same as dealing with three waves in that duration!

Something he clearly wasn't ready for.

'You almost got me killed Asna.'

He scolded her while staring at the ceiling with bloodied eyes that allowed him to see everything in red.

'And what's wrong with my eyes? Did I awaken ability at 1%? This has never happened before to anyone.' He grinned, wondering, 'Maybe this is because of the ancestral bloodline? So bad-ass to be able to see everything in red.'

"Your blood is blocking your vision you retard." She facepalmed and chided him, "Get a grip, you are embarrassing the J?rmungandr bloodline."

She truly began to regret advising this idiot to merge with a primogenitor bloodline, as she felt that he did not deserve even an ounce of blood from a being that was born in the early days of the universe.

"Though so as well. I just wanted to mess with you."

Not embarrassed in the slightest, Felix tried to clean his eyes from the blood, but pain assaulted him immediately as he moved his hand.

His body desperately needed a full treatment. Otherwise, he would need months to recover.

Good thing he prepared a rejuvenation potion, which accelerates the recovery process vastly. To the point, his body could return to its peak form within a couple of minutes!

So he picked the potion from the ground with some difficulty and drunk it quickly. After doing so a pleasant feeling welcomed him, like bathing in a cold spring during the heat of summer.

Anyone who felt this pleasure would wish for it to be everlasting. Sadly, it stayed for only two minutes before its potency declined, marking the successful ending of the treatment.

Felix Immediately stood up and started stretching his body fully, creating a symphony of loud cracking noises. It sounded exactly like every bone in his body was displaced.

"I never felt better in my life." He said with a wide beaming smile.

After cracking all of his joints, he suddenly noticed his long glossy green hair that touched the ground with its dark purple tips.

"Not bad, not bad at all." He examined the silky soft strands with eyes full of praise.

"I wonder what Olivia will say, after seeing that mine is better looking than hers?" He wondered in amusement over his next encounter with Oli, since she had green hair as well.

"Whatever, I have more pressing things to take care of now, than my mutation." Solemn, he let go of his hair and asked, "Asna mind explaining the situation from the top again with more details this time?"

He crossed his arm and sat back on the floor again. It was clear that understanding his new bloodline was a priority to him than cleaning himself up or his room.

"Do you want the long version or the short one?" She asked, smiling.

Chapter 60: The Primogenitors

"Of course the long version. The more details you provide, the more understanding I will have on this bloodline. So try not to miss anything that can be crucial later on."

"As you wish." She took a deep breath and said, "To understand the bloodline you just merged with, you need first to know the history of the primogenitors of elements. You see, in the very early days of the universe, each known element had a primogenitor that has total control and rule over it."

"What do you mean by total control?"

His confusion was quite comprehensible, as he never heard of such a concept before. Even the public data in the UVR never mentioned a word about the existence of the primogenitors and their ways of using the elements.

The only thing he was positive about was that the beasts in the universe were able to only use the same 6 abilities they awakened during their growing phase.

That was it. they could never suppress the number, nor change the abilities. they were stuck from birth to death with one set of abilities they inherited from their parents. The only known way to break those shackles, was for them to evolve.

But that was a whole other story.

"I meant exactly what you heard. Total control and manipulation." She changed her tone to contempt. But before she continued on, she remembered the last lesson of looking down on the human bloodline system. So she coughed and returned to her normal tone.

"You see, both humans and beasts don't really control the elements no matter how high their element affinity is." She fought the urge to sneer and clarified, "You were simply using already created abilities without even knowing how they were created, and who created them. In other words, the abilities that you use are registered in your bloodline, and all you have to do is think of them and they will automatically be activated."

She paused for a second, then said the crucial information she was building for. "But in reality, all of them were but simply creations of the primogenitors, who could manipulate the elements to create what they desire without any limitations on numbers or such."

Agitated, Felix's heart began to beat faster and faster, as he listened to the astonishing power of those beings. Yet, he did not interrupt her.

"So in this sense, the abilities that you obtain from beasts are but ones used by the primogenitors before and passed down to their descendants via bloodline." She paused for a second and dropped a bombshell on him. "This means beasts were actually but normal creatures without any elemental powers just like your human race!! But after being mated by the primogenitors, their offspring obtained the blessing of their parents. Thus getting some of their abilities marked in their bloodline."

"You can easily infer the rest." Asna ended her explanation with a yawn, too lazy to carry on speaking. She was truly struggling to not fall asleep.

Felix easily figured out what happened after. It was as clear as daylight that those descendants must have been able to pass their bloodline further down the tree by mating with different types of beasts.

Thus, creating new species that could use unique abilities, two elements, or more of such varieties.

"The Primogenitors provided the foundation, and the descendants enhanced it over the long period of years to reach its current state. And we humans took advantage of this diversity and created a usable path to gain strength just like other races." He couldn't help but sigh dejectedly at the conclusion he arrived at.

"Correct, this is why I said before that your path was limited and not complete, since you guys are leeching from beasts powers, who are also leeching from their ancestral powers."

"Pffff, so fucking funny!!" She finally couldn't handle it and broke into jeering laughter with hands holding her sides.

Felix wasn't even mad after being shamed like this. The only thing he felt was pure embarrassment at his human race.

After all, the bloodline system that humans took pride in was merely a byproduct of leeching from leeches! Which made it even worse.

No wonder Asna berated his race power system before without mercy.

"But don't worry, Now that you have the J?rmungandr bloodline, you will have a quite high chance of unlocking his poison element manipulation." She wiped her tears and comforted him, "At that point, you will be able to learn and create an unlimited number of poison abilities."

Before Felix could feel happy at this great news, he heard Asna murmur softly, "But you will have to provide me with high tiered beasts that use the element of poison, so I can extract more of his bloodline." She suggested, "And it's better if the species were serpents just like their forefather."

Felix's eyes almost rolled at the back of his head at such dastardly news. He knew that the bottomless pit of his path just turned into an abyss that was impossible to fill, no matter how many coins he obtained.

After all, while the rest of humans only needed to buy two bloodline bottles or a maximum of three to reach origin purity. Felix, on the other hand, had to buy multiple bloodlines bottles just to finish 99% of the J?rmungandr bloodline.

He really felt indignant about this. But who could blame him?

He was just planning to close the hole that affinity rating would cause to his bank account by investing in movies.

But now another bigger hole had appeared that probably was going to drain every coin he had or was about to earn, just to reach the first stage of replacement. Don't even mention other stages.

"Forget it, I just need to double down on my investment plan. Things might turn better by then, hopefully."

Downcast, he massaged his eyelids with heavy shoulders. He could already envision his future of running everywhere to earn coins just to support his bloodline path.

"You don't have to worry about coins since I can store the other filtered bloodline to sell later." Asna tried to uplift his spirit a bit, by mentioning what she did during the bloodline manipulation.

Felix's saddened expression immediately brightened up at her words. Although, he knew that the price wouldn't be the same when he tries to sell it, due to his unknown reputation.

But still, it was better than buying Tier 5, 6, or even 7 bloodlines just to extract a little percentage of the J?rmungandr bloodline. Then throw them in the garbage.

"My heart can't handle such a way of wasting resources." He sighed in relief and suddenly asked, "But how are you able to do this? I thought you had no control over my body."

"Indeed I can't do that yet. But the bloodline you forcefully tried to merge with is a foreign object, and by using my social status to oppress it, I can manipulate it however I wish in your body." She answered him while stretching her arms lazily, like a cat.

"I see, so where is it currently? And why can't I feel it?" He wondered about the way she managed to store it in his body.

"Are you stupid?" She rolled her eyes at his retarded question and explained, "Of course, the bloodline is swimming peacefully in your bloodstream. And with my orders, it can only obediently swim without having thoughts of merging with you." She chuckled and added, "There is no need for me to collect it and store it as a ball or something, you idiot."

"Fuck! you don't have to insult me. How would I know about your perverse ways? You share absolutely nothing with me about yourself." He retorted in irritation.

"Let's keep it that way."

After leaving that sentence, she covered herself with a blanket, preparing to continue her sleep.

Unfortunately, Felix still had many questions unanswered.

"Well, now you should tell me about this J?rmungandr and his story." Eager, he narrowed his eyes in focus, not wanting to miss anything about him.

Asna removed her blanket with an annoyed expression. "I don't know much about his story, since I only saw random bits and pieces about his existence from those memories."

"Just tell me what you know already." He hurried her to cough up everything.

Unbothered by his impatience, Asna closed her eyes peacefully and entered her storytelling mode with a soft voice.

The J?rmungandr primogenitor was born to manage and control the poison element in the universe. Any race that relied on poison could only worship him and bow to his greatness. The majority didn't do so out of respect, but merely to not bring his wrath upon them, since he could easily chain their race from using his element. Thus, leaving them naked to everyone's aggression.

This was during the early days of the universe, way before even the dark ages era. That period of time was being referred to as the Primogenitors Era.

It was called as such, due to their never-ending roaming within the universe and obtaining the worship of every race that uses their element. However, because they entangled themselves with mortal lives they had to face the consequences of dealing with their affairs.

Wars, betrayals, massacres, and sacrilegious actions, like destroying the primogenitor statues, pushed those ancestral beings into having constant friction between them. Some were easily resolved, while some turned into an enmity that could be solved only by death.

"They are not immortal?!" Felix didn't want to interrupt her, but he couldn't help it after hearing such boggling news. He believed that since they had such a high status in the universe, they should possess immortality like Asna.

"Well, they could live for eternity without problems." She gave a half shrug while sleeping, "But, they were not unkillable like my race."

"I see, no wonder information about them was nonexistent in the UVR. They must have died at some point in time." Felix nodded his head in understanding.

His conclusion was based only on what she said. After all, she mentioned indirectly that primogenitors were socially active in the universe. So for them to have no presence at all in this era, it meant only that either they died or were asleep somewhere. Heck, they might even be sealed by someone like it happened to Asna!

"I don't know about others, but the J?rmungandr definitely died."

Before letting Felix interrupt her again and delay her time of returning to sleep, she explained, "I saw his death in those memories. It was during a battle against the thunder primogenitor. I didn't see the full battle, but only the last few seconds of it." She yawned and continued softly, forcing Felix to focus on her mosquito buzzing tone. "I saw that the thunder primogenitor smashed a colossal hammer on the head of the Midgard serpent. The blow was so powerful, three planets nearby were turned to dust by its aftershock."

Goosebumps coursed through Felix's naked upper body, making him shiver in coldness and excitement. His heartbeats quickened after imagining such a godly battle. He really wished he was there to spectate it.

Just as he opened his mouth, Asna interrupted him, "The thunder primogenitor died soon after landing his blow. To be exact, he stopped breathing immediately after moving 9 meters forward. Probably due to a poison inflicted by J?rmungandr."

"This is all I managed to see. If you want more information, get me as much as possible of his bloodline. Now let me sleep in peace." She shooed him away and cut off the connection, not wanting to hear a single word from him anymore.

This time, Felix left her be, as she already shared everything that she knew.

"Thank you Asna."

He didn't know if she heard him or not, but Felix wasn't an ungrateful prick to not show gratitude when it's due.

Asna truly deserved to be thanked after today's effort. She might have been lazy for the past months, but immediately after making her move, she proved that her assistance was by far the greatest cheat he could have ever asked for.

Felix stood up, planning to go clean himself up. As for the 19% AnoMamba bloodline that was still in his body? he decided to leave it be for now since no harm was done to his body. But, most importantly, he didn't want to ruin Asna's sleep again.

He walked towards the bathroom naked with his eyebrows frowned. Only now did his nasty smell assault his nose. Thus, he ignored everything and jumped straight inside the shower.

.....

15 minutes later...

He stepped outside, dragging his long wet hair behind him like he was pulling a truck.

"I really need a haircut, at least cut it to shoulder-length, lest it hinders my training." He thought while dragging his heavy hair next to the mirror of the bathroom.

The moment he saw his reflection on it. An out-loud exclamation escaped his mouth.

"Who the fuck are you?!!"