

Supremacy 581

Chapter 581: Broke Fatty's Tantrum!

Unlike the previous treasures, the squad didn't beam everything in the center and piled them up. Instead, they beamed one natural treasure at a time and a tightly sealed container.

The instant the natural treasure finishes up its manifestation, they place it gently inside the container and sealed shut.

Then, they repeat the process with all-natural treasures that had been carefully harvested.

The rest remained in their spatial cards for now since the moment they get exposed to air, they would start losing their beneficial properties rapidly.

Before long, there were more than 20 sealed containers stacked against each other right in the middle.

"Queen, please scan them." Felix requested with gleaming eyes.

The Queen disclosed the results a moment later, "10 A grade natural treasures and 11 B grade natural treasures. The dominant element absorbed is the sand element. Five of them are not registered in the database..."

The Queen kept giving intricate details and the rest listened impatiently, waiting only for her to reach the total market price they would net them.

In a few moments, the Queen proclaimed, "The total tally is 160 billion SC."

Everyone had already expected to hear a considerable number but their emotions still had been stirred, feeling excited, shocked, agitated, and more emotions that kept conflicting with each other.

"160 billion! This is just the market price!" Too agitated, Declan clutched his heart, feeling he was about to have a heart attack any moment.

Who could blame him?

The true value of those treasures was actually above 400 billion SC since they would be sold at 30 billion to 40 billion apiece in renowned auctions!

Adding to the previous 150 billion, they had already crossed half a trillion of profit without even calculating the rest of the natural treasures inside their spatial cards!

"Even 1% of such profit is enough to set me for life." Samir breathed ruggedly as he imagined having five billion SC in his bank account!

Since the contract was valid for only 10 separated ruins explorations, by the time he leaves the squad, he would be a filthy rich man!

This implied to all of them besides Malak and Erik.

Felix who's getting 90% of the pie, would have enough natural treasures to push himself into the 3rd mark and even the 4th mark in his devourer cultivation system!

Such a massive strength boost is good enough for his future games and also to start the experiment to host the lightning manipulation!

"Good work everyone." Pleased, Felix smiled faintly while gesturing for Malak to beam everything in her bracelet.

When the table was cleared, Erik asked, "Boss, how about the rest?"

"Transmit them straight to Malak's Bracelet." Felix said.

Instead of manifesting them outside, the straight transmission allows the items and materials to be sent from one bracelet to another, as long as they were nearby and both had given permission.

The squad swiftly did as ordered and started watching condensed blue particles travel forming a line between each of their bracelet and Malak.

This mesmerizing image lasted for only a couple of seconds.

"It's done." Malak said.

Upon hearing so, Felix requested her to let the Queen scan them from within.

When Malak agreed, the Queen took less than a split second before giving them the final results.

60 Billion SC!

It wasn't as good as the previous batch since they were harvested perfectly, but they would still be getting another 200 billion SC if sold in auctions.

"So our final earnings should be 700 billion SC more or less." Felix would be lying if he said that he wasn't extremely satisfied with the results.

He already anticipated a higher number than this if they managed to finish the entire ruins but he was still content with what they got considering the many variables surfacing.

"Boss, are you going to sell everything?" Erik inquired while smiling foolishly.

"No, I will give you guys 70 billion SC to split among yourselves right now. It's your 10% from 700 billion SC." Felix clarified his reason for doing so, "The Organization will be taking the treasures for their research projects."

"I don't care what they use them for as long as I get my split." Khodri smiled widely.

The rest also didn't reject the proposition since 70 billion was truly their fair share.

It might not be their exact share since they needed to sell everything first, but it was more than good enough for them.

They weren't stupid to go against the Organization's plans for a couple of few missing millions.

"Alright, this meeting is concluded for now." Felix shoed them with his hand and said, "Go rest for a couple of hours, we will continue our discussion after."

The moment they heard so, a wave of exhaustion had hit all of them, reminding them of everything they had gone through in the ruins.

They weren't physically exhausted but mentally.

"I will be taking a nap, wake up when the meeting starts." Erik yawned while standing up.

The rest each gave their own reasons and started emptying the room one by one.

Even Felix didn't hang around as he had disappeared into light particles.

When he opened his eyes in his UVR's house, the first thing he did was ask Lady Sphinx, "Elder, I believe that I have reached at least 20% in my 2nd mark. How long do you think I will be in hibernation for if I ate enough natural treasures to take me straight to the peak?"

"Probably four months?" Lady Sphinx closed a book that was on her lap and clarified, "After each mark you pass, the next hibernations would be lasting for longer periods of time."

"That's quite bad." Felix knitted his eyebrows at the sound of that, not liking the idea of sleeping half a year to years for one upgrade.

He had so much to do every day and having those long slumbers would definitely interrupt his lifestyle and mess it up badly.

"Is there any method to lower the hibernations periods?" Felix wondered with a hopeful tone.

"Nope." Lady Sphinx said bluntly, "Those hibernations are a must so your body can absorb the energies and benefit from them. The more you absorb, the harder it gets for your body to keep doing so. Hence, why the process keeps getting slower which increases the period."

Felix would be lying if he said that wasn't a bit discouraging. But, he could only live to adapt to those hibernations.

If he didn't want them, he could still continue absorbing natural treasures on daily basis instead of shoving them all in a single minute.

However, if he chose this method, it would take him much longer than using the hibernations method.

Felix could guess that there would be a three months increase at a minimum.

"I can't go slow if I want to keep up with the strength of the players in my next games." Felix said with a firm tone, knowing that the moment he relaxes would be the day he loses a game.

"If I sent Fatty to deliver the natural treasures from my spaceship to the cargo company, it will take him three days. The cargo company would take at least 15 days to reach the witch empire, then another 3 days for an additional wormhole delivery."

Felix started calculating the time spent for the treasures to arrive at his room if he acted right now.

When the results came through, he realized that there was a high chance of him skipping the 2nd-semester final exams!

But if he waited until he finishes them, he wouldn't be able to participate in the games or actually possess enough strength to undergo the experiment.

"Don't worry about the exams." Lady Sphinx said casually, "I will inform my student to postpone it until you are ready."

"Neat." Felix smiled faintly.

He already expected Lady Sphinx to intervene like this since the experiment was far more important than anything in her eyes.

"Let's see what that Fatty has been doing." Felix quickly dialed Fatty Bodidi and waited for less than half a second before the call got connected.

"Sob! Sob! Boss, you finally called!" Fatty's pitiful cries resounded loudly in Felix's mind, getting him irritated instantly.

The Space Worm race had one of the worst cry noises in the universe as it resembled a banshee screech.

"Stop bleeding my ears you fat f*ck." Felix placed his bracelet away from his ears as he cursed.

"How can I not cry! You are leaving me starving to death with your low-order count!" Fatty Bodidi cried loudly, "You keep asking for delivery from 15 days to 15 days. That's too few and I can't keep my body mass with the earnings I get from them!"

"It should have been more than enough if you were able to get a f*cking diet already." Felix scoffed, not buying his fake whining.

He had no intentions of making deliveries each week since the galactical shipment fees weren't a joke!

Just in his previous delivery, he had to pay a total of 49 million SC.

This includes Bodidi's payment, the cargo company's fees, and the other deliveryworm's payment.

"I can't live like this! I have already lost half my weight and my friends keep giving me shit for it!" Fatty Bodidi sniffed.

"Why would they laugh at you losing weight? Are your bastard friends fat too and actually take pride in it?" Felix's eyelids twitched as he imagined other fat worms getting stuck in their wormholes.

"Stop shit-talking my friends and you better find me a solution before I commit a star suicide near your planet! I can't take it anymore!" Fatty Bodidi shouted his warning with a maddened tone before hanging up.

"How is it my fault that he is broke after wasting all his money on junk food?" Felix was left gazing at his bracelet speechlessly.

Chapter 582: Done Hiding!

Felix let out a long exhale and started pondering on a method to help fatty earn more from deliveries.

'If that fatty was capable of inter-galactical delivery, everything would have been the same as before.'

Felix knew that it was impossible for Fatty Bodidi to pull them off with his age. His space manipulation and energy weren't adequate yet.

'Though, he can take an exam in the wormhole express company to upgrade from a galactical delivery to inter-galactical.' Felix rubbed his chin, 'Yeah, I still recall that the exam is meant for juniors who want to broaden their horizons by delivering to different galaxies, using private wormholes for their race's use only.'

This would be enough to solve his problem plus Fatty Bodidi's.

However, this depends heavily on Bodidi's performance in the exams since a lot of junior delivery worms participate in it on monthly basis.

Thinking of that idiotic fat worm who only knows how to accept bribes and eat, made Felix lose hope in this plan entirely.

'Like hell, he will pass it.'

'Heey, don't look down on cutie fatty.' Asna chided while trimming her nails, 'Who knows? Maybe his hunger would motivate him to do his best and pass it?'

'Oh, you just gave me a better idea.' Felix grinned faintly and dialed Fatty Bodidi's number.

After a couple of rings, the call was picked.

"Listen up fatty, I have the perfect solution that will help us both." Felix said.

"Really?" Fatty's voice rose up a notch in elation.

"Yes, cough, all you have to do is simply pass the inter-galactical monthly exam in your company." Felix suggested while coughing.

"Inter-galactical monthly exam?" Bodidi's tone screamed of confusion, making Felix want to teleport to Bodidi's place and slap the shit out of him.

The f*cker didn't even know of such a known exam in his own company!

'Does he think about anything besides food? This is going to be an impossible mission.' Felix massaged his temples and started explaining what the exam represents and why he needs to take it.

When he was done, Bodidi replied to him with one phrase, "Hell no!"

"I was always weak in studies and exams. Heck, I barely passed the juniors exam and got this job! So no!" Bodidi refused vehemently.

Felix wasn't even mad as he had already anticipated his rejection.

He simply shrugged his shoulders and told him their future together, "If you pass it, you will be able to deliver my items throughout the entire universe. I will be traveling from a galaxy to another in the upcoming years. If you don't pass the exam, this will further make it even harder for me to make even two deliveries in a single month."

"One delivery per month." Bodidi murmured with a horrified tone, not wanting to imagine his fate when that happens.

He was already struggling to feed himself with the current status quo.

If things came to be as Felix described, he felt like he would honestly die from starvation after he blew all his salary on junk food!

"This your fault, bastard! Why did you sign a lifelong contract with me if you aren't going to stay in the galaxy!" Bodidi started whining again.

"Fatty, you better start working your ass up if you want to catch up to me." Felix cleaned off his ear cooly, "I don't mind leaving you to starve if you kept being this lazy."

"You demon! Since the moment you introduced yourself in my life, it has been going downhill!" Fatty Bodidi sobbed, feeling like he got cheated again.

When Felix made him sign to renew the contract, he told him that he would be paid for the deliveries.

That was enough for Fatty since Felix was making a lot of deliveries in a single month.

But, who would have expected that the bastard would pack up and take off to another galaxy? At least Bodidi didn't.

"Alright, stop being such a crybaby." Felix switched to a softer approach, "How about I reward you with a lifelong worth of snacks if you pass the exam?"

"Lifelong wo..rth of snacks!" Just saying it out loud made Bodidi squirm in his place like he was having a seizure.

"Yes! We can even sign a contract for it." Felix said with a faint smile.

"I will do it! I will sign it!"

'Well, that was easy.' Asna giggled.

'Should have led with it.' Felix smiled wryly as he anticipated some struggle or hesitation but the fat f*ck had just emphasized again that junk food was everything to him.

"Listen up, the contract will only activate after you pass the exam successfully." Felix said, "I don't care if it took you a month or five years. You are not getting a single snack out of me before then."

"Of course, of course." Bodidi spoke with a rushed tone, "Where is the contract? Email it to me quickly!"

Felix's eyelids twitched as he said, "You will get it in an hour after I work on it. I don't want you bastard to bankrupt me by buying billions of expensive snacks in a single purchase."

Felix wasn't lying at all since there were truly some high-quality snacks that cost millions of coins apiece.

He needed to set a limit lest he ends up regretting the deal.

"Cough, you think too little of me."

"I am sure I don't." Felix scoffed and switched the subject, "I will be emailing you now some addresses, go pick up my stuff there and leave it with you for now."

This time Bodidi accepted the order and hung up quickly, probably already preparing for the journey.

Although the deal seems unfavorable for Felix since he might lose the millions worth of snacks, in reality he would be earning much more out of it.

That's because he would be traveling through the universe most of the time and if he didn't have Bodidi who he trusts, he would be left to use a random deliveryworm.

Who knows if he would get betrayed and have his location transmitted? Those deliveryworm all love taking bribes.

"I better start preparing for my journey as well." Felix logged out and went to his closet and desk.

After beaming everything in his spatial card, he asked, "Elder, it's safe for me to leave right? I won't be hunted down by primogenitors or beings at that level."

"Don't worry, I believe they are busy with other important matters to deal with an ant." Lady Sphinx insulted Felix quite casually like she didn't see anything wrong with what she said.

"Hehehe, an ant." Asna's provocative laugh always makes it worse.

Alas, Felix was already numb to insults coming from his tenants. He simply carried on with his preparation.

Since the important stuff was already in his bracelet, he finished in a few moments.

He left the sheets and pillows on the bed since he was going to return in a month or so after he deals with the expedition personally.

He learned his lesson after everything that had gone through in the ruins!

A few hours later, Felix and the squad were gathered in the conference room.

"Everyone feels refreshed?" Felix checked upon them.

Upon seeing them nodding their heads, Felix moved to the main subject of discussion.

"I have decided to take part in the remaining of the expedition. I will be the eyes and also the scout due to my abilities." Felix announced calmly.

However, nothing was calm about the squad's reaction as they were pretty shocked and also excited.

Only Malak seemed worried about his decision as she argued, "Sir Felix, don't you think that it's a bit risky to leave the empire?"

The others reeled in their excitement after realizing that she made perfect sense. They knew that Felix's enemies were as many as the stars in the universe.

Everyone wanted something from him and the only reason no one was making a move was due to him hiding in the capital.

"She is right boss!" Erik beseeched, "Don't bother coming here, we are able to take care of this on our own."

"I concur, we just need to hire another slime and make sure this time that he was enslaved from his birth so he wouldn't be able to split his consciousness without the Queen remaining attached to him." Khodri supported.

What he said did make sense as the only reason why Momo caused them so much trouble was due to their ignorance of him being enslaved in his adult life.

That is what made it possible to separate his consciousness before he even signed another contract.

However, if it was done during birth, the Queen would remain connected to any copy he makes after he split his consciousness, making his chances to escape obsolete.

This was the reason why Momo was able to speak with Felix and the rest after he lost his bracelet.

"This time we can order the slime to always synchronize his vision with us." Malissa said, "So, there is really no need to endanger yourself."

Just as Declan wanted to add something, Felix raised his hand and spoke with a faint smile, "I appreciate the care but I have made my mind."

Malak wanted to open her mouth and retort but Felix wasn't done talking, "I know that it is going to be dangerous to head outside but I also know that I will not out strength my enemies any time sooner. There are millions of them, each wanting a piece. Even if I kept hiding for tens of years, I will still not be strong enough to deal with some of them."

"I really don't want to hide for the rest of my life until I reach the peak and feel safe." Felix extended his arms in a carefree manner and said with a charming smile, "What's the point of living if it's going to be like that?"

Chapter 583: The Ancient Ruins Industry's Rivalry!

Malak and the rest didn't know what to comment after hearing him say that. The only thing they knew was that Felix wasn't going to change his mind no matter what they say.

"Haha, this is the reason why I admire my boss the most!" Erik laughed with a content expression while giving Felix double thumbs up.

'Such a boldness and courage to face the unknown, no wonder he has that many achievements in the Supremacy Games Platform.' Khodri could only nod in agreement at what Erik had said.

"Don't think I am doing this just to look courageous or something." Felix waved his hand dismissively after seeing the looks he was getting.

"I'm doing so because hiring a slime isn't an option anymore." Felix clarified, "Every precaution that you said will be taken when you hire a new slime is not going to work if he decided to break the contract terms and get us killed at the expense of his instant death."

Upon seeing their confusion, Felix reminded them, "Did you forget so fast how Momo told us about his race uprising?"

"But, didn't he mean just slimes who had the same condition as him?" Malissa inquired.

"Don't kid yourself guys, since he didn't mind sharing the news of his race uprising, it only meant that it was either almost impossible to stop it or he wanted us to share it so the expeditions squads would be hiring only vetted slimes."

"I have a feeling that he wanted everyone to hire those vetted slimes and feel safe around them, knowing that it was impossible to betray them unless they wanted to die." Felix smiled coldly and questioned, "What if the slimes had already accepted their fate to turn themselves into a terrorist bomber, who wouldn't hesitate to accept their execution if they managed to pull a fast one in their squads?"

Goosebumps coursed on everyone's skin at the sound of that.

They couldn't help but feel spooked at the image of their newly recruited slime, making them walk on a trap willingly for a slight chance of wiping them out.

Though, due to the Queen's existence, it would be difficult to keep such thoughts of betrayal hidden for long or move faster than the Queen's execution order.

So, this 'terrorist bombing' plan wasn't that efficient when it comes to bringing the squads the most harm.

"You guys don't get it." Malak said with a bitter smile, "The squads dying or living doesn't matter that much. It's the idea of hiring a time bomb that might get you killed or not. Let's not forget that the moment the slime dies, most exploration crews would either be forced to retreat outside of the ruins or in the worst scenario, get trapped inside!"

"Indeed, if the slimes managed to keep sacrificing themselves to install this terror in the hearts of most explorations squads, no one would dare to hire them anymore." Felix sighed, "It's a bloody method and will take years and years of sacrifices but eventually, everyone would be forced to find another method when the death tally of the exploration squads reaches? a new height."

"If this is all true, then slimes truly had lost their shit and were out for blood." Khodri cleaned his sweaty forehead, feeling for the second time a hint of fear from slimes.

But this time, there was also a sense of respect and understanding.

He knew that if his race was placed in the same situation, they would rather go for such a bloody path than remain being seen as tools for eternity.

"Should we notify everyone in the network and also release the recordings just in case?" Samir asked with a worried expression.

"Why?" Felix gave him a weird look.

"You know, so they wouldn't be blindsided like us and get killed in the ruins." Samir's tone kept getting lower and lower when he saw that Felix's expression remained unchanged.

"You have a good heart Samir." Felix smiled faintly and asked, "But, did you ever wonder why we never heard of such an uprising before?"

"Hmm?" Samir got confused at his question.

"Don't tell me that you honestly think that we are the first victims of this revolution or whatever those slimes call it." Felix laughed with a friendly expression.

"We aren't?" Erik's eyes widened slightly in surprise.

"Figured you will think the same." Felix facepalmed at Erik's question then gestured at Malak, "Please teach them how the world works."

The rest of the squad laughed slightly and focused on Malak who began speaking, "It's obvious that the slimes have probably been betraying their squads and masters for years now unbeknownst to anyone because no one wants to reveal the information."

"Why so?" Erik inquired with an innocent tone.

"Think you little dumb dumb." Malak hit him in the head with her knuckle like a big sister and explained, "If they revealed the information, more squads would be wary of slimes. They didn't want that because everyone thinks of other exploration squads as their competitors and rivals."

"If one of them got wiped out, it's a victory to the rest because the ruins they died inside would still remain as a potential venture!"

"Ohhhh!" Erik's mouth widened in shock at the revelation as he never expected that the ancient ruins industry would be this brutal and merciless.

An actual danger was threatening the entire industry yet no one wanted to reveal anything about it or work together to find a solution against it.

All of this to increase their chances to find out unexplored ruins!

"If this kept going, doesn't it mean that the slimes are bound to win eventually." Samir couldn't contain his distress anymore.

"Yep, and it's actually good for us as well." Felix grinned wickedly, "I am able to see through illusions and also do most of the impossible scouting situations that only slimes could pull off. So, while others would be struggling to find an alternative, we would be having a field trip in all our upcoming ruins explorations!"

Everyone cheered with reddened cheeks in exhilaration, knowing that if Felix said that he could that then he could do it!

Since he didn't say how, they didn't feel comfortable asking him about it.

'When were you able to see through illusions?' Asna snorted in annoyance, knowing that the bastard was planning to use her in the ruins.

'Don't give me that tone, young lady. I am doing this for you.' Felix said with a serious tone, 'If we don't get those treasures, I wouldn't increase my strength, making it possible to fail the soul splitting process when I drink elder's potion in the upcoming months.'

'Big sis, is he telling the truth?' Asna narrowed her eyes at him, feeling like he was spewing bullshit again.

Lady Sphinx didn't even bother to glance at Felix before denying his crap, "No, it's called soul-splitting potion for a reason. The pain would be centered on the soul, not the body."

'Cough, I didn't know that.' Felix tried to salvage the situation by playing dumb. Alas, Asna wasn't that idiotic to keep believing his bullshit.

'Humph, if you still want my help in the ruins, you better bring me some movies and also take this bastard Thor out in the UVR and throw him in jail or something. Just keep him away from me.'

Asna cursed as she glanced at Thor who was giving her flirty winks from the window of his house that resembled an upside-down silver hammer.

'I will see what I can do about your first request.' Felix said, utterly ignoring her second request.

He would rather go commando in the ruins without Asna than hang out with that troublemaker again.

After saying so, Felix turned deaf ears to Asna's complaints about Thor's harassment and restarted the discussion about the ruins.

"I want you guys to check on the ruins site situation. If it looked like it was completely destroyed and buried under sand, then find a corner and hide deeply in it until I arrive two weeks later." Felix ordered.

"If the site isn't destroyed?" Samir wondered.

"Carry the pirates' job and be careful about destroying the area above the tunnel or the elevator." Felix looked at them solemnly, "We need to be through so if anyone came, they would leave after believing that the entrance had been destroyed."

"Understood Sir!"

The moment Felix heard their unified response, he gave them a slight head nod and broke into light particles, returning to the real world.

It was time to prepare for his grand escape under the noses of all his enemies!

He needed to make sure that his absence wouldn't be noticed since he would be returning again for the experiment!

So, it would be tough but Felix already had some ideas on how to pull it off!

Chapter 584: The Plan!

"For this plan to work, I need a copy of myself and Sage Dalilia's help." Felix requested politely, "Elder, mind creating another copy?"

"Sure." Lady Sphinx agreed calmly.

"Thanks!" Felix smiled pleasantly since the copy was a must part of his plan.

Soon, Felix went to the bathroom and remained there for more than half an hour, doing nothing but making sure to empty his bowels.

When he was done, he flushed the water and cleaned his hands thoroughly.

Then, he went back to the toilet seat and stuck his finger deep in his throat until his gag reflexes made sure to help him empty everything left in his stomach.

"The things I have to do to use one ability." Felix cleaned his mouth with a disgruntled expression, "I really need to learn how to destroy the food and waste inside my body without relying on such methods."

Now that he was done, Felix left the bathroom and contacted Sage Dalilia, requesting the same army convey to escort him back to the castle.

When she agreed, Felix coughed and informed her, "Elder, I might need your help to leave the planet."

"Leave the planet? Are you insane?" Sage Dalilia immediately rejected, "No, I can't allow you to leave when you are being pursued heavily. If you died, all of my master's efforts on you will be wasted."

Felix already knew that Sage Dalilia didn't really care about his well-being but her master's plans and benefits.

Currently, Felix was bringing tons of benefits in the games as he had bested two champions.

"Sorry, but I must leave." Felix stressed, "I have already received permission from Master."

Upon hearing so, Sage Dalilia swiftly asked Lady Sphinx's copy in her mind.

'Yep, he is free to go.'

'But...'

'No buts, if you are worried that much, make sure to help him thoroughly in his plan.'

'Sigh, alright, I will see what I can do.' Sage Dalilia complied.

"Speak, what do you want from me?" Sage Dalilia's tone wasn't that friendly anymore.

Felix didn't care about it one bit as he began listing the things he needed, "First, I need the drawn map of the military base, showing only a path to the safest exit from the place where the convoy would park. In addition, I want a valid soldier ID to disguise myself in the base. Lastly, I want to enter the spaceport without getting scanned or verified."

"Is that all?"

"Yes."

"How about your plan?" Sage Dalilia inquired.

Felix didn't hesitate to fill her in with the details of his escape, fully confident that she wouldn't betray him and expose his plan to his enemies.

After all, she was under brutal scrutiny by Lady Sphinx in her mind.

After hearing his complex plan and the way he wanted to escape, Sage Dalilia could only offer speechlessly, "Isn't it better to simply take you by a spaceship while accompanied by an army fleet to your destination?"

The casual way she said it, made it sound like getting such a thing done was nothing to her.

As much as it was tempting, Felix still rejected her offer, "No, it's too high profile. I want to get inside and outside of the planet without anyone knowing about it."

"You better make your plan work then." Sage Dalilia warned with a strict tone before hanging up.

Now that he got that out of the way, Felix went to the mirror and beamed his Academy's official uniform and wore it. Then, he waited patiently for Sage Dalilia to come through with her part.

In a few minutes, he got an email with an attachment of the map, a valid soldier ID, a valid excuse in case he got asked, and lastly the approval of the spaceport matter.

Felix extended the holographic map and began studying it silently.

He spent one hour on it, mapping out additional paths in case the one Sage Dalilia gave him didn't work out.

He also worked on the soldier ID to perfect the resemblance.

After he was done, he left his dorm room clean and empty, knowing that he would not be returning for a long while.

...

In a short while, Felix had reached the entrance of the campus and stood near it, waiting patiently for the escort squad to arrive.

He made sure to stand in the most conspicuous place in the area.

'Boss, the target is planning on leaving the campus.' An old woman with a wrinkled forehead spoke telepathically while controlling a small cleaning machine on the sidewalk.

She was glancing at Felix once in a while to not make it obvious that she was stalking him.

'Good work, you can expect the same amount to be in your brother's account in 15 minutes if the target left the campus.' The Queen delivered this message without telling the name of the sender.

The janitor lady thanked the man/woman and kept doing her own job naturally.

She wasn't the only one reporting the news. Felix had spotted at least 10 people were giving him sneaky glances.

Most of them were witches making it impossible to know if they were selling his position or simply interested in him.

Whatever it was, Felix was preferred to have more eyes on him to make sure that everyone sees the entire process of him leaving the campus then returning.

Sometime later, the army convoy arrived grandly as always above the entrance of the campus.

Everyone saw that Felix hopped inside the vehicle in the middle. Then, the convoy took off towards the castle as usual.

When the news got delivered to the patrons, they were left disappointed and frustrated. They knew that it was impossible to make a move on him with such protection.

The only reason they hadn't given up yet was that their superiors believed that Felix was bound to make a mistake sooner or later.

Alas, so far Felix was as careful as someone who's treading on a thin rope.

...

Before long, the convoy reached the castle and Felix could be seen jumping outside of the vehicle. Then, he went inside the castle while the convoy remained to wait for him.

The hired scouts were eyeing everything with penetrating vision while sitting either in front of windows, cafes, in shops...etc

All of them had monstrous visions, allowing them to check on Felix thoroughly when he enters and leaves.

So, when they saw him leaving after spending only five minutes inside, they could only shake their heads in frustration.

The idea of him going in and leaves as he pleases while knowing that he had millions of wanting a piece of him made them feel like he was mocking their passiveness.

'The target is returning to the campus.'

Everyone sent this message to their superiors after seeing Felix getting inside the vehicle then heading in direction of the campus.

Just to be sure, they sent hidden hovercars following them from afar to not get spotted.

After they reached the campus, they noticed that Felix had exited the vehicle and walked away with his hands in his pockets.

'It's another bust, let's head back.' One of them waved his hand at the driver while sighing disappointedly.

The rest of the cars all retreated, fearing that they might get noticed and hunted down. Just because they hadn't attacked Felix yet, it didn't mean that they were safe.

While the moles inside the campus kept reporting Felix's current whereabouts in the campus, the army convoy was currently heading back to their military base in the main city.

When they got inside and parked in their rightful lot, the soldiers stepped off the vehicles and marched back to their stations.

'I am not sensing anyone nearby. I guess they have left?' Felix thought to himself in utter darkness, not having a single idea what's going on in the outside world.

That's because he had transmuted into an electrical charge and connected himself with a tiny wire on the floor of the vehicle!

When Felix had first entered the castle, he transmuted into an electrical charge and attached himself with a tiny wire inside his copy's hand!

The moment they got inside, Lady Sphinx ordered the copy to open its hand, allowing the wire to drop in the ground, unbeknownst to anyone! Even the soldiers, sitting beside Felix.

They simply focused on delivering the copy to the campus. When they saw through its end, they returned to base, taking the real Felix with them.

This took more than 10 minutes! Meaning that Felix was in an electrical form for such a long period!

Thankfully, he had Asna's purified energy, helping him with the consumption.

'I might be in the military base right now. I need to sneak outside without being noticed. Otherwise, a mole might expose me to my enemies and I can never use this method again.' Felix contemplated.

Although it's a military base, making it almost impossible for a mole to be within it, Felix had nothing to lose by playing it safe.

'Hopefully, my preparation to counter the transmutation are enough.'

Felix wished softly before deactivating the ability, allowing his body, AP bracelet, and clothes to get transmitted back to their normal size.

The moment he opened his eyes, he felt like the world was spinning around him while his gag reflexes kept hitting him over and over again.

But, Felix kept his mouth shut at all costs. Those nauseating feelings remained with him for more than five seconds before withdrawing slowly.

'Finally.' Felix coughed while covering his mouth. When he was done, he rubbed his eyes to clean up the foggiest and glanced outside of the vehicle window.

'Damn, this is what I call a military base.' Felix exclaimed with an awed tone after lying his eyes on the glorious appearance of the base!

Chapter 585: Escape!

Unlike the Victorian Era style of architecture that the witch empire utilizes, the military base appeared like a silver metallic futuristic city!

The buildings weren't tall enough to pierce the sky but they were big enough, they almost reached the height of the Queen's palace.

There were multiple hover vehicles of all shapes and sizes, flying tens of meters in the sky.

Meanwhile below, the hover platforms were dominating as the base staff was going back and forth from a building to another.

On the other hand, the soldiers were marching on foot while in their uniforms. The majority of them were orcs, kobolds, giants, and other battle-oriented races.

Felix even spotted a few humans with visible mutations, making him guess that they had a high level of integration.

Although the scene appeared a bit crowded, Felix couldn't help but notice a sense of order and harmony between everyone.

'Hopefully, no one approaches me.' Felix quickly opened up the door of the vehicle and stepped outside.

He was wearing the same clothes as the soldiers. brown mud boots, azure uniform mixed with ash grey color, and lastly a sun hat.

Meanwhile, He had a disguise of another human soldier, who had a tough-looking face and the same height as him, making the disguise much easier.

'It's time to move.' Felix took a deep breath and hardened his expression, appearing quite terrifying with his new face.

Then, he walked casually and confidently towards the mapped-out exit.

Because his disguise actually belonged to no one, he did attract some curious eyes, thinking that he might be a new soldier.

Felix would rather have those looks than have a disguise of a known soldier. At least, he would avoid conversation with his 'pals'.

Before long, Felix reached one of the side gates in the base. No one spoke to him or approached to identify him.

It wasn't because they were careless but because they knew that every place in the base requires an ID verification. Even exiting requires it.

So, the moment an intruder manages to sneak inside, he would be trapped in public spaces.

'This is truly the best gate to leave from.' Felix nodded his head slightly in satisfaction after seeing that the gate was the least populated.

There were only three soldiers in front of it, having their ID checked in by a staff member.

Felix walked confidently towards it and lined up behind them.

The soldier in front of him turned his head after feeling a dreadful pressure behind him.

When he saw Felix's tough-looking face, he quickly focused in front of him, not wanting to start any trouble with him.

In a short moment, Felix's turn had arrived. He stepped next to the staff and placed his bracelet above a scanner.

'I have never seen him before.' The staff member thought with a suspicious look as he eyed Felix scan his bracelet.

In less than a second, a holographic legit soldier ID was manifested before the staff. He checked it thoroughly.

He knew that what he was doing was over the top since if the ID was fake, the scanner wouldn't even accept it.

"May I ask where are you heading?" The staff inquired after not finding fault with the ID.

"On a classified mission." Felix asked, "Want me to tell you its details?"

"Nononono!" The staff member shook his extended hands vehemently.

He wasn't that retarded to dig this deep since he would be placed in big trouble if the superiors got wind of this.

However, that suspicious feeling refused to go away. For staff to get hired in this position, it only meant that their intuition needs to be on point to keep the base safe.

When Felix saw that he was still not getting permission to leave, he knew that he needed to make the first move.

"Is there a problem?" Felix spoke while eying the staff coldly.

He released a bit of pressure on the staff to remove any idea that he had about messing with him.

The card was legit and anything that the staff does next would be considered as a direct provocation to Felix who's now a real soldier.

The staff clearly wanted none of this in his life. He hastily stamped the ID with green light and said with a forced polite smile. "No, no problem, you can head out."

Felix gave him a slight head nod and walked outside of the base. Knowing that he was still being watched, Felix stayed in character as he walked further and further away.

When he finally got out of the staff's sight and checked with his infrared vision that no one was nearby, he removed the mask from his face and beamed another one.

After placing it on his face, he pointed his bracelet on it and the mask began to morph and change color by itself.

It took it less than 3 seconds before Felix had received a brand new face!

This time, he appeared like an average male who would be ignored even if he was the only one standing in the room.

To add to that averageness feeling, Felix had changed his clothes entirely and wore a backpack. It entailed that he was poor enough to not own the cheapest spatial card that costs a couple of millions. Then, he rejoined the busy pedestrians and walked to the taxi station. 'Next destination, the spaceport.' Felix smirked faintly as he merged within the crowd.

three hours later...

Felix was sitting in the dark deviant's cockpit. He was just in the process of removing the facial disguise.

The moment he ripped it away, he massaged his face while complaining, "Having it for three hours straight sure turned my face as hard as a rock."

'More like as hard as your brain.' Asna started nagging again, 'If you weren't that stubborn, you would have agreed on Dalilia's offer and let a fleet escort you instead of wasting three hours in that dreadful spaceport.'

'Three hours isn't that bad compared to what I experienced in my previous life.' Felix shrugged his shoulders carelessly.

If Dalilia didn't give him permission to go inside the spaceport from the 'backdoor', he would have actually wasted more than five hours just to wait for his turn to enter it.

Then, spend a couple of hours more in a queue for the space elevator.

When he reaches the space station, he would be required to wait yet again for an empty docking place for his spaceship to connect with the space station.

So three hours was truly bearable.

Now that he was in his spaceship, he felt that everything he did was worth it.

He was on his way to his squad while his enemies were still camping the castle and the campus like morons.

Only when the moles fail to see Felix in the upcoming days would they notify their superiors.

When the witches began talking about Felix's absence in the classes, that's when the superiors would realize that something was off.

Alas, realizing something was off and knowing what it was, were two different matters.

"You better attend the UVR's classes at least." Lady Sphinx suddenly warned, "After you return from the ruins, you will immediately consume everything and enters another slumber that would last until the exams passed. So, better make sure to prepare in your journey."

"Will do." Felix ensured.

Lady Sphinx had already spoken with the headmistress and informed her about Felix's absence.

Since he wouldn't be on a mission, he had been given permission to rely either on the ghosting feature for the history and theoretical classes while using the UVR for his practical classes.

Just like that, Felix would still be attending the classes while being millions of light-years away.

This special permission wasn't given to everyone so the witches would remain inside the campus.

An environment built specifically to enhance their learning in real life instead of making everything virtual.

Soon, the Dark Deviant passed through the last custom checkpoint.

Upon seeing the infinite darkness before him, Felix beamed ten sealed containers and opened them up.

They weren't filled with food but actually C-grade natural treasures from different affinities.

He opened them up and began wolfing down one by one until nothing remained.

He simply felt like he was filled but not bloated, making him understand that he was still far from reaching the 2nd mark.

'It will happen soon, very soon.' He smiled faintly and left the cockpit, heading towards his room.

When he entered the VR Pod, he requested the Queen to take him towards the closest VIP wormhole, leading to the wormhole expressway that was connected with the Guardian Empire!

The journey wouldn't be as long as the last time due to the location of the ruins being only a couple of days away from another VIP wormhole.

The moment Felix was notified that the spaceship was going at the speed of light, Felix contacted Fatty Bodidi.

"In exactly 16 days later, I want you to be near the Guardian Empire's main VIP wormhole that's connected with the witch empire." Felix stressed with a solemn tone, "Understood?"

"I will charge you 100k SC for each hour that you are late." Fatty Bodidi said with a wicked laugh.

"Fine, just get it done." Felix hung up on him, not wanting to waste bickering over a couple of hundred thousand.

Then, he wore his academy outfit and started preparing for a practical class while concocting some bullshit excuse to feed the girls why he wouldn't be attending the classes in real life.

"How about I tell them my grandfather died and I am busy preparing his funeral to leave my room?" Felix scratched his chin at the thought.

Meanwhile, in a pizzeria restaurant in the UVR, Robert suddenly sneezed out of nowhere and looked at the staff warily, 'Which bastard wants me dead?'

Chapter 586 - Arrival.

7 days later...

"Class dismissed! Don't forget to do your homework, the exams are getting nearer and nearer!" Teacher Djamila shouted behind the podium, hoping that her voice would reach them amidst their noisy chatter.

"Say Felix, how about we hit the bar tonight?" Naima proposed while hugging a book.

Felix glanced at the time and rejected apologetically, "Got stuff to do tonight as well."

"Humph, you always have something to do." Naima pouted.

"Maybe later." Not wanting to remain and deal with her tantrum again, Felix waved his hand at the girls and started breaking into light particles.

"You running again, you prick!" Annoyed, Naima punched the light particles under the giggle of her friends.

Felix didn't hear her as he was already inside his bedroom. The first thing he did was ask the Queen, 'Are we close to the VIP wormhole?'

'We will reach it in 5 minutes.'

'Good.' Felix nodded his head and dialed Fatty Bodidi.

When the call got connected, he asked, "Are you waiting near the wormhole as I said?"

"Yes, I have been waiting for 4 hours already, when are you going to arrive?!" Fatty Bodidi replied impatiently.

"I will be there in five minutes." Felix notified him and hung up.

Then, he called Malak to check on the squad and the ruins.

"So far so good Sir Felix." Malak ensured, "No one has approached the planet."

". Keep your guards up, if someone is going to come, he should arrive in the next 8 days." Felix warned.

"Will do."

Felix said his goodbyes and hung up on her as well.

'Hopefully, those pirates and Momo keep the coordinates to themselves.' Felix wished softly, having no intentions of dealing with another nuisance.

In a short while, the Queen had informed Felix that they had gone through the wormhole successfully.

'Please park 3000km away from the wormhole.' Felix requested.

Since the spaceship wasn't going at the speed of light anymore, it took a minute to reach the destination.

The moment the spaceship had stopped, Felix logged out and sent the coordinates to Bodidi.

After waiting for a few seconds, a tear in space abruptly manifested in the bedroom, causing the air to get sucked right inside while the furniture starts shaking.

Only when Bodidi shiny blue scally head emerged from the hole did the room return to its natural state.

Bodidi pushed himself swiftly through the hole and began hovering in the middle of the room.

He was so thin, Felix had trouble believing that it was him! Previously, he appeared like a round fat worm but now? He resembled a blue twig!

"Bodidi?" He asked while examining him with a disbelieving look.

'What?' Bodidi's antenna focused on Felix.

"I told you to lose some weight not all of it." Felix rubbed his eyebrows and sighed, "So you either get too fat or too thin? There is no middle in your dictionary or what?"

'Where is the money to feed myself, you prick!' Bodidi snapped instantly.

"You better ask yourself that question." Felix said while extending his hand, "Gimme my stuff and let's go eat something in the cafeteria. You make me feel bad for you."

The instant he heard so, Bodidi beamed a spatial card and swiftly handed it to Felix. Then, he asked excitedly, "Where is the cafeteria?!"

"Follow me." Felix ordered the symbiote skin to clutch his feet and take him to the cafeteria.

Then, he installed the spatial card given to him and began checking on the natural treasures inside.

Upon noticing that everything was in its place, Felix nodded his head in satisfaction and wired 70 billion SC to Malak so she could split it with the squad.

He didn't want them to know that it was from him but from the Organization. So, it was only normal to wire them the money after the Organization gets its hands on the treasures.

Then, he sent Bodidi's his own payment. But, the moron didn't even notice the notification as he was focused only on the empty cafeteria before them.

"Food!" Just like an excited child, Bodidi hovered swiftly towards a table then took a seat.

He pressed on the menu with his antenna and began ordering anything that caught his attention.

Felix let him indulge himself freely as he chose another table to sit in.

He didn't order anything to eat but he did beam all the natural treasures on the ground. Then, he removed Bodidi's spatial card and installed his own.

After doing so, he beamed everything inside besides one sealed container. He smiled widely and brought it to his lap.

Then, he opened it up and couldn't help but inhale deeply after his nose was assaulted with a bewitching aroma.

It was coming from a citric yellow flower that didn't have a stem. It had only hair-like roots attached straight to the flower, appearing like a jellyfish.

After enjoying the smell for a few seconds, Felix closed his eyes shut and gulped down the flower in one go, not bothering to even chew it.

The smell might be good but it didn't mean that the state would be heavenly as well.

'A grade treasures are sure in a different league.' Felix smiled while patting his stomach in satisfaction, appearing as he had just eaten a full chicken.

'Elder, how much should I eat if I want to enter just a seven days slumber?' Felix inquired.

This was the reason why he had Bodidi get him the treasures halfway instead of simply waiting until he groups up with the squad and picks them up.

Any chance to increase his strength shouldn't be postponed lest he ends up regretting it.

"I believe three? But just to be safe, consume another two." Lady Sphinx advised.

Felix thanked Lady Sphinx and beamed two more A-grade natural treasures.

Before his face were two treasures worth at least 30+ billion in auctions.

Yet, Felix simply shoved them inside his mouth and gulped them with a sour expression. the taste was five times sourer than lemons!

Felix swiftly beamed a water bottle and drunk only a few sips. Then, he cleaned his mouth with his sleeve and went to Bodidi who had just gotten served by dozen bot waiters.

Felix's eyelids twitched upon seeing the tens of dishes getting placed on the table one by one.

Though, he didn't comment on it and simply asked, "Did you ask around about the inter-galactical exam or prepare for it yet?"

'I have asked around and gathered some Intel about it.' Bodidi spoke telepathically while opening his thin mouth widely, exposing a black hole.

Then, he literally sucked everything on the table within it! The forks, plates, food, drinks! Nothing remained on the table!

The bots waiters, who were still placing dishes, were frozen in their places, not knowing what had just happened and what do next.

'Motherf*cker, no wonder he is getting fat!' Felix facepalmed at the sight and felt too tired to bother with Bodidi's eating habits at this moment.

So, he acted like he saw nothing and asked, "What did you learn?"

'First, the exam happens always on the 1st of each month. Second, only delivery worms who had been in the field for at least a year can participate in it. And lastly, only 1% passes the exam.'

"1%? It's even harder than I expected." Felix frowned his eyebrows.

'1% would have been doable if the participants aren't mostly a bunch of repeaters who take the exams every month.'

"Ooof, that's tough." Felix lost a bit of faith in Bodidi the moment he heard so.

It was already difficult for Bodidi to pass the exam with his learning disability.

Now, he needed to contest against repeaters? Felix didn't have a single doubt that Bodidi would be failing at least in the next 12 exams.

"Just do your best to prepare for them. As I said, it didn't matter if you passed now or in five years, our deal would still be on the table." Felix ensured him.

'Don't worry boss! I'm already studying and practicing for it!' Bodidi said with a confident tone.

"Good, I will be leaving now. Don't empty my entire stock or I will beat you up." Felix warned before standing up. Then, he stepped on the moving elevator and went towards his room.

When he reached it, he got in the VR pod and slept on it without bothering to log in to the UVR.

The Pod was even comfier than a bed.

....

Nine days later...

Asna and the rest were all seated at a round table inside the consciousness space, playing Uno cards to pass time.

"Is anyone going to wake him up?" Thor asked while staring at his cards.

"Sphinx should do it, her predictions are always wrong." Jörmungandr said while placing a card in the middle.

"My prediction was correct." Lady Sphinx defended herself as usual, "It's not my problem if that little thief doesn't want to wake up on his own."

"Well, the natural treasures' energy has already been absorbed. So, he should wake up at any moment now." Asna shared her own piece.

Just as Jörmungandr wanted to reply, they heard the Queen's voice resound in Felix's mind, 'Sir Felix, we are about to arrive at the Shurima planet.'

Sure enough, the little golden planet could be seen from the cockpit window of the spaceship after its speed had been reduced to supersonic.

Felix was the one naming it as such due to the only thing being within it were the ruins.

'We arrived?' Felix yawned while opening up his muddled eyes, feeling like he had a nasty hangover.

Felix beamed two rejuvenation potions and drunk them.

After feeling refreshed, he remained in his place until the Queen informed him that the spaceship had stopped a hundred kilometers away from the planet.

The first thing that Felix did was send a message to Malak, 'I have arrived, can you detect my spaceship?'

Chapter 587 - Preparation For The 2nd Round!

In the Northern Sentinel cockpit, Malak's eyes widened after hearing Felix's message. She quickly asked Samir, "Do you see anything on the radar?"

"Uhhh? No?" Samir answered while glancing at the radar's empty screen.

Upon hearing so, Malak sent a telepathic message to Felix, 'Sir Felix, we can't spot you. Are you still far away?'

'I believe I am only a hundred kilometers away from the atmosphere.' Felix replied.

"Hundred kilometers?" Malak had a bit of difficulty believing it. Especially when she could see that the radar was still picking nothing.

When the pirates arrived, the radar picked their existence from thousands of miles away. That's how good the spaceship's surveillance system.

Alas, against the Dark Deviant surveillance system, it was still considered crap.

'If you can't see locate me from such distance, it only means that we need to upgrade the Northern Sentinel's surveillance system as fast as possible.' Felix said.

It was much better to discover one own's spaceship's weaknesses and try to fix them before the enemy take advantage of them.

At this moment, the Northern Sentinel had faced only pirates with their crappy spaceships.

But, when they end up facing bloodline clans and other strong backgrounds fleets, they would be placed in a bad spot.

'I couldn't agree more.' Malak supported.

'Alright, I have turned off the anti-surveillance system, I believe you can see me now?' Felix inquired.

Malak looked at the radar and nodded her head after spotting a grey dot. 'We do.'

'I will group up with you now, tell Samir not to fire at me.' Felix informed while requesting the Queen to increase the speed towards them.

Unlike them, his radar picked them up the moment the spaceship stopped.

While the spaceship was on its way, Felix focused on his newfound strength.

He felt that he had improved somewhat drastically when compared to the daily doses he was taking. Those C-grade natural treasures were helping him gain 50 BF on daily basis.

But after eating those three A-grade treasures, he felt like his strength had grown by at least 2500 BF!

This pushed him past the 20k BF mark!

'I believe I still have 5000 BF more to cover to reach the limit of the 2nd mark.'

Felix unclutched his fist and switched his vision to the front window that was showing him a gigantic silver cubic spaceship.

The size between the two was incomparable!

It was to be expected since Felix's spaceship was purchased at only 180 million unlike the billion and a half spent on the Northern Sentinel.

If it wasn't for Felix's modification on his own spaceship, adding the red plasma divine judgment weapon, and also coating it with symbiote skin, it would be just a common spaceship with a top-notch surveillance system.

'Let's meet near the ruins site.' Felix proposed while requesting the Queen to head downward.

Malak told Samir to do the same and both spaceships raced to the ruins.

When they penetrated the atmosphere and reached the lower air, Felix stopped his spaceship 30km above the ground and took out the scouting aircraft.

When he got out, he told the Queen to take his spaceship to the exosphere and leave it there hidden.

In his eyes, there was no need for both spaceships to remain on the ground.

Better keep his own in space so it would be able to scout for incoming fleets beforehand and even use the divine judgment to scare them off.

In a short while, Felix and the rest had met a hundred meters away from the site. All of them were wearing spacesuits and helmets.

Thankfully, it was the evening sparing them from the hellish heat.

"Boss, I hope you had a safe journey." Khodri said while bowing his head slightly in respect.

Jones and the rest did the same after feeling some pressure being released from Felix unbeknownst to him. This was caused by his continuous increase in strength.

His pressure was actually nothing compared to dragons and other superior races who could make one have his face planted against the ground by just a single glance.

"Enough formalities, let's head back to the Northern Sentinel and discuss our next move." Felix waved his hand in a carefree manner and walked in front of them.

Sometime later, they grouped in the conference room and this time the head seat belonged to Felix while Malak sat to his right.

"I have noticed that the entire site had disappeared when I looked from my aircraft. Good work on that one." Felix praised then asked, "Did you spot any Tomb Screamer leaves the premise?"

"Thousands of them actually escaped."

Malak informed while showing him holographic pictures of those golden butterflies brightening the darkness of the night as they headed to an unknown direction like a flock.

"They don't pose much danger to us even if they returned." Felix manifested a hologram of the ruins and pointed his finger at the elevator's marked position.

Then, he began explaining their plan. "In two hours, we will be entering through the elevator. We will retrace our steps to the herbal garden and clean up everything that's left. Then, we will aim straight to the 3rd treasury."

"Since it's the last one, it must be stacked with treasures far better than the herbal garden, right boss?" Erik asked with an eager expression.

When Felix saw the looks of anticipation in everyone's faces, he decided to come clean right now lest he ends up killing them inside.

"I don't know." Felix said truthfully.

"Huh?"

"Didn't the Organization tell you the 3rd treasury's Intel?"

One by one, they asked questions with agitated looks, knowing that going in without prior information was going to increase the difficulty by tenfolds when compared to the previous exploration.

"The Organization's squad managed to get inside the treasury but they didn't find any treasures in it but just troubles. Because of their low numbers, they decided to retreat with the profit from the herbal garden instead of risking it for unknown treasures." Felix mixed some lies with the truth and served it to them.

What he described was actually what happened to the pirates. They already had few members and ended up losing a couple more in the 3rd treasury.

Thankfully, they had an exit in the treasury, helping them escape with at least the gathered natural treasures.

So, the 3rd treasury was truly a mystery to even Felix, and with the bit of knowledge that he had about it, he planned on seeking out the treasures it hid.

He was confident that there was something amazing inside due to the difficulty being the highest in the entire ruins.

"Damn, we don't even have a slime to be our vanguard anymore." Khodri clicked his tongue in annoyance after being reminded of Momo.

"Just take bots with you." Felix beamed a four-wheeled silver machine that had a camera on its head and said, "It might get fooled by illusions but it will serve as the perfect trap activator."

"Yes! Now that we have the boss with us, we won't be affected by illusions, which meant bots would do the trick." Jones said with an enlivened tone.

Bots rarely get used to scouting the ruins due to slimes being simply hundred times much better.

They do everything that bots were capable of. Plus, the things that bots couldn't do.

But with the current ongoing situation going with slimes? Anyone would take the obedient bots any day and anytime.

"Go prepare yourselves." Felix clapped his hands twice and said, "Let's this over with before someone comes and ruin the party for us again."

Everyone nodded their heads and spread out. Some went to meditate, some went to play games, and some went to read. Each had their own unique method of mental preparation and Felix left them to it.

Unlike them, he logged into the UVR and went to Jörmungandr's UVR room to spend those two hours, bathing in the poison swamp.

He never stopped doing this to increase his affinity with poison so he could actually use external poisonous abilities in his fights.

So far, the progress had been going too slow and Jörmungandr had explained to him that it wasn't just his talent alone affecting this but actually the virtual aspect of the affinity.

The Queen might have copied the poisonous particles to a terrifying degree but at the end of the day, it is still just a virtual copy.

'If I want my affinity to increase noticeably, I need to build my own herbal garden, filled with nothing but A-grade poisonous natural treasures.' Felix smiled bitterly, 'How am I supposed to do that when I eat those treasures for breakfast, lunch, and dinner?'

The worst part, he realized that he would be facing the same issue with the lightning element and the upcoming other elements.

He didn't dare to think about what he would need to do if he used a rare element, like space, time, void, destructions...etc, in his 3rd stage of replacement.

The resources needed to keep Felix moving up and up were simply enough to make an entire empire bankrupt!

Alas, this was the price needed for a human being to break the chains imposed on him by the universe and be seated with the greats at the peak of the pyramid....

Chapter 588 - Finding An Alternative Way To Increase Poison Affinity.

Before long, the 2 hours of preparation had passed by, and the squad had gathered in front of the spaceship's entrance, looking all sharp and focused.

Without a single word spoken, they all headed outside and rode on their hover platforms towards the elevator's coordinates.

Due to the illusion cast on it, they couldn't see anything but the golden sand and dunes.

But Asna was able to see a long brownish cylinder tower without a peak, standing tall all by itself in the middle of nowhere.

When they reached the location, they slowed their speed, in fear of crashing into it.

While the others kept looking around with penetrating eyes, hoping to spot it, Felix was getting guided to it by Asna.

"It's here guys." Felix informed while placing his hand on its invisible wall.

the squad stood near him and extended their hands to touch it as well.

After feeling it, they couldn't help but marvel at the owner of the ruins to create such an everlasting effective illusion.

"I will go up first to scout." Felix disclosed while using his hover platform to speed up vertically.

The hover platforms were using the same anti-gravitational system as in the hovercars, making them able to go anywhere as long as there was a surface.

In a few seconds, Felix was stopped by Asna after he was about to reach the peak.

Felix used the nanobots on his feet to clutch tightly into the platform, so he wouldn't fall down when it stops.

'What do you see?' He asked Asna.

'It's closed again.' Asna replied while looking at the sealed shut ceiling of the tower.

'Do you see any button, handle, riddle, or anything that could help open it from the outside?' Felix inquired.

'Nope.'

'I guess violence it is.' Felix looked down and requested, 'Malak come up and try to melt the ceiling.'

Whoosh!

Malak summoned her two gorgeous blue flaming wings and flew towards him. When she reached his side, Felix pointed at the ceiling position and gave her some space.

Malak went and stood on the ceiling, then she leaned closer and placed both of her hands on the invisible metallic surface.

Without a single ounce of hesitation, she manifested two fireballs while still having her hands affixed with the ceiling.

This caused the flames to spread outward instead of shaping up like balls.

They kept spreading until they covered the entire ceiling, dyeing it completely blue even those below noticed quite clearly.

No one spoke as they were too nervous by the notion of the ceiling being made out of another extremely durable material.

When Malissa scouted the ceiling during their escape, she mentioned that it was breakable due to appearing just like steel metal.

But, the ceiling opened up before they could test it out.

So, there were some doubts in the air.

"I think it's starting to melt?"

Malak abruptly shared with a hint of doubt in her tone. Since she couldn't see, she could only comment based on her feelings.

Right now, she was feeling like her hands were sinking slightly.

In a few more seconds, her belief turned into certainty after the position she was standing on began to sink as well!

"It's working guys, prepare for entry." Malak informed while flying slightly above the ceiling, working that she might end up falling down.

"The first obstacle has been dealt with."

"Hopefully, everything goes this smoothly."

The squad high-fived in cheerfulness while they kept watching Malak continue her work.

Before long, they began to see molten blue drops falling down akin to rain, making them realize that the ceiling had been breached!

Yet, Malak didn't stop by just creating a hole for entry but continued melting it until nothing left!

Who knows if the ceiling would fail when they began using the elevator to climb up?

"Well done, Malak." Felix praised with a pleased smile as he watched Malak panting inside the helmet.

It seemed like the material was truly top-notch as well.

It might not be as tough as Strucrase but to make a primogenitor pant like this only meant that it was a challenging battle.

Felix doubted they would have managed to melt it if it was an ordinary fire Elementalist.

This was the reason why having primogenitor bloodliners from different unused elements would be a boon to Felix always.

"Move out!" Felix ordered while being the first to jump inside the invisible hole, making him appear like he was free-falling in the eyes of his squadmates.

When Felix was about to reach the ground, he simply used his electrical pull against the walls to force himself to stop.

Unlike the others, he was able to see the walls clearly like the illusion was cast only on the outside.

Not planning to waste any more time, Erik and the rest used their own methods of accessing the tower.

In a few moments, everyone was gathered at the platform that was affected negatively by the molten materials falling on it.

It appeared like 70% of it was melted as well and merged with the molten materials.

However, no one cared about it that much since they could use other alternatives to reach the surface.

For now, they focused on tracing down their steps towards the herbal garden inside the maze.

Thankfully, that wasn't that hard with Felix's perfect memory and the recordings.

In less than two minutes, they were back before the three colored gates.

All of them were closed shut. Felix walked towards the golden gate in the middle and said the term 'yes' in hieroglyphics.

Without any sudden complications, the gate opened up slowly, allowing the squad to have their eyes feast on what remained of the garden.

If compared to what they had harvested, it wouldn't even come close to 40%!

"Boys and girls." Felix clapped his hands twice with a faint grin and said, "I don't want to see a single grass blade left behind!"

Erik and the rest looked at each other with clear eagerness and anticipation in their eyes. Then, they immediately dashed towards the glass garden and chose an area of their own.

They beamed their harvesting tool and started working on the natural treasures carefully, not wanting to ruin them as they did before in their rush.

Meanwhile, Felix kept walking inside the garden with his eyes closed shut, feeling like he was stepping on the immortal land.

Because he had 100% sand affinity, he could sense the sand particles all around him like he was buried deep within a dune.

This feeling is actually almost on par with what he was experiencing in the virtual poison swamp!

'The fact that I can reach the same level of sensitivity in less than five seconds sure makes it apparent that virtual training of affinities is crap.' Felix smiled bitterly after recalling the hundreds of hours spent in the virtual poison swamp.

Hundreds of hours of hard work could be crossed in few seconds. That's the most demotivating news one could hear in his life.

Felix was only a human. He could get demotivated as well when he sees that the hours spent in practice were simply wasted forever.

'Kid, unless you have a method to build your own garden to train on, then you have only two options to increase your affinity.' Jörmungandr said calmly, 'Be born as a gifted in poison or spend years just like the rest, using the UVR's resources and some real-world areas where poison element is its highest.'

Upon hearing so, Felix suddenly jolted in his place and asked, 'Elder, you are the poison primogenitor. It's impossible for you to not have a location in the universe where poison element is dominating other elements.'

'You are right, I do know not just a few places but many of them.' Jörmungandr sighed, 'However, I don't know if they survived the passage of time or not since it had been billions of years when I last paid them a visit.'

'Maybe Lady Sphinx or the Queen could help us with the elimination process until we find a good location for me to train in.' Felix suggested.

'I am not too familiar with poisonous areas in the universe. The ones I know are probably already been taken by other backgrounds.' Lady Sphinx informed.

It was only natural that most locations with thick elemental energies get secured by strong backgrounds for either their resources or simply to send the juniors to train in them so their affinity would rise substantially in the process.

For example, the shadow realm was being monopolized by the Shadowborn Race.

They were one of the strongest 30 races in the universe simply because their juniors get sent at an early age to learn within it.

'Elder, can you inform the Queen with some locations names to see if they are still around or have been taken yet?' Felix requested.

Jörmungandr agreed to it and began throwing out a name after another while the Queen kept repeating that it wasn't registered in her database.

This lasted for more than 30 seconds until the Queen suddenly said, 'Miasmic Volcano is within the database. Should I divulge its details?'

'Please!' Felix said with an eager tone.

'Miasmic Volcano has been found by the Brownfoot family in the Dwarven Empire. It's currently open to the public but with fees charged based on one hour.'

'How much will it cost for me to stay there for at least half a year?' Felix inquired.

'One hour cost 5 million SC, so you should expect to pay 21,900,000,000 SC.'

'What a f*cking rip off!' Felix instantly cursed, feeling his heart getting torn apart just by the thought of paying such a massive amount for a chance of increasing his poison affinity!

Who knows if it might take him years even then? Felix wasn't ready for such a wasteful investment.

'Elder, if you still recall the exact coordinates of those unregistered poisonous locations, I would like to target them first.' Felix said with his eyes narrowed.

He felt that it was more worthwhile to seek those locations that might exist in this era or not than spend hundreds of billions for the next couple of years on a public location that might be already losing its edge.

After all, anything remaining public for so long couldn't survive getting 'polluted' by the people.

That's just a fact....

Chapter 589 - The Mystery Of The Empty Hall.

Before long, Felix and the rest had finished harvesting every natural treasure in the garden, which resulted in destroying its breathtaking beauty.

Only Felix and the girls felt that it was a pity for the garden to be turned this way.

The rest? They were too siked by the tens of natural treasures inside their spatial cards to care about anything.

"What's the total?" Felix asked.

"35 natural treasure." Malak read from a hologram with a joyful tone, "We have 25 B grades and 10 A grade treasures."

Felix wasn't surprised that B grades were dominant since the first time they harvested the garden, he ordered them to prioritize only A grades.

Though, B grades were still great as they could be sold in auctioned with 10 Billion SC at least.

"Good work everyone." Felix clapped his hands and said, "But let's leave the treasures for later and head to the 3rd treasury, we don't want to waste too much time here."

The squad listened obediently and formed a line. Then, they followed Felix outside the bald garden and into the unknown.

...

15 minutes later...

Felix and the squad had reached a decorated staircase that was leading to a wide-open gate.

Some of them received an injury or two during the journey due to activating some traps.

But nothing that couldn't be healed by rejuvenation potion.

"Should we go up? I feel uneasy about this." Malak asked with a worried tone from behind Felix.

It wasn't just her who wasn't liking the fact that the gate was open. They would rather have it closed and for Felix to open it by solving riddles.

At least, there wouldn't be this sense of forthcoming doom if they dared to enter the gate.

After all, who would leave a gate to an important place wide open unless he was fully confident that whoever stepped inside wouldn't see the daylight again?

"I will go take a look. Don't follow me." Felix said as he climbed the staircase, fully confident that nothing would happen to him as long as he remained outside of the gate.

The squad was worried about him but they listened to his order and stayed put and silent.

When he reached the peak, Felix was greeted with the same sight as the one he saw in the documentary.

A humongous rusty statue sitting on a throne while surrendered by tens of guardians in armor suits and holding different types of weapons.

All of them seemed to be made out of normal rocks instead of Strucrase that never get affected by the environmental hazard or passage of time.

The statue on the throne had the head of an alligator and the body of a human. He had his right palm extended forward like he was begging for money.

The rest were standing in the same posture...Straight and upright.

Besides those statues, there was a spacious wide hall and a monolith with the height of a bus in the center.

Nothing was written on it. Hell, it actually appeared like a piece of smooth gold capable of reflecting light.

Felix ignored the monolith for now and focused on the ceiling that was pointy and sharp.

He knew that they were currently standing right in the middle of the golden pyramid, straight below its peak.

They had gone a long way from walking below the pyramid to reaching its heart.

'The exit, is it possible that we can still use it?' Felix wondered while narrowing his eyes at the golden peak.

In the documentary, the pirates had escaped through the peak after they got too close to it.

It happened so fast, Felix didn't know if they had stepped on something to open the peak or it was based on sensory.

Whatever it was, the pirates got super lucky since the instant they stepped inside, the gate had closed behind them, leaving them trapped with those statues.

"Before I trap my squad inside, I need to try and understand what's the purpose of this hall and why is it so important to be placed in the heart of the pyramid."

Felix rested his chin on his palm and began pondering on the mysteriousness of the room.

He already had analyzed the information given to him by Asna multiple times, yet he could never understand what's the meaning of this room.

Why did the owner of the temple build a humongous statue and make it sit on a throne with guardians beside it?

Why was he extending his palm like that? What's the purpose of this empty giant monolith that was placed only a few meters behind the peak instead of right below it?

So many questions that needed to be solved before Felix could even think of stepping inside.

'The guardians are placed five meters away from each other exactly, creating a sense of order and harmony.' Felix thought while surveying the area around him, 'Yet, the Monolith wasn't placed in the center of the hall? It somehow broke this sense of order. It's a bit odd.'

'Why do you think so?' Asna inquired in intrigue.

'Think about everything we had gone through in the ruins.' Felix knitted his eyebrows, 'First, we needed to walk at the same time in a triangle shape. Anyone off step would result in failure. This implied order and harmony. Then, we have the riddles that are always written at the sides or center of the gate in a straight precise line like a ruler was used.'

'Let's not forget how the hives and the gardens whether illusionary or real were positioned precisely in the center of the rooms.' Felix started tapping his elbow, 'Those small details speak volumes about the owner of these ruins being a meticulous person. So, how could he make the mistake of putting this golden monolith a few meters behind the center?'

'If you put it that way, it indeed doesn't make much sense.' Asna agreed to his doubts.

For a meticulous person, it should be impossible to make such a mistake and even in a hall that was built in such an important part of the pyramid.

This implied that the monolith was meant to be placed few meters back. But why?

'Since we established that it was intentional, we need to find out the relation between the monolith and everything inside the hall.' Felix moved on to focusing on the pyramid's pointy peak.

'I have no idea how did the pirates open it up but I am more inclined to believe that it opens automatically if someone got near it too close.' Felix reasoned, 'That what happened with the pirates. This meant the peak wasn't meant to be a secret escape route in the first place.'

'Hehe, If it wasn't an escape route then was it a window for light to come through?' Asna joked.

Just as Felix wanted to scold her for joking in such a serious moment, his eyes widened after he came to a sudden realization!

If the peak was meant to be a window for light, this entailed that in ancient times, this temple was supposed to be above the surface!

So, when the dawn arrives, the light would come through the peak and land on the monolith due to its positioning!

Looking at the reflecting smooth surface of the monolith made Felix realize that the light would be reflected somewhere instead of absorbed!

'Where?!'

Felix looked at what was in front of the monolith and couldn't help but drew a deep breath in agitation when he saw that it was the extended palm!!

The first thing that the light would hit would be the statue's palm!

Felix had no idea what would happen if the light touched the palm but his intuition screamed at him that it was going to be what he was looking after!

The Treasure of The Empty Hall!

'Boss, did you get enthralled by the treasures or what?' Erik sent a telepathic message after waiting for a couple of minutes without a response from Felix.

Everyone was getting antsy and Felix's silence wasn't helping much.

'No treasures here but I believe I found a method to bring them to light.' Felix murmured while glancing at the peak, 'We just need to find a way to bring out the light...literally.'

Felix knew that was going to be extremely difficult due to the temple being buried under the sand and broken pillars.

He didn't forget that the entire ruins site had been utterly destroyed by the pirates and them.

'We need to expose the peak before we even step inside the hall.' Felix decided to take it slow and safe.

After all, he couldn't have his squad inside the hall while others try to dig the peak out.

That's just suicidal since the digging process might last days to weeks!

'It's not going to be easy, but it had to be done if I want to see what secrets this hall hides from me.'
Felix narrowed his eyes at the alligator head of the statue and thought, 'The only thing I am certain of, is that this hall isn't meant for worship.'

That's to be expected since Lady Sphinx's statue wasn't the one on the throne!

Chapter 590 - Facing Off The Guardians!

Five hours later...

The team had already started the digging process and made some progress towards the pyramid's peak, thanks to Erik's active ability Cosmic Vortex.

Because they were digging the rubble and they needed to get quite deep, Erik was allowed to go all out in his abilities.

The first two hours were just for Erik to spam his wind abilities at the site while constantly recovering his energy from stones.

The squad only took it from there when they saw that he had dug more than 10 meters worth of sand and rubble on his own.

"How long do you think it will take us?" Malak inquired while standing near Felix.

"If we going at this pace, I doubt we will be leaving here in two weeks." Felix responded while staring at the squad using shovels and machines to dig.

"It's too risky to remain here for too long." Malak said.

"I agree, we need to use that method." Felix sighed and ordered, "Guys, go empty your spatial cards in your rooms and start using them to dig faster."

Felix didn't want to use this method because it requires the spatial cards to be empty so the sand wouldn't touch the items within.

It wasn't decent to make others empty their spatial cards because it possesses their secrets and some items that could be spoiled if remained exposed for too long.

That's why Felix didn't feel the need to use it the first time since it took only a few days to find the entrance...But not this time.

"Understood boss."

"On it."

The squadmates obliged the order obediently since they understood that the situation was time-sensitive.

In a few minutes, they returned from the spaceship and restarted their work.

Erik pointed his AP bracelet at the sand before him and started beaming it like a vacuum inside his spatial card.

It didn't even matter if he ended up beaming rubble or big rocks as the spatial card accepts anything lifeless.

The rest were doing the same in a five meters radius. This was the exact location of the peak and they were digging just around it not the entire site.

In less than a minute, Jones lifted his hand and said, "I am full, I am going to unload."

Then, he sprinted towards an empty space and began emptying the content of the spatial card freely.

One by one, the others started doing the same. When they were done, they head back to repeat the same sequence..

Six days later...

Felix could be seen joining in the fun by using four AP bracelets and spatial cards to dig the surrounding area.

Those were his tenants' bracelets in use. When the squad asked him about them, he simply told them that they were spare bracelets with spatial cards.

They bought it in a heartbeat since there wasn't really any other alternative in their minds.

"We are getting too deep, watch out for sudden collapses." Felix warned everyone as he lifted his head and looked at the depth of the hole they were in.

It was being supported by pillars they had dugout. They were being enforced by Nicci's vines network that was covering the entire hole.

"I will reinforce them again." Nicci notified while spewing more vines to hold into the pillars and keep the hardened walls remain tough.

Those walls were hardened by Jones's water and ice abilities. If it wasn't for him, they would have no way of dealing with the sand collapsing back inside the hole.

"I am full, I will be back." Felix informed while activating his lightning arcs. Then, he used them to pull himself upward.

However, just as he planned on leaving, he heard Erik's loud exclamation, "I think I found it!!"

Without an ounce of hesitation, Felix turned back and jumped inside the hole, using his lightning arcs to slow himself up.

The moment he landed, he noticed that everyone was gathered around Erik and they were looking at one place.

Felix got inside the pack and glanced downward. He couldn't help but smile widely after seeing a sharp pointy golden tip exposed in the world.

"I will expose it fully." Excited, Erik got down on his knees and began removing the sand rapidly with his hands like a dog.

In less than two minutes, the entire pyramid's peak was exposed!

"Finally!"

"Thank god, I was starting to think that we were digging in the wrong location."

"Same! it's too dreadful just to think about it."

The squad couldn't explain how relieved and thankful they were to see that golden shimmering peak before them.

tens of hours were spent on digging and they honestly would have snapped a nerve if they found out that the coordinates were wrong.

"Why isn't it opening up?" Felix murmured to himself while touching the smooth surface of Strucrase, "Does it react from the inside only or getting close it isn't the key in the first place?"

Felix began having some doubts about his theory but he knew that it wasn't time to question it. That's because the suns were about to rise!

For his theory to work, he needed the sunlight to be there when manages to open up the peak.

"Nicci and Jones, stay here and keep the walls enforced." Felix voiced his orders quickly, "The rest follow me to the spaceship, we don't know how long those walls would last even with Nicci's and Jones' reinforcement."

The squad didn't seem like they were requiring a break either as they had followed Felix outside of the hole and started sprinting towards the spaceship while emptying their AP bracelet from the sand.

When they got inside, they went straight to their rooms and filled their spatial cards with their items.

Then, they went towards the elevator after throwing two boxes worth of elemental stones to Jones and Nicci.

...

Sometime later, the squad had arrived at the staircase, leading to the empty hall. This time, they all climbed the stairs with Felix while having serious expressions.

Felix had already informed them that the guardians would wake up the moment their feet touches the hall.

They weren't easy opponents to deal with in the slightest.

When they reached the wide-open gate, Felix ordered them to stop while timing his watch to the exact time when the suns would be high enough to shine at the pyramid's peak.

'We have less than 5 minutes.' Felix informed the squad of the plan, 'Malissa, I need you to find out the method to open the pyramid's peak. Try everything since our lives depend on it.'

'I will see through it.' Malissa ensured with a solemn tone.

'As for us, we will be dealing with the guardians.' Felix pointed at them and said, 'There are more than ten guardians around without adding the one sitting on the throne. It's going to be extremely difficult for you guys to kill them so I need you to focus on buying Malissa time instead of risking your lives to kill one.'

'Understood?'

'Yes!'

Upon hearing their harmonized firm shout in his suit's intercom, Felix gave them a slight head nod and then dashed inside the hall!

Szlzslzslz!

He used his tether lighting arc to pull himself on top of the monolith and immediately activated his electric field to brighten up the entire hall for them.

'Mark your guardian and go for it!' Felix shouted his order.

'I will take the one on the leftmost.'

'Leave me the one with the bow and arrows.'

'The hammer guardian and the whip guardian is mine.'

'Dibs on the female guardians and the spear guardian.'

The squad members kept yelling at their guardians one by one while heading towards them with their abilities fully activated.

When Felix saw that four guardians were left untaken, he said, 'I will be dealing with the rest.'

Szszszsz!

Felix jumped in the air and used two lightning arcs to propel himself from the ground towards one of the toughest guardians in the hall.

The guardian was 10 meters tall and had two axes placed behind his back and a helmet that was exposing only his eyes.

His eyes weren't dead in the slightest as they began to brighten up akin to two blue light candles.

Crack Crack!

Out of nowhere, the sounds of rocks breaking echoed in the entire hall, scaring Khodri and the rest when they saw that it was coming from the guardians' bodies.

With each step they took, the noise kept getting louder and louder until it stopped abruptly...allowing them to hear only the sounds of their footsteps and the sizzling of Felix's lightning.

Still mid-air, Felix brought out a silver nail from his spatial card and placed it on the tip of his finger that was aiming at the tough-looking guardian.

Szszszsz!!

Blue and yellow colored lightning coursed on his arm continuously, building more force for Thor's Ordnance.

The moment Felix entered the perfect range to hit the guardian's head, he immediately flicked his finger, causing the nail to get propelled like a bullet while encased in a thick golden dreadful beam!

Based on its trajectory and speed, Felix didn't doubt for a second that it was going to hit!

WHOOOSH!!

Unfortunately, his confidence in his ability has shattered the instant he saw the horrifying sight of the guardian moving his head to the side just as the beam reached it!

BOOOOM!

The beam collided with the wall, not managing to leave even a dent. As for the guardian? His rocky grey cheek had turned slightly black after being grazed by the beam.

'Well, f*ck me.' Felix gulped a mouthful when he saw that the guardian had pulled both axes from his shoulders and entered a combat stance while staring coldly at him with red eyes.

Felix knew that he should not underestimate them even though his strength had already surpassed 20k!

The worst part, he wasn't dealing with just one but four of them!
