

Surprised Wife With Twins (Ivan and Jennifer) Chapter 150

Her health and the relationship between her and her son were getting better.

After taking a bath, she sat in front of the dresser in silk pajamas while staring at herself in the mirror.

She didn't have her glove or mask on.

She stared peacefully at the half-wrinkled face and the ugly neck.

The skin on her right hand looked better than the other parts, which surprised her.

At this moment, she realized that there was still hope in her life.

"Doctor Darcie was amazing." Pippa was brushing Aubree's hair behind her and she complimented, "It's just been a few days and we already see the effect. Imagine if she keeps treating you for some time. She can definitely help you recover."

"I think so." Aubree sincerely admired her and there was a heartfelt smile on her face.

In Darcie's bedroom.

Just in case someone caught them, Ivan said to the kids, "Alfie, Diana, you might need to sleep in your room, you can't stay here any longer."

Then they kissed their mommy goodbye while still looking at her, "Good night, dear mommy. Love you!"

Ivan held their hands and took them to their room.

After shutting the door, Jennifer stretched as she was tired from standing in the research room all day.

Someone knocked on the door when she was about to take a bath.

She was surprised, wondering whom it could be.

When she opened the door after putting her mask on, she saw Ivan standing there. He directly walked in before she said something, and Jennifer took two steps back.

He let himself in!

Ivan leaned against the door, shut it, and locked it.

"Hey!" Jennifer took off her mask and asked, "You're gonna stay here tonight? We could be caught!"

Ivan walked towards her while staring at her affectionately.

Jennifer realized something was going to happen. He approached her while she walked backward, "What...what are you gonna do?"

She had retreated to the wall!

Then Ivan put his hands on her waist, turned around, and pushed her onto the soft bed.

“Hey!” Jennifer lowered her voice with her eyes wide open, “You...”

Once again, he kissed her as he couldn't resist anymore. He missed her body and he hadn't had sex with her for days. He couldn't fall sleep without her.

On the same night...

Catherine got more depressed so she drove directly to Emerald Bay instead of her house from the office.

She arrived a quarter later but she couldn't get in.

Instead of arguing with the guard, she turned on the headlights and got off the car.

A maid saw it and walked towards her in a moment.

Catherine then turned off the headlights when she vaguely saw that maid.

“Ms. Collins?” The maid stopped at the gate and was confused about her arrival, “Who are you looking for?”

Catherine asked, “I'm here to see Jennifer. Is she asleep?”

“Mrs. Marsh is not here.” The maid replied.

“Where is she?” Catherine asked instinctively while gazing at her.

The maid shook her head, “I don't know.”

“...” Catherine still got a smile on her face, “Then when will she be back?”

“I don't know that either.”

“...”

The maid gave her the same answer but Catherine could tell that she was telling the truth.

She couldn't figure out where Jennifer could be.

Did Jennifer go back to Sunshine Village?

Back at her house, Catherine was standing by the floor-to-ceiling window with a glass of wine in her hand after a bath.

Looking outside in the dead of the night, she had an increasingly overwhelming feeling that something was wrong.

It was like any woman around her could take Ivan away.

If it weren't Jennifer, it could be Darcie or someone else in the future.

After finishing the wine in the glass, Catherine picked up her phone and dialed a foreign number, she then cleaned her throat and said, "Hello, Mr. Edison."

"Catherine?" The person on the other side of the phone was glad to get her call.

"Yes, it's me."