

Surprised Wife With Twins (Ivan and Jennifer) Chapter 189

Fully recovered, without the mask, Aubree was indeed a beauty.

Dressed in a white housecoat, long black hair down, she looked like a charming mature woman of in her forties. Although she was no longer young, her skin was well-maintained; there were hardly any wrinkles on her face.

After going downstairs, Aubree went straight to Jennifer. She said without much emotion, "You've missed the flight. I'll get a new ticket for you. No matter what happens, I will not change the decision."

"I'll go." Jennifer said, "But please, stop forcing him to do things that he doesn't want to do. If he does fall in love with Catherine one day, I think we'll all bless him."

"Without you, he would've fallen in love with her a long time ago." Aubree was adamant about her idea that Jennifer was the one who ruined everything.

Jennifer didn't argue. "I'll go up to get my luggage and leave at once." With that, Jennifer moved.

"I'll ask Andrew to book the ticket." Aubree looked at Jennifer's back. "He'll be waiting for you at the airport and personally send you on the plane."

Aubree asked Andrew to buy the ticket so that no one would find out about this.

What a thoughtful decision!

Upstairs, the red Bentley flashed through Jennifer's mind again.

Catherine hadn't come to Kelsington Bay for two weeks. And after the only time she came, something happened to the medicine. Was it really a coincidence?

Jennifer was a truth-seeker. In order to find out if this matter had anything to do with Catherine, she went to the lab and check on the video recording from the hidden surveillance camera.

All the equipment here was arranged by Rowan. Rowan was a meticulous person, and he installed a 360-degree hidden camera without dead angles.

When Jennifer found out that Catherine had entered the lab and put something into all the medicine bottles, she took a deep breath. For the first time, she felt so speechless about Catherine.

Aubree was so nice to Catherine. Yet what had Catherine done in return?

Jennifer knew that Catherine must have ulterior motives. She wanted to blame all of this on Jennifer.

Jennifer sent the video to her phone.

In the grassy yard of Kelsington Bay, a small private jet landed suddenly and stopped in front of the living room.

Aubree, who had just taken a shower, saw her son get off the plane and quickly walked toward the living room, and her heart was full of doubts.

At the door of the living room, the mother met his son again.

The mother asked, "What are you doing? You came by air?"

"I've promised Mr. Edison to help promote her daughter's first design piece. I'm taking Jennifer to New York." Ivan was in a good mood, and his jawline was as perfect as that of Michelangelo's sculpture.

At this time, Jennifer appeared on the stairs with a bag. When she saw Ivan at the door and the plane outside, she paused.

Ivan looked at her joyfully, then walked towards her. "Come over, Jennifer."

Jennifer was stunned. Was he going to send her away by himself?

Going downstairs, she asked with a smile, "What are you doing? Didn't you go to the company for a meeting?"

"I'm taking you to New York, to the famous castle manor." As he said, he held her hand, and walking outside, saying, "My mother doesn't need you anymore."

"Why are we going there?"

"To endorse the ring designed by Mr. Edison's daughter. I've promised him, so we must do it." Ivan took Jennifer out of the living room and went straight to the helicopter. Then, he turned back to Aubree and said, "Mom! Take care! We will be back in a few days!"

Aubree watched them get on the helicopter. And before she could utter a word, the helicopter flew straight away.

Jennifer sat next to Ivan with her bag on her back, as the helicopter rose into the sky. She felt like she was going to enter another dream.

And when she woke up, she would still be driven away. This was her fate.