

Surprised Wife With Twins (Ivan and Jennifer) Chapter 191

Aubree stood at the doorway of the living room, watching the helicopter disappear from sight. There was a mixed feelings in her heart.

She called Andrew in frustration and said to him, "Book the ticket another day. Something happened at the last minute."

Turning around, Aubree found Pippa standing behind her. It seemed that she wanted to say something.

Aubree stopped. "What's wrong?"

"Madam." Pippa looked up at Aubree and summoned the courage to say, "Mr. Marsh and Mrs. Marsh seem to be a good match. Most importantly, they are in love, and they even have children, so why do you want them to break up?"

Aubree furrowed her brows. She didn't expect the question.

"Madam, why don't you just let them be?" Pippa felt sorry for Ivan and Jennifer. Thus, she expressed her opinion, "I know Ms. Collins is excellent, but Mr. Marsh doesn't love her!"

"You're too young. You still think like an inexperienced girl." Aubree looked at Pippa with a smile. "Adults don't fall in love, only teenage girls do."

Pippa didn't know how to argue with her anymore.

"Perhaps love exists." Aubree's thoughts were pulled back to the distant past. "But it only exists before one enters the society. Ivan is 38 years old. He has been a businessman for years. If he doesn't put the interests first, the Marsh Group wouldn't have been so powerful today."

Pippa was sad.

"You know what?" Aubree said firmly. "In this world, only interests are eternal. Catherine can bring Ivan something more useful. She is a helper."

Pippa didn't understand. To her, a marriage without love was a pathetic one.

It would be a prison.

On the private helicopter to New York.

"What's in your bag?" Ivan noticed something, so he asked her with a smile, "Where were you going?"

Jennifer smiled back, "Just some stuff. I wasn't going anywhere."

"Let me take a look." Curious, Ivan reached over the bag and opened it before Jennifer could stop him.

Inside was the teacup and the keychain he had given her, and half a jade pendant.

"Why are you carrying these things?" Ivan weighed the bag, "There's no water in the cup."

"The sunshine was good in the yard. I was going to take some pictures of them." She came up with a convincing reason with her quick wit. "After all, they are from you. So, they are special. I'll take pictures and show them off to my friends."

Looking at her beautiful smile, he believed it.

"What about this half jade pendant?" Putting the other two items back in the bag, Ivan took the jade pendant in his hand and touched carefully, "The jade is flawless and delicate, warm and thick, not at all ostentatious. Beautiful! But where is the other half?"

He looked up at her.

Jennifer just looked at him with a serene smile. Her face was emitting a gentle, motherly glow. "I came across this by luck." Then she reached out her hand. "Can you give it back to me?"

She just found this by luck?

Ivan looked at the jade pendant dubiously. But he didn't ask more.

He secretly marked the appearance of the jade pendant in mind and then returned it to her.

Brilliant sunlight poured through the window, casting a soft holy light on them.

Jennifer put away the jade pendant and took his arm, leaning gently on his shoulder.

Ivan turned to look at her, holding her hand with his long fingers, "Why are your hands so cold?"

"Would you warm them up for me?"

"Sure."

Her breath was brushing his ear, so close, so clear.

This scene was like a beautiful painting. Ivan wished that time would stop there.

Arkpool City. At the Marsh Group

Catherine was in a fidgeting mood.

She felt like she was completely finished!

Jennifer cured Aubree. So, Catherine could never be Ivan's wife.

She had added iodine tincture that would corrode the skin to the medicine, but why did Aubree still recover in the end?

She couldn't figure out the answer.

The sudden ringing of the mobile phone interrupted Catherine's thoughts. She quickly subdued her feelings when she saw the caller's name.
