

Surprised Wife With Twins (Ivan and Jennifer) Chapter 200

Seeing Jennifer get out of the car, Andrew was about to walk toward her with the boarding pass. Then he saw Catherine walking towards Jennifer.

Andrew stopped and hid himself.

"Take this." Catherine looked pound. She blocked Jennifer and handed her a card, "Take it as my little compensation for you."

Jennifer's eyes fell on the bank card. She laughed. Why was everybody offering her a bank card? To make her disappear...

"What are you laughing at?" Catherine furrowed her brows, then proudly said, "I've been living in Kelsington Bay recently!"

Jennifer looked up and asked curiously, "And?"

"Auntie Aubree told me that she would only accept me as her daughter-in-law. You've heard it from her too, haven't you ? "

"But her words don't count," Jennifer said, smiling, "Ethan's does."

"You!" Catherine felt insulted. Yet she couldn't lose her temper.

Subduing her anger, Catherine said, "Do you think you've won? But who's leaving now?"

"So, you think you've won?" Jennifer asked, "You're standing in front of me now, you already lost it."

Catherine's eyes froze slightly. A sense of humiliation suddenly rose in her. She was speechless.

"Catherine, can you believe it?" She smiled slowly and said, "Even if I give up on Ivan, he is not gonna be yours."

"How dare you!" Catherine gaped at Jennifer.

Jennifer was calm. Suddenly, she seemed to remember something as she asked, "By the way, since Madam Aubree is so good to you, why did you hurt her?"

Andrew heard it. And the sensitivity of his profession made him quickly turn on the phone camera.

"What are you talking about, I don't understand!" Catherine's eyes flashed with panic.

Jennifer stared at Catherine's trepidation, "You added iodine tincture to the medicines I prescribed. It mixed with one of the medicines, that was why Madam Aubree felt so itchy. As for why she healed, that was because it is perfectly combined with another medicine."

Catherine jerked her neck, "This is a vile accusation! Stop slandering me!"

“I’ve wanted to let you take half of the credit. How am I slandering you?” Jennifer’s tone was light.

“You made a mistake in the medicine! And yet you want to blame it on me?” Catherine was calm, “Jennifer, don’t go too far! You’ll be punished. You’re leaving anyway. Have a little bit of kindness!”

“So, you want me to swallow this secret?” Jennifer smiled. “But you don’t have to be so nervous.”

Jennifer spoke slowly as if enjoying watching Catherine’s panicked expression. “Since I said it, I must have evidence. Do you think there is a med lab without installing surveillance cameras?”

Surveillance cameras?

Catherine stood still, gritting her teeth, her eyes glaring at Jennifer fiercely!

“But rest assured, I’m not going to tell anyone.”

Jennifer then said, “People make mistakes. But please, stop doing stupid things. Never hurt people who are kind to you for your own interests.”

Catherine suppressed the panic in her eyes.

Jennifer’s tone was light as she said, “I seriously wanted to ease the relationship with him and his mother. After all, family is the first priority.”

“You can really help him in work.” Jennifer smiled. “But you should know your place too. The Marsh Group would operate just the same without you.”

“I don’t understand what you’re saying.” Catherine wouldn’t admit it. She shoved the card into Jennifer’s hand. “Just leave! Stop being pretentious! I snatched your husband. This is my compensation!”

With that, Catherine left! Her hands were shaking while holding the steering wheel.

Andrew was astonished on the spot.

Seeing Catherine drive away, he came back to Jennifer and handed her the boarding pass with mixed feelings.

The destination was New York.

Jennifer took it. “Thanks. Then she walked into the waiting hall without looking back.

Andrew stared at Jennifer’s back, somewhat feeling awful.
