

Surprised Wife With Twins (Ivan and Jennifer) Chapter 206

Ivan calmed down and turned away.

“Wait! Don’t you want to bandage your hand?”

He sat in the car. As if he hadn’t heard her suggestion, he drove away.

Mya sighed, looking at the blood in front of her, wondering what had happened to Jennifer.

She even ran away without taking her children with her.

After leaving the Saunders’, Ivan’s Lamborghini was speeding on the road.

More and more scenes flash back in his mind.

Suddenly, he recalled a conversation between him and Jennifer.

” Alright, I’ll take it and spend it carefully. And when the Marsh Group needs it, just send an email to Darcie’s address. I can transfer the rest of the money to you.”

Darcie’s address?

Ivan slammed on the brake and pulled over the car.

Then he googled Darcie’s email address online and sent an email.

“Jennifer, where are you? Why did you leave so suddenly? Come back. Our children and I need you.”

“What on earth has happened? If anything happens, we can confront it together. All right?”

“Sorry. I couldn’t protect you well.”

“Please come back to me. I cannot live without you. You promise to be with me forever, Jennifer.”

However, he received no response after sending those messages.

Holding his phone with one hand while waiting, Ivan gripped the steering wheel with the other. Then he stepped on the gas, heading for Sunshine Village, wishing he could find some clues.

The Lamborghini was parked in front of the bamboo house in the evening.

Edward heard the sound of the car engine and thought Jennifer was back. He rushed to the car joyfully but saw Ivan getting off with a livid face.

Edward dared not look into his eyes. He peeked behind him, but there was no one else.

“Is Jennifer here?” Ivan asked in a deep voice, gazing at him.

Edward was baffled. “What? Is Master missing?”

Ivan could tell Jennifer hadn't returned and sat back in his car. He didn't want to waste time and started the engine immediately.

Edward stood in the empty yard, watching the receding car in confusion. After snapping back from his trance, he dialed Jennifer's phone number and heard that the number was no longer in use. He was more baffled.

On the way back to town, Ivan looked cold, but he was in a panic.

"Look at this one. Isn't this little guy handsome? This is me. I hand-made them myself."

"I want the boy. Whenever I miss you in the future, I'll look at him."

"Silly girl. If you miss me, you should call me. Then I'll appear in front of you right away."

Ivan realized that Jennifer had repeatedly hinted at him that she would leave, but he ignored her constantly. He regretted it, indeed.

What the heck had happened? Why did she have to leave?

The Lamborghini was parked in front of Rowan's villa. However, Rowan also didn't know her whereabouts or couldn't reach her on the phone.

The night was deep, and it became windy. The clouds gathered in the sky.

"Thanks, Rowan," Ivan said bitterly, "Please let me know if you have any news about her." As he spoke, he pulled the door open, sitting in his car.

"Why did she leave?" Rowan asked.

Ivan failed to answer and darted at him with mixed feelings before sitting and driving away.

Ivan went to everyone who had something to do with Jennifer, but none knew her whereabouts.

She seemed to have suddenly dropped off the surface of the Earth. Ivan didn't even know if she had left Arkpool City.

Finally, he drove to Catherine's house.

His Lamborghini was parked next to the red Bentley. With a murderous look, Ivan got off the car and smashed the doorbell impatiently of her house.

Catherine had just returned home from work. Seeing Ivan at the door, she gaped, wondering how long he hadn't come to her house.

Before she greeted him in excitement, he grabbed her neck, glaring at her with red eyes full of hatred.

Catherine felt her world collapse and couldn't believe what he was doing to her.