

Surprised Wife With Twins (Ivan and Jennifer) Chapter 248

Just after sending his message, Spencer's phone rang.

He looked at the caller's name and answered the call.

The person on the other end of the phone whispered, "Mr. Lawrence, Ivan woke up. He has selective amnesia. He didn't even know his mother."

Spencer stagnated. He wasn't very happy to hear the news. "Selective amnesia?"

"Yes."

"Does he remember who he is?" Spencer found it disappointing. If Ivan forgot Jennifer, then he couldn't show off.

Standing in front of Ivan with Jennifer in his arms would do him no harm.

At that moment, Spencer was upset.

"I don't know if he remembers." The person reported truthfully, "I just heard that selective amnesia is difficult to treat. It is caused by stimulation. He might lose his memory forever."

Spencer wanted to curse. "I see." With that, he hung up the phone.

"Spencer, who has selective amnesia?"

He narrowed his eyes and found Georgia standing next to him. When did she come? Had she been eavesdropping?

Their eyes met. His gaze was a little cold.

"Don't look at me like that!" Frightened, she quickly explained, "I didn't hear anything!"

Then she smiled and asked, "Would you like to join us in the golf on Saturday? The director will be there too. We can also read the script together by the way." She extended the invitation to him again.

Spencer said bluntly, "No."

As one of the most popular actresses, Georgia felt embarrassed. She asked, "Why?"

"I have neither the time nor interest to go."

Before Georgia said anything else. Spencer left.

Not interested?

That was supposed to be his interest from what she got from the investigation.

In the beautiful villa, Jennifer stood in front of the floor-to-ceiling window on the second floor, watching the scenery outside. The precious lilies in the courtyard were blooming.

Jennifer had always been concerned about Ivan, wishing to hear even just a little news about him.

So, she decided to meet him in person, or his most loyal subordinates. By doing so, she should get the most accurate information.

She didn't even trust Rowan. But Finnley would not lie.

She told Tammy directly, "I'm going to the Marsh Group to talk with Finnley! Tell Spencer if you want. I'll be back!"

With that, she took a sports car from the villa and headed for the Marsh Group.

Tammy stomped her feet with anxiety. She quickly went to the coffee table to call Spencer. "Mr. Lawrence, Ms. Brooks went out. She said she was going to the Marsh Group to talk with Finnley, and said that I can tell you if I want but she will come back."

"I see." Spencer said coldly, and hung up the call.

"Mrs. Marsh is here?"

"She hasn't shown up for a long time, why is she so haggard?"

"Mr. Marsh has just returned from a business trip and she comes now. Did they fight?"

Jennifer ignored everything. She went straight into the elevator and headed to Ivan's office.

Two months have passed and he was out of danger. But how was he now?

Did he wake up?

Had he recovered?

Ivan's office looked the same as before, stylish, and everything was in order.

When Jennifer walked in, he didn't see Finnley. Catherine had just put down some papers. When she looked around, their eyes met.

Jennifer stopped, not expecting to meet Catherine.

They had one thing in common. They both looked tired and had lost weight.

Catherine was furious at the sight of Jennifer. "What are you doing here?" The fire of rage was about to shot from her eyes.

Jennifer was calm. "I came for Finnley."

“Finnley or Ivan?” Catherine walked toward Jennifer with her hands around her chest. “I beg you, leave. When would you stop hurting him? He had almost died for you! What are you doing here now!”