

Surprised Wife With Twins (Ivan and Jennifer) Chapter 326

"Isn't it good?" Spencer snorted, "If he's injured or dead, we don't need to call the emergency call."

"Stop it!" Catherine snapped, but neither man listened. If she approached closer, they even beat her together.

After almost being hit several times, she had to stay away from them.

"Spencer!"

Seeing Spencer get hurt, she was anxious.

"Ivan!"

She saw Ivan get injured, her heart in her mouth.

Jennifer watched the scene indifferently as if those two men were strangers and doing something irrelevant to her.

Catherine looked at her. Anxiously, she tugged Jennifer's arm. "Why don't you stop them? Why? Are you heartless? Don't you care about them?"

Jennifer pulled her hands away coldly, walking toward the elevator.

Catherine was taken aback and grabbed her to stop. "Jennifer Brooks, you're such a devil!"

Jennifer had to stop.

Catherine questioned, "You want to see them get hurt because of you. Then you'll have a sense of fulfillment, won't you?"

Jennifer shook off her hands again and retorted icily, "You are the demon. You insisted on marrying a man who doesn't love you." With those words, she strode towards the two fighting men.

Anger flames surged in Catherine's heart, her chest heaving up and down. She had an urge to slap Jennifer.

The latter tore the two men apart, standing in between, looking exhausted.

The two men's chests heaved up and down in fury while they stared daggers at each other.

"Childish!" Jennifer remarked.

Then she turned away without looking back.

Spencer followed her.

When Ivan was about to follow them, the door of the emergency room was open. The doctor walked out and called, "Excuse me, Mr. Marsh."

Ivan had to stop mid-step, watching Jennifer and Spencer walk into the elevator one after another.

"Are you alright?" Catherine walked to him, looking at him worriedly.

Utterly ignoring her, Ivan walked to the emergency room and stood before the doctor.

"Mr. Marsh, Madam Aubree refused to accept any treatment," said the doctor solemnly, "Although she's not in danger now, she needs medicine to cure her heart disease."

"Why did she refuse?" Ivan asked carelessly, still bothered by the scene where Spencer followed Jennifer to leave. He wondered if Spencer would hold her hand or her shoulder.

"She..." The doctor's mouth opened as he was evidently going to say something. But then his eyes flashed, and her mouth snapped shut. Soon, two nursing workers pushed the bed out.

Two minutes later.

In a broad, brightly lit VIP ward.

Aubree requested only Ivan to stay and others to wait outside. She wanted a private talk with him.

Ivan looked down at her, looking solemnly.

"Marry Catherine. Then I'll take the medicine," said Aubree, "Or you can watch me die here."

Ivan had studied the details of her heart disease.

If she stopped taking medicine, she would be in danger at any time.

Staring at his stubborn mother on the bed, he replied with darkened eyes, "Whatever." Then he turned away.

"Bang!"

When the door of the ward was shut, Aubree's heart trembled violently. Aubree wondered if she had misheard.

How dare he! He even ignored his mother's life for that woman?

Aubree felt that the situation had worsened after he had lost his memories.

Pippa entered shortly after. "Madam Aubree, Mr. Marsh has..." She was too anxious, wondering if they had a fight.

"Has he gone?" Aubree asked uneasily.

"He walked into the elevator." Pippa could tell that Ivan was in a bad mood from his expression. She guessed that he wouldn't come back to the ward.