

Surprised Wife With Twins (Ivan and Jennifer) Chapter 386

"You mean the bodyguards?" Jennifer shook her head. "It's awkward."

"Not the bodyguards. Someone who can assist you later," Ivan explained, "Then you don't need to do everything by yourself. Just like your temporary assistant."

"Not necessary." Jennifer used to stay in a poor village, so she could do anything and was physically strong. She could only speak when dubbing instead of doing anything else.

Aubree suddenly chimed in, "I'll let Pippa go with you if you don't mind."

Ivan and Jennifer stared at her in unison.

A short moment of silence blanketed the living room.

In fact, Aubree didn't mean anything. She suggested it out of her kindness.

However, it might make them misunderstand. Aubree realized it and added, "I didn't mean to watch you. Pippa is a careful and considerate girl."

Only silence replied to her.

Aubree wondered why she explained, fidgeting uncomfortably.

Ivan was still considering her suggestion.

Jennifer answered with a bright smile, "OK. Pippa can go with me." She liked Pippa.

After Ivan recovered, he also had a good impression of Pippa, as she used to want to bring him and Jennifer together and tell him many things.

Although Pippa worked for Aubree, she liked Jennifer, so she wouldn't harm Jennifer.

"I agree," Ivan said to Jennifer, "Let Pippa go with you. She is your assistant today."

"Ehn."

Aubree asked Jennifer, "When will you go to the studio?"

This was the first time that she talked to Jennifer actively and kindly.

Jennifer was delighted and answered, "I need to arrive at half past nine."

Aubree checked the clock on the wall. "There's plenty of time. I'll call Pippa to come over." As she spoke, she picked up her phone and dialed the landline of Kelsington Bay.

Pippa answered the call.

“Hello, Madam Aubree?” She sounded cheerful. “Will you return for breakfast? Why did you stay there overnight?”

“I’ve had breakfast,” Aubree answered flatly, “From now on, you can move to Emerald Bay to help Jennifer.”

Pippa was taken aback. ‘To help Mrs. Marsh?’

“Pack your belongings and come over. Try to arrive by half past eight.”

“OK, Madam Aubree.” Pippa was confused, wondering why she needed to help Jennifer.

Although puzzled, she didn’t think it would be something terrible.

Aubree also sounded not in a bad mood.

After ending the call, Aubree looked at the young couple. “I’ll go home then. Please take care of Linda Chambers’ matter.”

“I will,” Ivan agreed.

Then he and Jennifer walked Aubree to her car in the yard.

When they watched the car leave, a broad smile blossomed across Jennifer’s face. Jennifer had seen a ray of hope. “See that? Your iceberg mother seems to be melting gradually.”

“You are awesome indeed.” Ivan gave her a gentle squeeze and pecked her forehead. “Thank you, Jennie.”

“You should go to work now. Forgotten you have a meeting in the morning?”

“Keep your distance with Spencer Lawrence,” Ivan reminded her worriedly in jealousy, “Or...”

“Or what?” She stared at him, tilting her head.

“Or I’m gonna teach you a lesson after you return home.”

Jennifer grinned, pushing him into the Lamborghini. “Hurry up! Pippa will watch me. I promise I’ll only focus on the playscript.” Then she closed the door for him.

“Bye, honey.” Her smile seemed to be the most bright and gentle in this world.

Staring at her affectionately, Ivan curled up his lips. “Bye.”

The car bypassed her.

On the way to the company, Ivan pulled out his phone and dialed a number.

In a shabby apartment room, Linda had just finished editing her CV. Before sending it to some recruiting addresses, she noticed her phone lit up next to the mouse.