

Surprised Wife With Twins (Ivan and Jennifer) Chapter 444

Alfie glanced at his younger sister, who was sleeping soundly. "She got up early. Should be on the farm with Auntie Madeleine."

"You should learn from your sister."

"Got it, Mommy." Alfie asked, "By the way, how is it going with you and Daddy? What have you been busy with recently?"

"Nothing. After a few weeks, your father and I will go to pick you guys up. You should know his relationship with Grandma. I hope you can help them."

"Come on, Jennie!" Alfie encouraged her. "You can win the heart of the Marsh Group's president. Of course, you can deal with a granny. You can do it!"

Jennifer was amused by him. "All right. I will."

"Bye, Mommy." Alfie ended the call quickly, afraid of exposing the truth.

Holding the phone, Jennifer put away her smile bit by bit. Her heart was heavy as many things had happened recently.

When she entered the room, Ivan had already ended the call with his mother.

He was holding a book, but Jennifer doubted if he was reading.

"Today is also my late mother's birthday," Spencer muttered.

Ivan and Jennifer looked over, only to find a smile with sorrow on his lips.

Spencer added with a bitter smile, "I also wish to send my blessings to her personally."

He looked away to stare at the moon in the sky.

The room fell into dead silence.

A while later, he asked Rowan, "Do you have wine, Rowan?"

Rowan didn't reply as Spencer was injured, and he couldn't drink alcohol.

Staring at the moon, Spencer looked somewhat stubborn, but his eyes reddened. He still hated Ivan.

"I have nothing to do with your mother's death. Believe it or not?" Ivan had never wanted to explain, so he kept silent when this matter was mentioned.

However, he blurted those words. Jennifer wondered how he was feeling now.

His words made Spencer sneer. Whether he believed it or not, it wouldn't change anything.

His mother had passed away.

Depressing silence blanketed the room again.

Rowan left the room with the medical kit, and so did Jennifer. She left a private space for the brothers for a conversation.

However, Spencer remained silent, and Ivan didn't speak for his pride.

Ivan cast his eyes down to read the book.

Spencer stared up at the moon outside the window.

Actually, he couldn't remember his mother's appearance well. After all, he was only five when the car accident happened.

During that period, all the reports said Ivan had planned the tragic car accident to avenge his mother.

To kill Spencer's mother, he even murdered his birth father together.

When the media pointed out Ivan was the manipulator, he didn't defend himself.

Spencer had hated him all through the years, trying his best to make trouble for him. Although Ivan had taken good care of him, he never appreciated it.

Meanwhile, Kelsington Bay.

Andrew parked his car in the yard. He came to see Aubree and to report something important.

Aubree went to the living room after receiving his call.

The butler served them drinks and snacks.

"Good evening, Madam Aubree." Andrew sat on the sofa, passing Hanson's criminal records to her.

He reported, "This man killed five people. He should have been sued several times for intentional murder, but it was changed to self-defense in the end."

Aubree's heart tightened. She frowned deeply.

"Even though he had been sent to jail, his penalties were reduced, so he was set free in a few months."

Aubree was shocked, wondering if such an underworld force existed in Arkpool City.

"Madam Aubree, this man had an extremely influential background. It seems he's well-protected by a powerful backer," Andrew added, "According to our investigation, his stepfather was an important politician. Hence, no matter what he had done, he could be at large. His stepfather has helped him greatly."

“Let’s go to the police station.” Aubree stood up and said affirmatively, “Submit the report to the police and let the media report it. He must have the death penalty. He’s just a disaster to society.”
