Chapter 3599

In just a few words, Case had designated Jack as a dog and determined that Jack was acting this way under orders.

Everyone was suddenly looking at Jack differently. Even though being a dog was honestly nothing much, it was still not the nicest thing to hear.

Rudy was so angry his face was turning red. Who was Kendall even?

Case had fabricated everything to insult Jack. That disgusting man was calling someone else disgusting instead! It was as if he was not the one in the wrong and he was not the one acting shamelessly!

His skills in twisting the truth were admittedly admirable.

Jack scoffed as he looked at Case coldly, “Stop trying to smear me. You speak as if you’re telling the truth. You told me to not act like everyone else is an idiot, but I should be telling you that instead. Did you forget how our conflict started? Even if you're an idiot, you should at least retain some memory!" Hearing that, everyone immediately realized that they had only started fighting because Case had tried to cut in line!

Jack had been perfectly fine otherwise, but Case had come over to cause all that trouble. If Jack really was there for a certain task, should he not have been the one to start the conflict?

This was more of a coincidence. There was no way anyone could determine who Case would end up trying to cut in the line. So, it completely invalidated what Case had been saying.

Case's lips stiffened, suddenly unable to say anything. In truth, he had actually believed what he said earlier, and he had not just been making something up. However, Jack's words gave him a moment of realization.

Jack continued, "You should just stop trying to make up lies with that empty head of yours. You and your people are already so used to your tyrannical ways. Is it wrong if someone else doesn't want to cooperate? Can you stop with your disgusting thoughts?! And you said I disgust you. You're clearly the one annoying me like a fly!" Case's face was absolutely dark at that moment.

He said through clenched teeth, "Then tell me, what gave you the courage to go against me and the whole of Swelling Tide Continent?! Don't tell me you don't care at all. There's no way anyone would believe that!"

Jack's lips twitched as he smiled coldly, "I just don't like your disgusting ways."

After saying that, Jack could not be bothered to say anything else.

The person in front of Jack had already completed his test. Only three crystals had lit up, meaning that person was only thirty percent compatible with the laws, far away from the sixty percent needed.

That person shut his eyes sadly. It was just too improbable. It was too hard to get a Valley Entry Pass from the stones here.

That person sighed as he slowly walked away.
The moment that person walked away, Jack did not hesitate to walk up the stone.

He truly did not want to waste any more time on Case.

Case's lips twitched as he stared at Jack furiously. That look was filled with intense hatred.
