If he did not make them pay the right price, they would not be afraid. He had to make sure they felt enough pain so they would not cause him any more trouble in the future. In Jack's eyes, the warriors from the Swelling Tide Continent were like troublesome wild dogs. He had to make sure they suffered enough. pain so they would not cause him trouble in the future.

With those thoughts in mind, Jack made his decision. He turned to look at Jimmy.

Jimmy raised an eyebrow and looked at Jack. He had no idea what the other party wanted and why Jack was looking at him?

Jack smiled before turning around and walking a few steps forward causing Jimmy to frown.

Could the guy be regretting things and not planning on challenging the Killing Illusion Array?

Everyone else was curious too.

Jack suddenly laughed and said, “Why don’t we make a bet?”

Jimmy’s lips twitched.

What was he trying to do this time?

He looked at Jack with hatred. Jimmy was certain that Jack was not going to challenge the Killing Illusion Array because Jack would certainly fail, and all his words would be exposed.

He must be trying to set a nice stage for him to retreat.

Jimmy would not let Jack get what he wanted. Jack had said such nasty things earlier and embarrassed them, so there was no way he would just let it slide.

Jimmy smirked and said, “What do you want to bet? Let me make things clear, no matter what you say, don’t even think about escaping. You have to challenge the Killing Illusion Array!”

Jack nodded, “Don’t worry, I’ll definitely challenge it, but it’ll be boring if I challenge it just like that. Why don’t we make a bet on top of it? I'll put forty million spirit crystals at stake. If you win, then I'll give you forty million. If you lose, you have to give the same to me."

Jimmy raised an eyebrow, saying nonchalantly, "Fine! What do you want to bet on? As long as you take on the challenge, I'll join you till the end."

Jack said, "We'll bet on the time! You want to challenge the Killing Illusion Array anyway. Let's bet on who can finish it in the least amount of time."

The moment Jack said that, everyone was stunned again. They thought that Jack really knew how to put on a show.

Jimmy scoffed, looking at Jack in exasperation. He felt like Jack was just there to be laughed at. It seemed like Jack wanted to bet on who would complete the array in the least amount of time.

The bet did not seem like much, but why was Jack so confident he would win?

In Jimmy's eyes, Jack should be happy if he was able to complete three stages, let alone all six of them. Jack even wanted to see who took the shortest amount of them. Jimmy was so speechless he did not know what to say.

One of the warriors that came with them could no longer take it, saying, “Hey, you sure know how to talk! You even want to compete to see who would take the shortest time. You should be worried about passing in the first place!”

“That’s right! This guy talks up a storm. Does he think he’s that amazing? He even wants to bet forty million spirit crystals. Do you think he’s actually crazy or is he just that confident?”

“I think he’s actually crazy. Anyone with just a bit of intelligence would not do that. With just twenty percent compatibility, there’s no way he’s that strong. He’s just a regular warrior. Jimmy might not be as strong as Chase, but he’s still one of the stronger warriors.

“He will definitely pass the Killing Illusion Array, and won’t even take that long. I don’t know what’s giving this guy the guts to compete against Jimmy!”
