“Does he even know what he’s doing?! He’s even betting forty million. How crazy!”

No matter what everyone else said, Jack did not show that much emotion on his face. He looked at Jimmy calmly, waiting for Jimmy to respond.

Jimmy looked back at Jack with a speechless expression as if Jack was crazy.

However, his exasperation was one thing. Forty million was no small number. Since the guy wanted to give it to him, he had no reason to refuse.

Jimmy scoffed and nodded, “Since you want to gamble so much, I’ll grant you your wish. We’ll do as you say. If I lose, I’ll give you forty million spirit crystals. If you lose, you have to give me forty million!”

Jack nodded calmly, not looking worried at all. Jimmy’s lips twitched as he looked at Jack, feeling like there was something wrong with Jack. From the first moment he talked to Jack, Jack had never acted normally. Jack had practically offended everyone he could. Jack took out four pieces of purple gold from Mustard Seed that were worth ten million each. He put them in his palm.

“You have to try to win. If you win, these pieces of gold are yours.”

When Jack said that, many others felt incredibly exasperated.

Jack never relented, as if he was just trying to tempt Jimmy into doing his best. He did not sound like he thought Jimmy could win at all. It was as if Jimmy was an ant that could be killed at any time in Jack’s eyes.

Jimmy looked at Jack and was speechless, “Looks like you really are crazy.”

Initially, everyone thought that Jack had something up his sleeves, but slowly, they started to agree that there was something wrong with Jack’s head. Otherwise, there was no way he would say anything like that.

Jack scoffed, not caring about it. For the sake of his future plans, he would bear with whatever this guy said.

He pointed at the illusory stone and said, “You can go first. Don’t worry, I won’t try to run. I’ll wait for you here.”

Jimmy raised an eyebrow, not believing what Jack said at all. He even felt like Jack was doing all of that in order to escape.

The moment he activated the Killing Illusion Array unless he passed or failed, he would not be able to abandon it in the middle.

Jack was planning on running away during that period when he could not do anything.

Jimmy scoffed, “Brat! I was wondering what you were putting up an act for, so that’s your plan...”

Jack interrupted him before he could finish, “Just say it if you don’t have the guts! I don’t mind going first anyway. I’m just worried you won’t want to bet against me after that.”

Jimmy could not help but laugh when he heard that. The other party really did have a screw loose, or he would not have said something like that.

The ones around them could not help but laugh.

“Every time you say something, you render us speechless. Do you think that Jimmy will not want to compete against you once he sees your results? That he’ll be too scared to bet against you?”
