

No 1 Supreme Warrior

Chapter 3633

Case was pleased by how nervous people were around him, and it filled him with pride. The weak only knew how to fear the strong, and he was feared because he was strong.

Joe looked at Rowan with a proud expression. Feeling Case's gaze, Rowan's lips twitched helplessly.

This man had no self-awareness at all.

Everyone remembered him not because he was strong but because he was annoying. None of the warriors from the Swelling Tide Continent had any real honor.

They were just like a beehive. The moment one of them was provoked, the whole swarm would attack. People did not want the trouble and would naturally keep their distance, yet Case believed he was revered. Rowan just felt like Case was a joke.

Case even laughed at Bjorne, saying that there was something wrong with Rowan's head, but it seemed like the case was, in fact, vice versa.

Rowan could not be bothered to entertain Case, and he continued watching forward.

Case was infuriated by Rowan's expression. Joe had just composed himself, yet that nuisance managed to get on his nerves again!

Joe made up his mind to make sure to show off in front of Rowan. Joe needed him to know how much better he was. Joe scoffed and quickly walked forward, going to register his name.

Everyone around looked like they had been blown away by a strong wind as Case walked over. Everyone who was standing in the middle immediately made way for Case. Case walked in like a king, feeling like he was royalty, and he walked toward the registration area.

Rowan's lips twitched in exasperation, musing to himself how foolish Case was.

The caretaker at the registration area did not care who was there at all. They would merely do their job of registering people with flat faces.

Thankfully, the last fog battlefield had just ended. 20 of them entered, and only two survived. One of them had eleven skeleton badges while the other had seven. They managed to get some amazing things before they left, evidently pleased with themselves.

The treasure a person received was considered a private matter, and the victors could choose whether or not to announce their rewards. Those two chose not to tell anyone what they got, but it was obvious from their smiles that they obtained something amazing.

The reason why so many people seemed to know about the treasures there was because it was either announced by the victors or they got to know it from their fellow disciples. Even without a lot of skeleton keys, the rewards were still of great value.

Just that alone attracted many people.

After one battle ended, a lot of them were still hesitating, wondering if they should sign up or not. Case was the first person to sign up, while Rowan and the others followed behind.

Initially, everyone had their focus on Case. A few warriors who wanted to sign up forgot about it when Case appeared.

Case and the others might be like annoying bees, but he was still strong. Joe could somewhat consider himself a top-tier warrior, so everyone was worried about his abilities.

Case had so many other warriors from the Swelling Tide Continent with him as well. They were very united. It was obvious they were planning something.

At that moment, some of them started to notice Rowan.

Rowan wore regular clothes that did not have any of the markings of a warrior from a second-grade world, which meant that Rowan was from a third-grade world.

A warrior from a third-grade world really stood out amongst so many warriors from second-grade worlds. On top of that, the identity of Case and the others immediately caused everyone to link everything.

“Who is this person? Why is he signing up with Case and the others? Is he one of their subordinates?”
