No. 1 Supreme Warrior Chapter 3881-Jack nodded, but there was a cold glint in his eyes. "It's not as simple as you think. That guy with the unibrow is right; anyone who can enter a level-one city is at least above average. Those warriors are usually so prideful and think so much about themselves, so how could they let regular warriors have a share of the wealth for no reason? They agreed to open up the Toman Battlefield for everyone to participate."

Lourain blinked. "I don't think it's anything bad. They opened the battlefield so they could tax everyone, and everyone who enters the battlefield and manages to survive will need to give them a fifth of their earnings."

Lourain saw nothing wrong with that.

Many had signed up, and even if a third of the total participants died inside, it meant that a lot of them were still alive. Even if it was only a fifth of the rewards, it would be no small sum with the numbers!

No doubt, the best of the best warriors would be earning a huge fortune, and just thinking of it made him envious.

Jack raised an eyebrow and scoffed before he said, "They're full of secrets. They're probably trying to give a fake reason so everyone will fall for their bait. They don't really need to do much, and everything will go according to their plans. They'll get the result they want."

Those words took Marth and Lourain aback.

They widened their eyes, not understanding what Jack was saying at all.

They understood his language and words, but they had no idea as to what he actually meant.

Marth looked up at Jack before taking a deep breath and asking, "Jack, we're both blockheads here. Can you please explain what you mean? What do you mean, secrets? What kind of result do they want?"

Jack sighed, pouring himself some more tea. "Just think about it. Don't the rules have a very obvious hole in them? The warriors bring their storage spaces into the Toman Battlefield. Unless they're so strong that they can rank in the top hundred, no one will know how many demons one has killed and how many spirit crystals they've obtained..."

"You can just make up any random number when you come out. It's obvious that a lot of people will do that, and the loophole is just shown so clearly in front of everyone. You'll see it just by thinking about it a little."

The moment that was said, both of them were stunned. They suddenly understood what Jack meant by that.

He was right. No one knew how many demons a participant had killed on the Toman Battlefield at all.

If they wanted a fifth of the rewards, they first needed to know how much each person gained there.

If they could not do that, almost everyone would lie about it!

It was such a huge loophole, staring at everyone right in their faces.

Just like Jack said, anyone would be able to see it, so why did the top-tier warriors still set a rule like that?

Were they trying to attract more warriors to join with those rules?

When the two of them thought about it, they could not help but shudder. Their throats went dry as they started to sweat. It smelled like something else was brewing.

Nonetheless, a lot of people would be willing to join the Toman Battlefield due to the temptation of potential rewards. They wanted to kill a lot of demons and gain a lot of rewards that they completely forgot about this.

If Jack had not reminded him, Lourain would not have thought about it either.

Marth and Lourain exchanged looks of fear.

No. 1 Supreme Warrior Chapter 3882-Lourain gritted his teeth and said, "So you think it's just a plot? What kind of plot is it? What are they trying to do?"

Jack raised an eyebrow and said calmly, "It's probably related to opening the Radiant Hall, but that's just my guess. As for what they're thinking, I'll need more details to be able to guess. The rules of the Toman Battlefield are quite interesting..."

Marth's eyes lit up and said, "Is it the rule that the space will shrink by half every day?"

Jack nodded.

The Toman Battlefield was similar to Chaos City, but it was different in many ways as well. The biggest difference was that the space inside was not fixed.

Every warrior had a limited time to attempt the challenge. It was a total of seven days, and the space would shrink by half every day.

For instance, if the original space was 10 kilometers, it would shrink to five on the second day. On the third day, it would shrink by half again, leaving it with 2.5 kilometers. Of course, that was just an example. In truth, the Toman Battlefield was incredibly large-more than a few cities added up together.

Even on the seventh day, after the place had shrunk several times, it was still larger than a normal city. The closer one got to the center, the stronger the beasts one would meet.

When one started at the outskirts, they would mostly encounter green demons. The more the space shrunk, however, the closer to the center they would get, and the stronger the demons they would be fighting.

On the seventh day, it would be very easy to meet unique demons or even demon kings.

Facing these two types of demons, most of the warriors would not be able to defeat them. As long as those warriors ran fast enough and did not confront the higher-level beasts, they would be able to survive, seeing as these two types would not attack humans if humans were fast enough. Thus, even if there were a lot of regular warriors that signed up, around 70% of them would still survive.

Those who perished might have met their doom because they overestimated themselves, or perhaps they were just unlucky enough to barge into a beast's nest.

Because of this, most of the regular warriors were eager to try their luck. Even if they could not kill crimson demons, they were still able to kill green demons with teamwork.

To regular warriors, any scraps they could obtain were good enough. Even a few hundred spirit crystals were worthwhile.

To above-average warriors, it was a minute sum, but based on the numbers, regular warriors made up over 70% of all the participants. The above-average ones were over 20%, while the rest were the warriors that stood at the peak.

Warriors frantically struggled to climb higher, and no one would give up on a chance to improve themselves.

The Toman Battlefield was a challenge for a level-one city. Most warriors would not let go of the chance when it was opened up to the whole Whirling World.

The battlefield was basically a stepping stone for them to get stronger. Even Lourain had gotten greedy when he heard about it.

He was so excited that he did not even think about the rules. Even Marth had not realized it.

Their reactions were how most warriors had reacted.

Just because it was a challenge from a level-one city, it already triggered the greed of most warriors. After all, most regular warriors would never be able to step into a level-one city, let alone attempt a challenge there.

The arguments around them grew louder, which attracted Jack's attention again.

He turned around to look, and the man with the unibrow was acting incredibly anxious at that moment. His eyes were incredibly frantic, and he seemed completely helpless.

No. 1 Supreme Warrior Chapter 3883-The man with the unibrow felt helpless about how excited everyone was about this. He clearly felt something was off as well, but only a few would listen to his advice.

The square-faced man was full of thoughts about showing off on the Toman Battlefield, killing a hundred green demons, and getting a massive reward. He would get a lot of treasures to improve himself!

Once the Whirling World closed and he returned to his original world, his position would soar, and all his fellow disciples would look up to him.

He even thought of how he would get anything he wanted the moment he became a chosen disciple. He would get all the girls he wanted, and they would all be fighting to become his lover.

His fellow disciples who used to look down on him would have to lower their heads in front of him, no longer daring to show off.

He was already blinded by greed at this point and could no longer think straight.

The man with a unibrow had a good relationship with the square-faced man and could not bear to look at him act like this. However, he accepted that he could do nothing he could do about the situation. If he continued to give advice, he would be seen as trying to obstruct the square-faced man's future.

Furthermore, the Toman Battlefield had been opened a few times, and only 30% of the people who entered died. Most of the warriors who went inside had profited. It really did not seem that dangerous, but he had gotten a chilling piece of news before this.

He agreed to never spread the news, however. He could not even tell the square-faced man.

The square-faced man was very excited, and a look of disdain flashed across his face when he saw the man with the unibrow's frown. He felt like he was just timid in his actions.

However, the two of them were close, and he would not say anything too harsh at such a moment. After all, the man with the unibrow said everything with good intentions.

The square-faced man patted the unbrow-man's shoulder. "Hey, don't think too much about it! The Toman Battlefield has been opened a few times now, and hasn't it all been fine? I'll have to say, though, you got a point. Those warriors that stand at the peak are always selfish, but they're doing this for a reason! They'll be able to get a lot by just taking one-fifth of the profits. If I were them, I'd do the same, too!"

The man with the unbrow sighed. He looked up at the square-faced man, who was still blind to the truth, and found himself at a loss for words.

He knew that no matter what he said at that moment, the square-faced man would not listen.

The square-faced man would only give up when he was faced with the truth, but this situation was different. If he faced the truth, the square-faced man would die!

The man with the unbrow held back for a long time before he finally said, "This time is different! That's all I can say. This one time, the Toman Battlefield that's about to open, which is tomorrow, will be different from all the ones before! If you register with a hothead, you might die inside! Just wait a bit..."

After he said that, the man with a unbrow immediately fell silent.

The square-faced man was no idiot, even if he was excited. He clearly understood what was being said.

He frowned and immediately asked, "What do you mean? Could it be..."

Before he could finish, a commotion was heard outside.

No. 1 Supreme Warrior Chapter 3884-A man ran inside and shouted, "Those who want to sign up for the Toman Battlefield, hurry and go! I just received a piece of news just now. This time, the battlefield is going to open for the last time within the next two months! The next time you want to sign up, you'll have to wait a little longer!"

The moment that was said, an uproar occurred inside the inn.

The Toman Battlefield would not be open for another two months after this one!

No one had heard of this before, so why did the rules suddenly change?

Everyone started to wonder if the information was genuine, but right after that, more warriors with the same piece of news came in, spreading it around. Those who were wondering if the news was falsified hurriedly dispelled their doubts.

After hearing that, the man with the unibrow's face froze.

His lips twitched, feeling something very off about the situation, but he could not say anything about it.

What he said earlier was already an exception. Any more than that, and it would be as good as exposing the secret.

The man with the unibrow took a deep sigh as he stared at the square-faced man. His companion had a frustrated look on his face as he looked at the crowd before turning to look back at him hesitantly.

The square-faced man coughed and returned to his seat, looking at the man with the unibrow earnestly.

He said seriously, "Do you know something?"

The man with the unibrow frowned and shook his head with a stern expression. "I don't know anything. I just said that because I feel like something is wrong. I'd advise you to think before you do anything. Those warriors at the peak are incredibly selfish; there's no way they'll actually want to help us. Even if nothing happens today, something will happen eventually. Don't forget, the Radiant Hall still isn't open!"

Everyone knew that the Radiant Hall had very valuable things inside that could change a warrior's fate. Even though no one knew about the specifics of what was inside, no matter what, once someone entered the Radiant Hall, their talents would soar.

They could become a warrior who stood at the peak, even if they were a regular warrior before this. It was something that made everyone's eyes reddened with greed.

No longer would they be ridiculed and looked down upon; they would be hailed and revered! This was something every regular warrior wished for. It was not just one person that would be able to do that, either.

There have been past examples for everyone to see. Even those at the peak looked at it greedily. They wanted to improve themselves as well. Even if they could not drastically improve themselves, it was fine as long as they could take one small step forward.

However, it was no easy task opening the Radiant Hall.

They needed large amounts of Heartblood, and collecting this was not easy. Countless battles had broken out because of it, and warriors from third-grade worlds had been tortured to death for it. They needed to be alive when the Heartblood was extracted, so it was an unbelievably cruel thing.

A person's Heartblood would increase the more fear they felt, so they would often be subjected to cruel methods as their Heartblood was extracted while they were tortured alive.

Because the methods were so cruel, they caused an intense backlash. Wars between worlds even happened, and the warriors from second-grade worlds lost a lot as well.

Jack had witnessed many battles that erupted because of Heartblood, and many had died because of it. However, for those warriors that stood at the peak, it did not matter how many died as long as they could gather enough Heartblood.

Read No. 1 Supreme Warrior Chapter 3885

No. 1 Supreme Warrior Chapter 3885-To open the Radiant Hall, regular warriors lived in fear because of Heartblood.

As long as the Radiant Hall was not opened, it meant that not enough Heartblood had been obtained. It also meant that more people would be tortured to death. It was as if there was an ax right above them that would slice their heads off at any moment.

They wanted to fight back as well.

They wanted to retaliate against the top-tier warriors ferociously, but things never went as they wanted. After all, those who stood at the peak were all at level-one cities, and such cities were a massive gate that most warriors could not get past.

Only a handful of above-average warriors and those who stood at the top could enter. Even if they wanted revenge, they could not find their targets.

However, they knew very well that these warriors who stood at the top would do everything they could to obtain more Heartblood to open up the Radiant Hall, and more people would perish for it.

The man with the unibrow was perfectly reasonable to say what he did.

The square-faced man frowned. He looked at the man with the unibrow with a meaningful, serious look. Even though it sounded like the man with the unibrow was making a perfectly valid assumption, the square-faced man knew he had to be hiding something.

Earlier, when the man with the unibrow was trying to give him advice, he clearly had something else to say but changed his mind in the end. He refused to tell the full story.

The square-faced man frowned. He wanted to pursue the matter. After all, this concerned his own benefits. However, he did not say anything in the end.

The two of them had known each other for a long time, so he knew how the man with the unibrow was. As long as that man did not want to say anything, even if he was tortured, he would not say a single word.

The square-faced man sighed, looking at the crowd slightly frustrated.

At that moment, a few of the warriors wanted to try out the Toman Battlefield. Since there was no mistake with the news, they would have to wait two more months if they did not join this one.

This was a rare chance. Those who were initially hesitant felt urged by the announcement and thus gritted their teeth and signed up.

One of the excited warriors spoke to his companions. "I'll just make sure to be more careful. When I see the unique demons and demon kings, I'll make sure to keep a safe distance. I won't fight demons of that level, so I'll be safe."

“I’ll just find a few reliable warriors to form a team with, too. We’ll kill the green and crimson demons together and make a lot of spirit crystals! I’ll make enough to buy a Purple Cloud Pill!”

One of his companions patted his shoulder and said, “You have to be careful. Working with others to kill demons is one thing, but you have to make sure they’re good people. Don’t work with anyone that’ll betray you!”

“Don’t worry! I’m not an idiot. I’ll make sure the people I work with are good people. If I notice anything wrong, I’ll definitely back away!”

Everyone there was evidently excited. They were already planning out how they would get more spirit crystals on the Toman Battlefield.

They were bristling with excitement as if they would surely become stronger when they got out of the battlefield.

That excitement started to affect the square-faced man as well. His lips twitched anxiously, but he thought about what the man with the unibrow had said.

He was so conflicted that he was twitching. It felt so bad that even his breathing grew erratic.

“I know that you won’t tell me what you don’t want to say even if I kneel you. Even if anything strange happens, as long as I’m incredibly careful, I won’t be that unlucky. In two months, I have something important I need to do. I might not be able to make the time to participate, so I have to join this time!”

The man with the unibrow had his eyes widened when he heard that.

Various emotions played in his eyes. He wanted to say something, but he swallowed his words in the end as he found himself at a loss for words.

The square-faced man had already made up his mind to take the risk.

Unless the man with the unibrow spoke the truth, there's no way the square-faced man would turn back. Furthermore, even if he revealed the truth, the square-faced man might not even listen.

After all, there was just too much excitement in the air. It was as if entering the Toman Battlefield would guarantee a bright future.

It was very hard for them to give up this chance. Even if they knew that this opportunity came with danger, all of them believed that they would be the lucky ones.

As long as they moved carefully, they would be able to make it out safely. Being careful did not mean that nothing would happen.

Some things were similar to snowstorms. As long as one were within the area, he would be hit by it. Even if he measured every step he took, it would still be useless.

It was something that could not be controlled. Yet, those people refused to listen. Even if he shouted out the truth, they would just think that he was trying to stop everyone from achieving a bright future.

The man with the unibrow shook his head silently, sighing and not saying anything.

Jack, who had been observing those two the whole time, already had a vague answer in his heart.

It was possible that he still had some flaws in his ideas, but it should be very close to the truth. He agreed with what the man with the unibrow said.

Those warriors who stood at the top had never regarded regular warriors as humans before. Furthermore, regular warriors were like disposables when they were no longer useful.

They were just convenient tools when they served a purpose. There was no way they would suddenly share the wealth with everyone.

It was hilarious just to think about it. Furthermore, that loophole was plain for all to see, but no one seemed to care about it. They had already been completely overtaken by their excitement, and could not see the danger they were all in.

Marth and Lourain slowly started to understand things after being told by Jack.

Lourain took a deep breath and whispered, "That man with the unibrow must know what's going on, but he can't say the truth for some reason. I was wondering if he knew the truth or not, but the moment I heard about the sudden change in the timing, I'm certain that this guy knows something."

Everything seemed to be happening at a frantic pace-it seemed like a coincidence, but Lourain knew that there was no such thing.

This was not a coincidence. This was something that had already been planned.

It was a huge plot!

Thinking of this, Lourain frowned.

He looked at Jack and said, "I'm very curious. Are the number of challengers and the days of the challenge something that warriors can change as they want? Is that fake news that someone just made up?"

"I think the news that the Toman Battlefield won't be opening for another two months is made up to get everyone anxious. They want everyone to participate in this particular challenge so they can gather more people!"

Read No. 1 Supreme Warrior Chapter 3887

No. 1 Supreme Warrior Chapter 3887-Jack contemplated the matter and said with a frown, "That news should be fake. Someone deliberately spread it. Just look at those people who rushed in just now. All of them came in so excitedly and started to shout out the information..."

"Everyone is different. Some people will be shouting everywhere like that, but some will keep quiet, only telling those they know after they hear it. Yet, all of them came in and started shouting like chickens the moment they entered, making sure everyone heard it. This news has probably been spread across all the cities at this point. Everyone already knows!”

Lourain and Marth took a deep breath at that moment.

Jack’s logic sounded right. To them, and it should be what was happening.

The news was being deliberately spread. Changing the rules was not something just any warrior could do. After all, this was the Whirling World. Even those warriors that stood at the peak were nothing compared to the ancient hero.

They were not capable of changing the rules at all.

Since they could not change the rules but still wanted to achieve their goal, they needed to employ special methods. It had to be said that what they were doing was definitely working.

Everyone was already getting incredibly excited, and quite a few people were already talking about going over to sign up. This time, there would definitely be several times more people signing up than before. Yet, no one would be able to tell what would happen after they went inside.

After Lourain figured out what was happening, he felt like his heart was burning. He was quickly losing his mind.

Those people were just too much!

There was a limit to how shameless and despicable they could be.

If Jack was not there, he would have been one of those who was fooled!

He would have thought that he was taking a step forward for himself, but he would actually be jumping into the fire, and end up getting slaughtered.

The more Lourain thought about it, the angrier he got as his fists clenched up tightly. Even if he was from a second-grade world, he knew very well that it would mean nothing once he entered the Toman Battlefield.

He would just be one of the prey inside. If he was not careful and ended up getting caught, he would be tortured until he died. With his skills, he would definitely not be able to turn things around.

Just thinking about how things would have ended up for him without Jack around, he burned up in anger!

Marth was more or less the same, but he was better at controlling himself. His emotions were not written on his face like Lourain, but he was just as angry. It was just that there was nothing he could do.

A deep sense of helplessness caused him to be at a loss for words.

Lourain sighed, "It's a pity that we can't do anything right now. Even if we expose the truth, no one will believe us! Even though some will, they won't thank us. They'll just watch on as it all happens."

Jack raised an eyebrow, "I won't just watch everything happen quietly. Since the Toman Battlefield this time is going to be exciting, I'll join in with everyone."

Lourain and Marth were stunned to hear what Jack had to say.

They widened their eyes, and could not say anything. They wanted to tell Jack to think about it properly, but they quickly swallowed back their words.

Read No. 1 Supreme Warrior Chapter 3888

No. 1 Supreme Warrior Chapter 3888-Jack had his own opinions.

He would not listen to anyone else at that point. Furthermore, it was not like their decision would be the right one either.

This situation was suicide for anyone else, but it might not be the case for Jack. After all, his skills were so strong that it was shocking. Lourain even wondered if there was anyone who could beat Jack in the whole Whirling World if he was not outnumbered.

Jack was not an idiot either, so he would not put himself in any dangerous situations.

After thinking about it, Lourain still said in the end, "I know that you've always had your own ideas, and you won't move recklessly, but I still feel like I have to tell you this. The Toman Battlefield might have some difficult situations. After all, before you enter you won't know what's going to happen."

Lourain was vague with his words, but Jack understood.

Lourain was telling him that there were some problems that even he might not be able to get out of. After all, no matter how strong Jack was, he was still alone.

Working alone gave Jack a lot of freedom, but there were still limitations. For instance, if a group of demon kings suddenly appeared, even he might not be able to handle it!

Jack raised an eyebrow and let out a small laugh, “I know what you’re worried about. I’ve thought about it as well. Think about it, we already know that those warriors at the peak are definitely doing this for the sake of gathering more Heartblood. Then, they’ll definitely arrange for a lot of their men to join the Toman Battlefield...”

“They might even join themselves. I might not be able to fight against many opponents by myself, but I won’t be stupid enough to fight when I’m at a number’s disadvantage.”

There should not be any indiscriminate risks. Just like Jack said, if they want to gather Heartblood. then they’ll arrange for their men or themselves to join. Then, if anything dangerous happened, even they would not be able to escape.

The so-called indiscriminate risk was referring to those gigantic calamities that would suddenly happen.

He was referring to those sorts of happenings that would pull anyone within the area no matter who they were.

Jack was only worried about something like that happening. However, after thinking about it, he discarded the notion.

Since the news that was being spread was fake, and the Toman Battlefield had been opened so many times, then any changes would stem from those people. So, there was basically no risk of anything he could not handle happening.

As long as Jack was careful enough, he would be able to guarantee his own safety.

Lourain thought about it and nodded, "If you say that, I feel like joining too! Yet, I will probably just be cannon fodder if I join. I just really want to know what's going to happen inside."

Lourain might be curious, but he knew his limits. With his skills, he would definitely just be cannon fodder if he joined. After all, after signing up, he would be sent to the Toman Battlefield.

He would be sent into a space all by himself. Without Jack by his side, he would definitely die.

Jack looked at Lourain, "If you really want to join, it's not like it's impossible."

After saying that, Jack took out a badge from Mustard Seed and put it on the table. Lourain and Marth looked at each other curiously before they looked back at the badge.

Read No. 1 Supreme Warrior Chapter 3889

No. 1 Supreme Warrior Chapter 3889-They recognized the badge.

It was the reward Jack had gotten from the Seven Deaths Array.

The badge had led Jack to the Slaughter Hall and the Killing Hall. They should have followed the badge to the next place, but Jack had some considerations and did not go in the end.

Jack pointed at the badge and said, "After completing the Killing Hall, the badge gave me a piece of information. The information told me about some of the uses of the badge. If you want to come with me to the Toman Battlefield, you won't be sent to a random place with me around."

Lourain immediately straightened his body when Jack said that.

His eyes were so wide they almost popped out of their sockets. He could not believe that badge was this useful.

If he could be sent to the same location as Jack, then he should be safe as long as he was not reckless and if Jack was willing to protect him.

Jack's words seemed to imply that Jack was willing to protect him, and was even willing to have someone like him who would only drag Jack down along.

After thinking about that, Lourain could not help but be curious. Jack should not have a good impression of him.

Before this, he had not held back with his words at all and had even offended Jack. He should already be thankful that Jack was not doing anything to harm him, but Jack was even protecting him.

That exceeded Lourain's expectations!

However, those questions were not questions that he could ask. After all, it would be completely idiotic for him to speak up. Jack could clearly see what Lourain was thinking.

He smiled and said, "There are some things I want to verify. You'll be useful if you come with me."

Lourain raised an eyebrow.

Would he be useful?

What use could he be?

With his skills and his not-so-active mind, he would already be happy if he did not cause Jack any trouble.

What use could he possibly have?

Could Jack be planning on using him as cannon fodder if needed?

Thinking about that, Lourain shuddered and his expression stiffened.

Looking at Lourain's expression, it was obvious to Jack what Lourain was thinking.

Jack laughed and continued to say, "Don't worry, I won't put you in danger. If I bring you in, I naturally have my own reasons. If you don't trust me, you can choose not to go in."

The choice was Lourain's. This time, Lourain found that he was in a difficult spot.

His lips twitched, and he felt incredibly conflicted. Even though he had not interacted with Jack for that long, Lourain knew a bit about how Jack was as a person.

Jack was not a shameless person who only cared about his own benefits. He had his principles and was not a petty person. He had a pretty good character. As long as Lourain made sure to act within his boundaries, there should not be any problems.

Marth looked over at Lourain, "If you don't trust Jack, then just don't go in. You just want to enter because of your own curiosity anyway. I think you should just forget about it with your skills."

Compared to Lourain, Marth was much more careful. Even though he was very curious about everything as well, he would not put his own life on the line.

Lourain's lips twitched. He almost shot back at Marth, but there was no point in arguing at that moment.

After being silent for a few moments, Lourain finally nodded, "I naturally trust you, it's just that I hadn't made up my mind yet just now. After all, it'll be dangerous there. My skills definitely won't amount to much! However, I've made my decision,

I'll definitely go in.."

The first-level city was the same as the second-level city of Violet City.

It had a name, but it should only have been known to warriors who entered the first-level city. Yet, thanks to the Toman Battlefield, the first-level city's name was already known by all

Read No. 1 Supreme Warrior Chapter 3890

No. 1 Supreme Warrior Chapter 3890-The name of the city was very simple. It was called Darnia City.

Darnia City was right at the center of the Whirling World. The place was filled with true energy. After entering Darnia City, he's sight would be partially blocked by the true energy's mist.

Darnia City was surrounded by a few inns as well. However, they were far different from the inns in Violet City. There were far fewer people there. After all, very few people could even enter Darnia City.

At that moment, in the largest inn, two handsome men sat in front of each other.

The inn was already completely reserved by two of them. Other than their own men, there were no outsiders there. Unless it was a warrior like Jack who did not care much about gossip, anyone who saw the two of them would know who they were.

That was because the two of them were just too famous. They were constantly talked about. They were two warriors who could stand in the top five of the whole Whirling World.

The man in white robes was Seymour Flint. Meanwhile, the man in front of him in violet robes was Desmond Bane, who was his equal in name and ability.

The two of them knew each other quite well. Even though they were not in the same camp and not friends, they were working together for mutual benefit.

The two of them chatted as they drank tea. Seymour's voice said calmly, "Is everything ready?"

Desmond nodded, "Everything is going according to plan. Whether or not we succeed will all be on this. Even if we fail to make it, we should be quite close."

Seymour nodded, saying with some worry, "Even though we've never really bothered with these ants, enough ants gathered around will still threaten our lives. The moment this thing is exposed, there's no way they won't do anything about it. They might even start fighting back and cause us trouble."

Desmond coughed and said with disdain, "They would dare fight back? Who gave them the guts to do that? However, what if they do? Are they going to rush into Darnia City? They're all just complete trash anyway..."

“They can’t even get into Darnia City. No matter how much noise they make, they’ll be at Violet City at most. On top of that, they won’t be able to do much in the first place. After all, no matter what city they’re from, restricted areas take up most of the space. There’s not much time until the Whirling World closes too. At the worst, we’ll just make sure our men stay in the restricted areas. Then, they won’t be able to do anything even if they try.”

Seymour nodded, that was the best arrangement. Even if people wanted to fight back, they would not be able to do anything in the restricted areas.

After all, the moment they attacked, they would be going against the rules of the Whirling World. No matter what reasons they had or who they were, anyone who did that would be turned to ash. Even the two of them would not dare to challenge the rules of the Whirling World.

Desmond sneered, “The worst they can do is just curse and shout. They’d just be like shrews at the market. They’d just be annoyances at most. Of course, we won’t be able to hear them anyway.”

“They wouldn’t even dare to bring up our names. I’ll make sure people keep watch. If anyone challenges our honor, we’ll make sure they regret even being alive.”

If their conversation was heard by anyone else, it would definitely incite a lot of anger.

Sure enough, just like the regular warriors said, the other warriors were nothing in the eyes of those who stood at the top. They clearly killed so many innocent people with their vile methods, but they did not even allow anyone to curse at them.

The moment anyone challenged their honor, they would be targeted until they die! Seymour whirled his cup of tea, and the fragrance of the tea rose. Seymour’s expression was calm the whole time.

No matter how serious the matter they spoke of was, he never showed much emotion.

It was as if Seymour would not even frown if the sky was falling.

Desmond was already used to Seymour acting like that. After all, the two of them already knew each other in the past.
