

No.1 Supreme Warrior by Moneto

Chapter 4105

Carville took a deep breath before he said, "I surrender! You won!"

After he said that, he clutched his step and slowly walked down the stage with great difficulty.

The other participants started to get excited when they saw how Carville seemed to have been humbled.

After Carville won the last battle, he acted so excited as he frantically humiliated and insulted all of them. Every word that came out of his mouth was so nasty. Yet, he had gotten a bucket of cold water poured all over him as he walked down the arena with a miserable expression.

They finally had the chance to raise their voices and all of them started to shout, "Carville! I guess you finally know your place! Winning and losing is something that happens regularly!"

"You're skilled, but there are so many more out there that are stronger than you. You're just like a dog that's just good at frantically barking!"

"Go ahead and show off now! You can continue showing off if you want to! Why did you stop? I guess you can't anymore, huh?! You called us all trash, but you're nothing!"

Curses and insults were constantly being hurled at Carville.

Based on Carville's personality, he would have shouted back even after he lost. There was no way he would have just stomached all of it, yet he remained silent at that moment and allowed everyone else to curse at him.

The others were saying that he could not show off anymore, and Carville admitted that it was definitely the case. He admitted that he had lost as well.

In front of Jack, he was less than trash!

He was so glad that he was a recipient at the time, and not a challenger.

No matter how angry Jack was, he could not kill Carville.

Everyone cursed at him for a long time but was surprised to notice that Carville seemed to have suddenly gone mute. No matter what everyone else said, he acted like he could not hear a thing. He did not show much emotion as he walked down with a cold look on his face.

"What happened to him? Why did his personality suddenly change? Did he lose so fast that he's just too stunned right now?" Someone asked curiously.

"Who knows?! I feel like he's acting so strangely right now. Something must have happened just now."

Only Lourain was not confused among the spectators. He was certain that what Carville said earlier had definitely been planned by Jack.

Winning the challenge meant that Jack got five points.

Jack had a total of thirty-two points at that moment. After a challenger won, they would have two choices.

One was to assume the place of the recipient and continue standing in the arena.

If they held on for a whole day, then they would get four points after it ended, gaining a total of nine points. The other choice was to walk off the arena, continuing their place as a challenger.

If he continued to be a challenger, then he would only be able to challenge each arena once. It meant that Jack could challenge seven different arenas.

Normally, challengers who won would not continue challenging any other arenas unless they were very confident in themselves. After the challenge, no one said anything when they saw Jack walking off the stage, feeling like it was only natural. After all, there were very few who were willing to step into the arena to be a recipient.