"What's going on out there? What's going on?" Charlotte turned to Eugene and asked, "Why are so many people coming in and out? What the hell are they doing? Usually, they don't even allow unregistered vehicles to come in."

Eugene said coldly, "You don't need to know that."

"You!" Charlotte pointed her index finger at him, shaking with anger, "Eugene, so you think I'm not a big deal, just because you have Otis behind you? I'll call my father right now! I'm going to call my dad right now and you will lose your job, huh?"

Charlotte made a gesture to take out her phone.

In fact, she only threatened Eugene. She did not dare to really call General Ralph. She was very afraid of General Ralph, and she rarely talked to him. She would simply avoid him, and would never ask General Ralph to get rid of Eugene.

Eugene didn't buy that either.

He glared provocatively at Charlotte, "Go ahead then. Make the call now."

Charlotte's fingers were shaking with anger as she scrolled the screen, only to find that the phone had no signal at all.

She opened her eyes wide, looked carefully, and shook the phone again, but still, she got no signal.

How was it possible? The military had its own signal towers with enhanced signal, and it was simply impossible to receive no signal unless something big had happened!

Otis used to deal with military courts and he knew a lot about crime traces. And it was also because of this that he was in charge of Ricky's case back then.

Only after that could they get a handle on Charlotte.

Now, what happened at the Heath residence was simply obvious in his eyes.

Charlotte's back hit the cold tiles and her bones hurt. She was afraid of Otis's stern temperament, stammering and cowering, "Mom slipped in the ... in the bathroom. I ... I heard it and rushed over and saw the back of her head hit the steps in front of the bathtub... Blood ... A lot of blood flowed out, and I was terrified and tried to help her stop the bleeding ..."

She kept rubbing her hands to ease her tension.

"Bullshit!" Otis didn't think twice before raising his hand and slapping Charlotte across her face.

A crisp "pop" sounded.

Charlotte instantly felt dizzy from the beating and her hair was even more disheveled than before.

Her head tilted to the side and a heavy taste of blood came out of her mouth.

Besides, he had never believed her. He knew all the crap she had done in the past, and he despised her from the bottom of his heart.

When Charlotte saw Otis' indifference, she boldly tugged him forward, "How is Mom now? How is she?"

In fact, this was what she was most concerned about.

Even though she loved Cecelia and considered her as her own mother.

At this moment, she was not willing to give up the power and wealth she already had.

She ruthlessly wished that Cecelia would just die!

Ruthlessness and sinisterness crossed the bottom of her eyes, and now she could only think of her own benefits. As long as Cecelia was dead, what she did, perhaps, could remain a secret.

Otis was keenly aware that something was wrong.

Charlotte's eyes were not right.

"What? Do you want her to be good, or not?" He sneered.

"I, I ..." Charlotte's eyes flickered, "Of course I want her to be okay! She's my mom. I ... really just accidentally, oooh ... I didn't think it would happen. If anything happened to her, I wouldn't want to live!"

Charlotte endured the death of Rodney, and now even Cecelia, who was the best to her, had been killed by her own hand.

She felt simply so vulnerable now, and her spirit had long been on the verge of a total collapse.

It felt that Otis' question had put on the last straw on her heart.

Her two hands seemed to be burned, and she kept rubbing them hard. Her face turned so pale and she felt that the room was filled with an atmosphere of fear and anxiety, as if the end of the world was near.

Otis took one step closer to Charlotte.

That powerful hostility and irascibility, like a huge mountain, was towering above Charlotte.

"Tell me. Who the hell are you?!" Otis bellowed.

His scarlet eyes were filled with bloodthirsty fire, and he decided to shock and intimidate Charlotte into revealing herself!

Eugene saw the eerie and horrific atmosphere inside the room and withdrew sagely, closing the door behind him.

He didn't want to know too many secrets. For him, it's just a matter of allegiance to Otis.

It turned out that the Miss Heath, whom he finally married after four years of deliberate efforts, was an impostor!

Was he not, for four years, sleeping with a nobody!?

Without the title of a Miss Heath, Charlotte was nothing!

A rubbish!

What could she even do to catch his eye? There were a lot of women who were more beautiful than she was. She looked superficially obedient, but in fact she was sinister and narrow-minded. She was literally good for nothing. Shooting, fighting, nothing! In the military she was simply nobody.

If she was on the street, she was no more than an ordinary woman.

She was not even better than a prostitute.

And he actually slept with this disgusting dirty woman for four years.

"Which Joyce?" asked Otis almost through clenched teeth.

Charlotte realized that she had said something she should not.

She shouldn't have mentioned Joyce's name.

She tried to muddle through, "What did you say? Did you hear me wrong? I didn't say ..."

Otis glared at her grimly.

He said, "You want to die, don't you? I heard you clearly. You said Joyce! Which Joyce do you mean?"

Charlotte shook her head repeatedly in fear. She must have been so out of her mind. Otis was in charge of Ricky's case that year, so he must have heard of Joyce, and she even said it directly.

However, since she had said it, she could not take it back. She had to just bite the bullet.

"Otis, I beg you not to ask more questions. Hurry up and think of a solution. For the sake of our future, for the sake of our glory and status."

Charlotte, impatient and awkward, prostrated herself at Otis's feet and held him tightly.

But now Otis had asked all the answers he wanted.

Otis ran through them in his mind, and indeed, everything could finally make sense to him and all the details were clear.

In his heart, his desire for Joyce was even stronger than ever. He was dying to take her for himself immediately. He even thought that he should have taken the opportunity to invade her last night and get everything done instead of waiting for her to wake up.

Joyce's submission was not at all important to him now

He just wanted to have her and treat her well. That's the woman who was worthy of him!

It turned out that Joyce was the real daughter of the Heath family!

No wonder Joyce was always so gentle, handsome and composed. She was exactly just like Cecelia and General Ralph.

"Ouch." Charlotte was in cold sweat from the pain.

Otis had almost crushed her shoulder blades. She didn't understand his words. What exactly did they mean?

What could he mean when he said there was no more the Heath family?

How could there be no more the Heath family?

Would Otis dare to rebel against them?

Her eyes narrowed almost to a straight line in pain as she struggled to crane her head to peer at his expression. It was a look of absolute authority, full of disdain, as if he were a king.

"You would not..." a few words escaped from Charlotte's throat.

Suddenly, she remembered that before Otis came back, she had seen from the window that there were many vehicles entering the gate, and many people coming in and out. It was clear that normally no one outside Military Staff House could get in at all.

Also, both her cell phone and landline phone had no signal.

Here, they were isolated from the world!

Her screams were getting more and more poignant.

Otis lifted his foot and kicked her directly in the stomach nonstop. There was nothing but anger in his bloodshot eyes.

His movements were extremely cruel and his purpose was clear - he wanted to kick her straight to the point of miscarriage.

She didn't deserve to have his child at all.

She was just trash.

Her mention of her pregnancy made him even angrier.

This damn woman! How dared she deceive him? How dared she take Joyce's place.

Charlotte rolled on the floor in pain as she held her stomach. Her stomach felt like it was being stabbed by a million burning knives, and the muscles on her cheeks had all been twisted.

The twinge of pain came like a tidal wave nonstop.

Her face turned from yellow to red to purple and then to white, and her forehead was covered with beads of sweat, and her whole body kept shaking.

Chapter 1110

A few moments later, Eugene came with a doctor and two other staff members to clean up the scene.

They carried Charlotte downstairs to the room designated by Otis, and the doctor checked Charlotte's condition.

He then reported to Otis, "Mr. Robertson, Mrs. Robertson's fetus could not be saved, so I gave her an induction and did a simple hemostasis. When she expels the fetus, I will give her further anti-inflammatory treatment to stop the bleeding. Just ..."

The doctor carefully watched Otis' face.

Otis lit a cigar and was puffing away. He seemed to be relaxed and enjoying the moment.

"Just what?" He asked carelessly.

His tone sounded as if what Charlotte lost was just a puddle of blood, not half related to him.

"It's just that Mrs. Robertson needs a surgery and has to go to the hospital. I can't do it. If I don't do it and leave it like this, it will cause uterine adhesions, blocked fallopian tubes, and subsequent uterine infections. In short, a lot of after-effects. The odds are she won't be able to get pregnant in the future." The doctor said in a whisper.

He didn't know what was going on, but it felt like the atmosphere wasn't right.

"Very well. That's all." Otis' lips curved up in a bloodthirsty, evil way.
